MR. H. LeBRUN HONOURED.

Presentation to the President of the Lacrosse Club.

The members of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club are not only first-class players, but have also a decidedly graceful and pleasant way of expressing their gratitude for services rendered in the promotion of the welfare of the organization. Everybody knows what an important relation Mr. H. LeBrun has always borne towards the club, and how greatly its success and the feeling of unanimity and concord that animates it, are due to his enthusiastic exertions and influence. Therefore the boys conceived the happy hit of expressing their gratitude by the presentation of the Gilderaleeve Cup, won by the club and held against all-comers till it had become, according to the conditions, their property. Accordingly, last Friday night, the club and their friends assembled at the St. James' Hotel, where they enjoyed a capital oyster supper.

Bivalves disposed of, Mr. W. A. Sanderson took the chair and the following address was read, amid warm manifestations of applause:

To Mr. H. LeBrun, President of Peterborough Lacrosse Club:

DEAR SIR,—During the four years you have filled, in so satisfactory and successful a manner, the position of President of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club, we, the members, have seen with pleasure the daily repeated evidences of your interest, not only in the noble sport itself; not only in the success of the club as a whole; but also in the success and progress of each individual member.

We now wish, dear Sir, to express, as far as words can do, our fullest recognition of the important part you have played in making this club the first in the Midland district. Your exertions have been untiring; your active example has developed in the club an enthusiasm and love for the sport, that chiefly accounts for our successful career. You have always stood by us; you have spared neither personal effort nor your purse to promote the success of our endeavours, and we regard with pride the Gilderaleeve Cup, as a permanent evidence of our success at the game of Lacrosse.

Remembering, then, that to your active exertions, your constant courtesy and kindness, your enthusiastic example and open-handed liberality, our tenure of this trophy of victory is largely due, we beg your personal acceptance of this cup, as the most agreeable token our gratitude can suggest, of our thanks for all your kindness, and of our recognition of your valued services as President of the club.

May you live long to retain the respect of your fellow-citizens you now enjoy, and the health which an active life and clear conscience give. As for ourselves, you have always had, and always will have, our respect and esteem; and your name in lacrosse circles in Peterborough will ever be "Familiar in our mouths as household words,

And in our flowing cups freshly remembered."

Signed on behalf of the club,

W. A. Sanderson,	M. McDonnell,
J. Hackett,	G. H. Giroux,
R. H. Fortye,	M. H. Halpin,
Jas. J. Sheehy,	Harry Phelan,
M. Tierney,	Jos. Giroux,
Wm. Rudkins,	C. Rutherford,

W. J. Morrow.

The cup was won by the Kingston lacrosse club in 1878, and wrested from them in 1880 by the Peterborough club, and held by them. Mr. LeBrun made a neat speech in response to the address, and said the mark of esteem of which he had been the recipient, decided him in sticking to the club till it was the champion club of Ontario. Then followed a long list of toasts, speeches, songs and general hilarity, which lasted considerably into the next morning. The occasion was one of great enjoyment, and Mr. LeBrun is exceedingly proud of the cup and the honor done him by the club.

THE DOMINION LICENSE ACT.

WELLAND LICENSE VICTUALERS REPUDIATE IT—THE CROOKS ACT COMMENDED.

WELLAND, Nov. 19.—A large and representative meeting of the Licensed Victuallers' Association of the county of Welland, convened at Kick's Hotel, Niagara Falls South, on Friday, the 16th inst. After routine business, Mr. T. F. Brown, of Welland, who has been President of the Association since 1878, was unanimously re-elected President.

The Dominion License Act was taken section by section, and thoroughly discussed, when the following resolution was unanimously adopted, on motion of Mr. C. Davis, seconded by Mr. T. Roach:—"That whereas the Dominion Liquor License Act, on account of the indefiniteness of its clauses and the many restrictions of its sections, hampers the respectable dealer engaged in legitimate trade, and tends to promote loss of property by promoting litigation, without any corresponding benefit accruing to the temperance people; it is therefore resolved, that the Welland Licensed Victuallers' Association entirely ignore the Dominion Liquor License Act, and accept license under the Provincial or Crooks Act, as best calculated to give equal rights and privileges to all classes of the community."

NEW MIDLAND TIME TABLE.

ITS LOCAL SIGNIFICANCE SUMMARIZED.

The adoption of "standard" time has made it necessary for the Midland Railway to issue a new time table, which comes into effect on Monday. Nov. 26th, 1883. All trains are run on eastern standard time. The arrival and departure of trains, immediately affecting Peterborough, are as follows:

For Toronto, (Lindsay etc.,) the morning train will leave the Midland station at 7.25, a.m., and, going via Missing Link, will reach Toronto at 11.20 a.m.

Another train, for Toronto, etc., will leave here at 4.50 p.m., and arrive in Toronto at 8.45, p.m.

Trains will leave Toronto at 7 a.m., and arrive Peterborough at 11.05 a.m., and also leave Toronto at 4.30 p.m., and arrive in Peterborough at 8.30.

The Midland will make connections with the Grand Trunk east by a train that leaves Peterborough at 8.30 p.m., arriving at Port Hope at 9.55 p.m.

Connection is also made by the Grand Junction train that leaves Peterborough at 7.35 a.m., and connects with the G. T. R. east, arriving in Belleville at 10.35 a.m.

Another train for Belleville leaves at 5.05 p.m., reaching Belleville at 8.05 and connecting with the Grand Trunk east.

The trains from Belleville (and Madoc) arrive at Peterborough at 10.40 a.m., and 7.20 p.m.

Trains leave Peterborough for Lakefield at 11.10 a.m., and 8.40 p.m. One train arrives here from Lakefield at 7.10 a.m., making connection for Toronto, and one at 4.15 p.m., also connecting with Toronto.

Trains leave Port Hope at 6 a.m., and arrive in Peterborough at 7.25 a.m., and at 10.30 a.m., and arrive at Peterborough at 12.15 p.m.

A train leaves Peterborough at 7.30 a.m., connecting at Millbrook with a train for Lindsay, and arrives at Port Hope at 9.15 a.m., connecting with G. T. R. east.

A mixed train leaves for Toronto at 11.20 a.m., and also one arrives here at 2.30 p.m., from Toronto. This time table secures connections at all junctions, with trains for all other portions of the system. The table has been compiled so much in the interests of the public that it may prove more expensive than profitable to the Company.

TERRIBLE RAILWAY COLLISION.

In the accident on Friday afternoon on the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy railroad, near Ottawa, Illinois, the engine of the freight train completely telescoped the rear car of the passengers, few of whom escaped unhurt. The engine bedded itself in the car, the passengers being thrown forward, and then the boiler exploded, one piece being forced entirely through the car. The car was filled with steam and boiling water. The passengers were killed an terribly wounded in various ways some scalded to death by breathing hot steam, some crushed by the flying fragments of the boiler and others killed by being jammed in the terrible wreck. Many had their limbs crushed off and different parts of their bodies torn clean away. Inside the coach for six or eight feet from the head of the engine, iron was blown to atoms. Beside the engine the skin of several fingers was found with the nails hanging in them. The floor of the car, seats, and windows were smeared with blood. The freight train was, contrary to rules, running nearer than five minutes behind the passenger train, but had an order from the train despatcher to do so.

MANITOBA DISCONTENT.

The Tories scout the idea of there being any discontent in Manitoba, owing to the treatment received by the people from the Dominion Government. Yet the Manitoba Grievance Association held a meeting at Winnipeg a few days ago and appointed a sub-committee to draft a platform which demands, among other things, the removal of the monopoly provision of the Pacific railway charter, greater encouragements to settler by the opening up of the land reserves and the removal of the duty upon agricultural implements. Meetings in favor of the movement are to be held at Brandon and at other places. The farmers are very bitter against the excessive transportation rates. The association, however, declares that it is attached to the Canadian constitution and is simply indignant at certain acts of the Government.

MADOC.

A shocking tragedy has occurred about four miles from Madoc. On Monday a young lad 14 years of age, son of the late James Moore, was playing in his mother's house with a neighbors's shotgun when loaded. The boy put the end of the barrel in his mouth and began to blow, when a companion lighted a match and applied it to the nipple. The unfortunate boy's head was blown to pieces. The test applied to see if the gun was loaded, probably consisted in their minds in seeing if blowing in the tube could extinguish a match.

MILLBROOK.

Last Sunday evening, about eight o clock, as Mr. John Melville was returning to Millbrook from a visit to some of his friends in the country, he was surprised to meet a large black bear; it came in close proximity to him before he discovered what it was. Mr. Melville didn't waste any time in getting home; he seemed to lose all interest in bears.

ANOTHER CENTRAL PRISON BLAZE.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS DAMAGE.

On Tuesday evening, about five o'clock, the wood-ware shop of the Central Prison, a building 200 feet long, leased to Brandon & Co., was completely gutted by fire.

The premises were well filled with wooden ware of different kinds in various stages of completion. The origin of the fire could not be traced to any definite source. The men left off work at five o'clock exactly, when everything was apparently all right. The night guards commence duties at 5.30, and when one of them reached the yard he noticed the fire just breaking out. The walls of the shop was left standing, but the interior was as thoroughly gutted as possible. At the east end of the shop were the boiler and engine; the fire was first noticed in this end.

The exact amount of the loss and insurance has not yet been ascertained. The building was of course owned by the Government. Also the boiler and engine, the shafting and a portion of the machinery. The Government's hazardous risks—that is all the workshops at the central prison and at the reformatory for boys at Penetanguishene—are divided among the Hartford, Phœnix, Ætna, Royal Canadian and Sovereign companies. The Government has probably $10,000 on this particular building, which will about cover the loss. The entire loss, including that of Brandon & Co., will not exceed $15,000.

WHAT INTEMPERANCE DOES.

Intemperance cuts down youth in its strength, and age in its weakness.

It breaks the father's heart, bereaves the doting mother, extinguishes natural affections, erases conjugal love, blots out filial attachments, blights parental hope, and brings down mourning age in sorrow to the grave.

It produces weakness, not strength; sickness, not health; death, not life.

It makes wives widows; children orphans; fathers fiends, and all of them paupers, beggars.

It feeds rheumatism, nurses gout, welcomes epidemics, invites cholera, imports pestilence and embraces consumption.

It covers the land with idleness, misery and crime.

It fills your jails, supplies your almshouses, and demands your asylums.

It crowds your penitentiaries and furnishes victims to your scaffold.

It is the life blood of the gambler, the element of the burglar, the prop of the highwayman, and the support of the midnight incendiary.

It countenances the liar, respects the thief, esteems the blasphemer.

It violates obligations, reverences fraud and honors infamy.

It defames benevolence, hates love, scorns virtue and slanders innocence.

It incites the father to butcher his offspring, helps the husband to butcher his wife, and the child to grind the parricidal axe.

It burns up men, consumes woman, detests life, curses God, and despises heaven.

It degrades the citizen, debases the legislator, dishonors statesmen, and disarms the patriot.

It brings shame, not honor; terror, not safety; despair, not hope; misery, not happiness; and with the malevolence of a fiend, it calmly surveys its frightful desolation, and unsatisfied with its havoc, it poisons fidelity, kills peace, ruins morals, blights confidence, slays reputation, and whips out national honor; then curses the world and laughs at its ruin.

Standard Time.

"Standard time," two words that have probably been used oftener during the past week on the continent of America, than any two in the English language, owe their popularity to Mr. Sanford Fleming, a gentleman well known in town, and who showed his good taste by having selected his wife from amongst the ladies of Peterborough. To him belongs the credit of having brought the matter to public notice, and having urged it to adoption. His original scheme was to divide the whole world into fifteen degree-time belts, and he now has the satisfaction of seeing the matter settled for the continent of America, with a fair prospect of its becoming universal. The scheme consists in having a common standard of time for every fifteen degrees of longitude. The belt in which Peterborough is situated, extends from the longitude of Quebec to that of Sault Ste. Marie. All railway trains in this belt will be run by this time, and it is probable that all other time will conform to the standard, for in this age all business and much pleasure is more or less connected with railways. The clocks in the eastern portion of the belt had to be put back, and in the western they had to be put forward. The clocks on the Midland railway system were put forward on Sunday at noon seventeen minutes and a half—thirty-four seconds to be exact—and all other clocks and watches in town have been made to correspond. The town clock was put forward to standard time, but with its original ideas of time keeping, there is no telling how long it will be in unison with railroad time—Sanford Fleming didn't allow for pigeons. Accordingly the Midland Railway has issued a new standard time table, which comes into effect on Monday, Nov. 26th. Mr. Fleming's scheme in its entirety included the numbering of the hours of the day from one to twenty-four, which change would do away with the a.m. and p.m. Chinese puzzle feature of railway time cards, and cause "doors open at 19.30, curtain to rise at 20 o'clock."

The Sarnia Observer speaks thus of the "true inwardness" of the Dakota car that has been travelling throughout the Dominion:—"We paid a visit to a special car containing samples of the agricultural and mineral products of Dakota, which stood on a siding at the G.T.R. depot here, last Tuesday, and—horror of horrors—we found it in charge of an ex-Canadian Tory, one who fought, bought and bled—financially—for Sir John and the N.P. We will not harrow the feelings of his fellow 'patriots,' in this vicinity by repeating his glowing descriptions of the superiority of Dakota over all other parts of the American continent, and especially over Canada. He says, however, the N.P. and Sir John's able land policy are of great benefit—to Dakota—the larger part of the population of this territory being from Canada."

Dear Sirs,—For over twenty years I have suffered greatly from Nasal Catarrh; sometimes being unable to smell or taste properly. The disease caused a severe pain over the eyes, and frequently stopped my writing on account of dizziness, The phlegm of my throat gave me much annoyance, especially in company, balls of which would occasionally fall down into my throat, and I could seldom breathe through my nose. I have taken quarts of various medicines without any apparent benefit, until I was induced, by your agent of 69 Muter street, to try your Fountain of Health. After using five bottles I am prepared to give it as my honest opinion that for the cure of Catarrh it is a grand success. I have recommended it to many of my friends, one of whom encloses his testimonial with mine. Wishing you deserved success, I am gratefully yours, JOSEPH BROWN, Bookkeeper, 52, Sherborne street, Toronto. 47-2t

Mr. Beaucamp, the member for the county of Two Mountains in the Local House, has been unseated, and an attempt will be made to disqualify him as well.

The Marine Department has decided not to replace the Colchester lightship this season, owing to the rough weather that prevails and the near close of navigation.

It is intimated that the Hundson Bay Company will present a claim to the Dominion Government for losses sustained by the company during the Ried rebellion.

Geo. Stephens, President of the C. P. R., has given the authorities of the Montreal General Hospital $50,000 securities for the erection of a wing in memory of the late Dr. Campbell.

It is rumored in Ottawa that Hon. John O'Connor will be appointed to the codification of Dominion Laws Commission, in place of Hon. Mr. Cockburn, deceased.

Robt. Waite, one of the oldest residents of Monto, died suddenly at supper on Tuesday night. A few hours previously he had fallen into a stream and was thoroughly drenched.

Brantford is now putting in a claim for connection with the Credit Valley railway. They want a line to run direct from that city to Guelph, to tap the Credit Valley main line about half way.

A Hamilton schoolmaster was charged at the Police Court with unmercifully beating a twelve year old boy. The magistrate dismissed the case, saying that he did perfectly right.

Three gentlemen are spoken of in connection with the presidency of the Dominion Rifle Association. viz., the Minister of Militia, the speaker of the House of Commons, and Major-General Lawrie.

On the arrival of the 11 o'clock train at Fergus on Saturday morning Wm. Warren, who lives five miles from Carthage P.O., was found bleeding at the lungs. He was lifted to the waiting room and died in a few minutes.

Rev. W. H. Collins of York, Eng., has called President Mills, of the Agricultural College to inter the remains of the former's son, who died suddenly in Guelph on Thursday. The funeral took place Friday afternoon.

Wm. Dawlor, one of the most noted safe crackers in the country, was arrested at Hamilton at three o'clock on Thursday morning for participation in the Darling jewellery robbery at Simcoe. He was taken to Simcoe.

Friday morning John Marshall, a farmer of Victoria, Norfolk Co., was starting for a load of wood when his team ran away, dragging him a few yards, the wagon running over him and killing him almost instantly.

The statement in the press that the people of Richmond Hill had burned out the Liberal printing office in that village has been traced to a printer in the Toronto Telegram named Amos, who at one time lived in the village. It seems he manufactured the whole yarn.

John Airhart, 21 years of age, was severely injured Friday night in the Midland yard at Belleville by falling from the tender of an engine on the track. He sustained a compound comminuted fracture of the right leg and the left is also bruised and otherwise injured.

The case of Hodge vs. the Queen, the Toronto License appeal case, was argued before the Privy Council by the counsel for the appellants on Wednesday and Thursday, and by the counsel for the respondent to-day. Judgment was reserved, but it is expected to be delivered at an early date.

On Nov. 14 Mr. Fuller, of Hamilton, passed an entry through the customs of another brother of Mary Anne of St. L., sold to Mr. J. H. Guest of Cincinnati, O., at $3,000, and Saturday he shipped to Mr. T. S. Cooper, of Coopersburgh, Pa., who acted as judge of Jerseys at Toronto exhibition, three cows and two heifers at at $8,750, all related to Mary Anne of St. L.

At a meeting of leading merchants in the leather trade held on Friday in Montreal it was unanimously resolved that the long term of credit hitherto prevailing should be materially reduced and inducements held out to purchasers to make cash transactions. A notarial agreement to that effect is to be signed by the leather merchants, with a penalty of five hundred dollars for its violation.

The number of deer that are being slaughtered in Frontenac county every season is surprising. Two are killed by hounds for every one that is captured by hunters. The people of the back country are thinking of making a move towards having hounding stopped and the season reduced. If this were done, in three years farmers could go into the bush close to their residences and shoot deer.

At a meeting of gentlemen interested in the Belleville and North Hastings railroad on Friday night a committee was appointed to confer with Mr. John Bell, solicitor, relative to the charter of the Midland railway, which has authority to build the road to Bancroft. The question of extending the line to Mattawan on the Ottawa to connect with the Canada Pacific and thence to Hudson's Bay was discussed.

A fearful story comes to us from the Hastings road to the effect that a woman whose husband had gone to the shanties to work a few nights ago, attempted to eat her youngest child. An elder child alarmed some neighbors in the night, but before they got to the house the mother had badly bitten the young one. The unfortunate woman was no doubt temporarily insane.

THE OLDEST WOMAN IN THE WORLD.

At Auberine-en-Royans, a village in the Dauphine, situated between Valence and Grenoble, France may be seen an old woman living iu a hut in a narrow street, who has reached the extraordinary age of 123 years. She has no infirmity except a slight deafness, being in full possession of her mental faculties.

According to her marriage certificate, she completed in January last her one hundredth year since marriage. She was a "cantiniere" under the first empire, and had two sons killed at the battles of Friedland and in Spain. She is supported entirely on the alms given her by visitors, who go from great distances to see her as an object of curiosity, and her neighbors help her to do her household work.

She lives almost exclusively on soup made with bread, to which is added a little wine, and sometimes a little brandy. Dr. Bonne, who practices in the neighborhood, states that she is never ill. Her skin is like parchment, but she is comparatively upright, and is of scrupulously clean habits.

A Fortunate Escape.

Mrs. Berkenshaw, 26 Pembroke St., Toronto, at one time was about to submit to a surgical operation for bad lameness of the knee joint, all other treatment having failed, when Hagyard's Yellow Oil was tried, and speedily cured her. 2t

The Greatest Healing Compound.

Is a preparation of carbolic acid, vaseline and cerate called McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. It will cure any sore, cut, burn or bruise when all other preparations fail. Call at J. McKee's Drug Store, and get a package. Twenty-five cents is all it costs. 47-2t

The Faith Cure.

One who tried the faith cure declares she was cured—"cured of her faith"—Burdock Blood Bitters cures by works, not by faith alone. It is the grand specific for all diseases of Liver, Kidneys and Blood, purifying, regulating and strengthening the vital fluids. 47-2t

House Plants.

Many a beautiful rose has been nipped in the bud by an undiscovered worm, and many a young life has been sacrificed to the destructive power of worms in the human system. If you would save those other tender house plants, "your children," give them Freeman's Worm Powders, they are safe and pleasant, and are warranted effectual. 47-2

McGregor's Speedy Cure.

From the many remarkable cures wrought by using McGregor's Speedy Cure for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and Affection of the Liver, and from the immense sale of it without any advertising, we have concluded to place it extensively on the market, so that those who suffer may have a perfect cure. Go to J. McKee's Drug Store and get a trial bottle free, or the regular size at fifty cents and one dollar. 47-2t

A Startling Discovery

Physicians are often startled by remarkable discoveries. The fact that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and all Throat and Lung diseases is daily curing patients that they had given up to die, is startling them to realize their sense of duty, and examine into the merits of this wonderful discovery result ing in hundreds of our best Physicians using it in their practice. Trial Bottle free at Taylor & McDonald's Drug store. Regular size $1.00.

These are Solid Facts.

The best blood purifier and system regulator ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity, truly is Electric Bitters. Inactivity of the Liver, Biliousness, Jaundice, Costipation, Weak Kidneys, or any disease of the urinary organs, or who ever requires an appetizer, tonic or mild stimulant, will always find Electric Bitters the best and only certain cure known. They act surely and quickly, every bottle guaranteed to give entire satisfaction or money refunded. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Taylor & McDonald.

Yes, Sir.

One can't expect to succeed in business or in pleasure either, for that matter, unless one feels all right in health and spirits. This is the first consideration. Now, its a small matter when this remedy, ZO-PE-RA, is recommended so highly, even guaranteed to renew one's energy and spirits by invigorating the Liver and aiding Digestion, by clearing the Brain, opening the pores of the skin, regulating the Bowels and system, to go to the drug store and get a single bottle of Zopera as a trial. It is a duty every one owes to himself. Try a bottle then. 41-4t

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them a name of their own, and not try to sell them on the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back. 2-tf

THE WIDOW WOULDN'T STAND CONDOLENCE.

John William Blank belonged to the Ancient and Modern and Highly Honorable Sons of Guns. If it wasn't that it was some other fraternal order which meets every Monday night and pays so much to the heirs of every member who happens to die.

John William happened to die the other month, and a committee was appointed to draft resolutions and present them to his wife in person. The first part of their duties was fulfilled to the entire satisfaction of the lodge, but the committee had some little trouble in finding Mrs. Blank. They traced her from one neighbour to another, and finally found her at her sister's, hat and shawl on and ready to go out.

"Resolutions of sympathy, eh? Well, read 'em."

The chairman of the committe proceeded to read that John William was a good husband and a kind father and a citizen of unr eproachable integrity, when the widow interrupted:

"Too much taffy! We used to have a fight every week, and as for his being a kind father, we never had any children. As for his integrity, he stole all the wood we burned last winter."

The chairman gulped down something and continued to read that John William was an upright brother, a man with a heart full of sympathy for the misfortunes of others, and that charity and forgiveness were the beacon fires which guided his footsteps.

"Fudge!" sneered the widow. "I washed for the money to pay his dues to the lodge, and all the sympathy any one got out of him wouldn't buy a cent's worth of court plaster! Forgiveness! Well, some of you ought to have sat down on his hat some time! He'd have revenge if it cost him a year in State Prison. Beacon fires is purty good, considerin' that we never had a decent stove in the house!"

"Madame, your husband has been called hence."

"Exactly; I was at the funeral and ought to know."

"He was cut down like a flower."

"Well, flowers ought to let whisky and saloons and plug tobacco and old sledge alone."

"And we trust that our loss is his gain."

"Well, if he's any better off I'm glad on't, but Kguess the gain is on your side. Now, that's all I want to hear. I can pick up a thousand better men than him with my eyes shut. I'm in a hurry to go down and see a woman who offers to sell a fur-lined circular for $15, and if you have any more highfalutin Shakespeare to get off my sister will take it in, and save it till I come back!"

AN AMATEUR ATHEIST.

"I am a Liberal, but I do not go so far as a Boston girl at nineteen whom I met when I was last lecturing through New England," said Father Ryan. "She was very beautiful. I was introduced to her at an evening company. She said:

"Father, your poems are my Bible.'

"'Child,' I said, 'Why do you not go to their source? I would never write another line if I thought it would fall as a veil over the sacred book.'

"'Oh, no, Father,' she said, 'I am an atheist. I don't believe in the Bible.'

"I looked at her. 'A real atheist,'

"'You must mean an amateur atheist,' I replied. 'Your mirror acquits you of general atheism.'

"'How so, Father?' she asked, in a piqued tone.

"'It shows you with every reflection the image of your Creator.'"

FRUITS OF PROTECTION.

A PUNGENT LETTER FROM AN AMERICAN MANUFACTURER.

There has been handed to The Globe for publication the following extract from a letter written by an American manufacturer last week to a friend in Toronto:—

"When your Macdonald Government came into power, and adopted a protective tariff, I knew it would be damaging to business. No doubt you ran along and made some money. Elated at that, we are afraid, you wrote that the Macdonald reign was a 'blessing' in stimulating trade and enhancing profits. To this I made no rejoinder, being satisfied that you would feel differently in a short time! What do you think of it now, old fellow

"The protection business completely ruins legitimate trade, induces unwholesome competition, induces over-production; then come bills payable, then stagnation, then stoppage of credit by the banks refusing further discounts, then comes disaster, then h—. How near have the results of protection been in accord with my prognostications of four or five years ago!

"With the silliness of the United States emphasized in the faces and eyes of Canada by failures, hard times, and an enlarged poorhouse in every town, which is the culmination of protection, how in thunder the sensible people of your country could have inaugurated a duplicate of our system is beyond my power of analysing.

"When a civilized community acts in opposition to the teachings of Adam Smith and all political economists, almost in contravention to the teachings of every college, every university, and every seat of learning, but one end is reached, and that is a failure."

FARM NOTES.

Many farmers who secure for themselves all the labor-saving improvements are slow in arranging similar helps for their wives. A reaper or mower is used at the most only a few days in the year. A creamer, to make butter-making easier, will be in use nearly or quite every day in the year, and the butter product will bring enough more to pay heavy interest on the first cost, besides the saving in labor.

One acre of good meadowgrass properly cured into hay will furnish food for a cow or steer during the five or six months of winter. It will be found that three or four acres are devoted to pasturing one cow or steer through the warm season. Every stock feeder knows that it takes more food to keep an animal in cold than in warm weather. This statement shows the great waste incident to pasturing and the value of the soiling system, where one acre of land may be easily made to feed as much stock as will four acres of pasture.

Herbs for medicinal purposes are not extensively cultivated in this country, but in England there is a large farm devoted entirely to the growing of herbs. Among the plants grown are roses, violets, lavender, peppermint and other perfumery kinds. Liquorice, chamomile, white-flowered poppy, lovage and other herbs used for colds and tonics receive attention, while the deadly nightshade, henbane and jimson weed also flourish. Here are grown the sweet and bitter, fragrant and fœtid, wholesome and deadly beautiful and repulsive, all upon the same soil.

The value of potatoes as an article of food for animals has been variously estimated, and opinions differ, hence it is difficult to give more than an approximate estimate. The following statement has been accepted by good authorities as coming somewhere near the truth: A bushel of potatoes, if judiciously fed to animals of good breed, will produce of beef from two to three pounds; mutton, four to five pounds; pork, four to five pounds; milk, 35 to 40 pounds, and butter two to two and a half pounds. Of course, these results are obtained only when the potatoes are fed in combination with other materials.

A Little Behind Hand.

Some people are always a little behind hand in all undertakings; delays are dangerous, and none more so than it neglecting what seems a trifling cold. Prudent people break up the ill effects by timely use of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, thus preventing serious lung troubles. 47-2t

Waterbrash Cured.

What Does it Mean?

What is meant by "Secretions" in a medical sense? "The secretions" are the powers of certain glands and organs of the body to hold and distribute the healthful fluids of the system, such as bile from the liver, etc. Burdock Blood Bitters regulates all the organs of the secretions to make pure blood. 47-2t

A Failure in Crops.

A species of worm is eating all the leaves from the chestnut and hickory nut trees in many sections, and the crop will be a failure. Worms that afflict children or adults will prove a failure if Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup is used. It is a safe and sure cure for all worms that lurk in the human system, tape worm included. 47-2t

I can't eat, Have a pain in my stomach after my meals. My dear sir, use Crowfoot Bitters.

Only One Package Cures Dyspepsia.

Only a dollar package of the Crowfoot Bitters cured me of Dyspepsia after all other remedies failed.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV. 22, 1883.

Mousseau the Chartermonger.

Hon. Mr. Mousseau the Premier of the Quebec Government, has received a scath-exposure in the columns of the Montreal Star. The citizens of Montreal, disgusted with the quality and high price of the light supplied by the Montreal Gas company, organized a citizens' gas company and applied to the Legislature at the last session for a charter. The former company, of course fought against the destruction of their monopoly, aided by a ring of speculators in their stock. Two of the latter it is alleged by the Star, approached the Quebec Cabinet, and by a lavish expenditure of bribery money, secured the delay of the proclamation of the charter of the new company—the delay, for the charter was so popular that the cabinet could not have influenced the House to reject it. Therefore, in consideration of a large sum Mr. Mousseau and his colleagues delayed the matter till the Light Committee of the Montreal Council, suspiciously friendly to the monopoly, had closed a contract with the old company for ten years' gas supply. Thus we see of the Star's charges are true, the head of the Tory party, Sir John's late colleague, and a member of the Queen's Privy Council, exercising his power in the most corrupt manner, and accepting a money bribe to secure the success of a gas monopoly in imposing a ten years' burden of oppressive prices and poor gas upon the citizens of Montreal. This is the gist of the charges made against Mr. Mousseau by Mr. Graham of the Montreal Star, and there is little doubt of their being true to the letter. An investigation is inevitable, for Sir John, before whom the matter has been laid, says that such charges cannot be allowed to hang over Mr. Mousseau's head. While Mr. Mousseau is the recognized head of the Tory party in Quebec, that party must share the disgrace and odium attached to his crooked and corrupt acts, only to be removed by the repudiation of Mr. Mousseau. From these revelations is dated the downfall of the present Tory Government of Quebec. A cabinet so sordid and corrupt as to sell its power and position for money is not fit to hold for one hour any place of trust. And Sir John was to make Mousseau a judge! a nice pair of shoulders his to hang the judicial ermine on! No wonder that Quebec under Tory rule is on the verge of financial ruin.

Provincial Rights.

The persistence of the struggle of Ontario to maintain her rights of self-government, and to retain the management of her own internal affairs, has been pronounced by her enemies as merely agitation for political purposes. But now that Manitoba is making a similar stand, the Tory journals will have to seek or concoct some other reason. The policy of encroachment on provincial rights with a view of strengthening the central power of the Confederation system, which the Ottawa Government have adopted, is becoming too practically, extensively and efficiently to be borne with patience. The people of Manitoba can sympathise now with the treatment Ontario has hitherto received at the hands of the Federal Government. There is a deep and widespread agitation of a most serious aspect in Manitoba, not for better terms, but for simple justice. The people feel and resent the treatment they have received. The Dominion Government has placed the country under the heel of a monstrous monopoly, the Pacific Syndicate. Land speculators have been granted immense privileges, while the bona fide settler has been discouraged, unjustly dealt with, treated as if he were seeking to become a bane instead of a boon to the country, and by a course of hard lines meted out to him, been driven from the country. At length the people are aroused, and are determined not only to resist further invasion of their rights, but to demand redress. Their claims, or rather, demands, summarized may be laid down as follows:

Provincial control of all public lands.

No further grants to political hangers-on, of mining lands, timber limits, or "colonization" tracts.

Legitimate and healthy railway competition in lieu of the arch monopoly of the Pacific Syndicate.

Abolition of the tax on agricultural implements.

These simple rights demanded, involve the future of the country. The position is a serious one. Not only is the land and general policy of the Tory Government discouraging to immigration and settlement, but it is positively driving hundreds of settlers into the United States. The Brandon Sun says it can mention at least a hundred heads of families who have left Manitoba for Dakota during the past four or five months.

The position is serious in this, that it is an issue between Manitoba and Confederation. But little cares the Government for the result. It has shown a disregard for the principles of Confederation, and the rights granted by it to the Provinces too flagrantly, to pause, from respect to Provincial rights, in a course that is directed to its own agrandizement and and confirmation of its power.

A Specimen Brick.

Political morality is by no means a quality essential in a Tory politician to secure the support of his party. Indeed, it seems that the "crookeder" his political record is, the more unscrupulous he shows himself to be, the more highly he is estimated. The widespread and systematic corruption involved in the Tory mode of conducting elections is villainous enough when conducted by a political bummer of the Shield brigade order, but that a respectable citizen who would aspire to seek the suffrages of the people, should soil his hands with such "dirty" work, shows that the system of bribery is a vital part of the policy of the party. Here is the sort of a man that was put up at one time as a candidate in West Middlesex. He was the chairman of the Tory election committee, and at the Johnston election trial, being put in the witness box, declared at the beginning of his evidence that he "used no money directly or indirectly." But a little colloquy that took place between Mr. Bethune and Mr. Richardson, the person alluded to, shows that Mr. Richardson, as well as Mr. Ross, of Lennox, has an infirmity of the hands that causes money to stick to them, not to be released until shaking hands with a purchasable elector, when, presto, the money clings to some other palm. Here it is:—

Mr. Bethune—Do you know Mr. Fitzpatrick?
Mr. Richardson—Yes.
Mr. Bethune—Did you give him any money?
Witness—No.
Mr. Bethune—Do you know his wife?
Witness—Yes.
Mr. Bethune—Did you give her any money?
Witness—Yes.
Mr. Bethune—How was it?
Witness—(Blushing violently.) Just while shaking hands with her. (Laughter.)
Mr. Bethune—Did you ask her about it?
Witness—No, I don't talk to the women.
Mr. Bethune—What was the money for?
Witness—To induce her husband to vote for Mr. Johnston.
Mr. Bethune—Now, sir, you told us a while ago that you did not handle a cent. Are you not ashamed of yourself?
Witness—I forgot about the $5.

And Mr. Richardson is held to be a respectable, honorable, and trustworthy man, so much so that he was a short time since urged upon the electors of Middlesex as a fit and proper person to represent the riding. "The trail of the serpent over them all."

The Ballot for Women.

A few days ago a deputation of ladies consisting of Mr. James Beatty, Mrs. McEwen and others, had an interview with the members of the Ontario Government in reference to female suffrage. Hon. Mr. Mowat pointed out to the callers the fact that women were authorized to vote on money by-laws, in school elections and in other matters, and they did not, to any great extent, avail themselves of the privilege. Mr. Mowat said such a radical change was not likely to be made until it was demanded. He called attention to the fact that he had introduced the first measure in reference to the rights of women to hold separate property; that he had extended the principle when he again returned to office, and that if he saw that women generally demanded the franchise, it was not at all probable that it would be withheld. But such a measure was of a revolutionary character, and should be based upon the wishes of those whose privileges it was intended to extend. He also expressed his personal pleasure at having received the visit, which would always be a pleasant memory. The justice of the demand for female suffrage is one thing and its expediency another. If women were granted the ballot to-morrow what proportion of them would avail themselves of the privilege? They do not now exercise the right of voting on money by-laws, at school elections, etc., which they now enjoy, to any extent, and it does not appear that a larger measure of voting privilege would receive a proportionate practical appreciation. If the ladies make a general demand for the ballot, by all means make a virtue of necessity, and give it them, for if they want it they will have it, but there is reason to suspect that the ballot, though so ardently desired will, like a new dress, when once secured, fail to meet their expectations; it don't "look half as nice as I thought it would before it was made up."

Editorial Notes.

Mr. G. W. Ross is again in the field as a candidate for re-election to the representation of West Middlesex in the House of Commons.

A British medical journal gives currency to the rumour that Dr. Grant, of Ottawa, who was the personal adviser of the Princess Louise during her residence in Canada, is to receive the honour of knighthood.

Bradstreet's reports that the failures in Canada last week numbered 32, as against 22 in the corresponding week of 1882—an increase of 10. When a protectionist policy was adopted by the people of Canada failures were to be no longer possible.

The coffee house project, after experiment, has proved a great success in Toronto. Two establishments have paid so handsomely that it is proposed to extend the system still further. Why would not a similar institution be remunerative here?

Postmaster-General Carling is at last waking up, not at all prematurely, however. He begins to see that the postal laws need revising, so as to prohibit the distribution, by Her Majesty's mails, of lottery circulars and tickets. It is understood that at the coming session of Parliament legislation with such an object in view will be enacted.

Messrs. D. W. Allison and M. W. Pruyn, Liberal and Conservative, respectively, have been nominated as candidates for the vacant Commons seat in Lennox, from which Sir John was evicted for gross bribery and corruption. Mr. Allison's chances of success are very promising, and he will be returned unless the presence of the notorious Boultbee in the riding, means his assumption of the role performed by Roe in the last Dominion election; the introduction of such an unknown quantity as Tory money, will complicate the problem.

The Tory journals assert that the Ontario Government's act of asserting Ontario's proprietory rights in the "disputed territory" was only an "election dodge." But the answer to such a charge consists in the fact that the election over, the Government is not relaxing a single effort to efficiently administer the affairs pertaining to the interests of this portion of Ontario. The principal form of "election dodges" practised by the Government is by consulting the interests of the people, by an honest and faithful administration of their affairs, and thereby winning their confidence an a support.

The manner in which the controverted election trials drag their slow length along, shows that the staff of judges is not adequate to the work required. Last Tuesday the hearing of the election appeals in the South Victoria, East Northumberland, Lennox, Welland, West York and Muskoka election cases, was to have been held, but the illness of Mr. Justice Morrison necessitated their postponement. There is not much doubt that Judge Morrison's illness was largely due to overwork, made compulsory by a deficient staff of judges. As matters are, it is probable that some members, who may not have a shadow of a right to do so, will take their seats in the Legislature.

Two hundred years ago, the British workman who could get 1 shilling a day thought he was doing well. Bread and clothing were as dear then as now, and the quality has improved. Since 1846, when free trade was adopted, wages have gone up from 30 to 120 per cent., and prices of necessities have gone down. In 1841 tea cost 5s. a pound, in 1881 it cost 2s. In 1841 coffee cost 2s., in 1881 it cost 1s. In 1841 sugar cost 9d., in 1881 it cost 3d. The 4 pound loaf, which cost 1s. under protection, costs from 6d. to 8d. under free trade. The workingman who can earn more money, and buy more goods for each dollar he earns, under free trade than under protection, is not going to exert himself for a return to the old system that was well nigh the death of him.

American citizens do not appear to take kindly to a seafaring life. In the U. S. Auditor's report, just published, consular reports are quoted as showing that American seamen are almost wholly disappearing. The consulate at Liverpool reports that 159 American ships arrived during the year, with crews numbering 3,088, of which 1,891 were subjects of foreign countries. The shipping commissioner at New York reported that of 6,947 seamen shipped during 1881 only 1,449 declared themselves American citizens, while the commissioner, judging from their names, speech and general appearance, thought that not one in five of these was American born. Similar statements were made by the shipping commissioners at Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston.

The reckless way in which the Conservative Government has managed public affairs in Quebec, resulting in bringing that Province to the verge of bankruptcy, is poor encouragement to the people of Ontario to hand over the reins of Government to the Conservatives. The Bleu cabinet of Quebec has acted in a manner so outrageously regardless of the interests of the province that the respectable members of the party have withdrawn their support. The result is that the flat has gone forth, that Mousseau must go, and the issue of the election in Levis last Friday is the last straw. The riding was considered to be so safe that the former member, a Tory, resigned to be appointed to an office. But the tide of public opinion has changed. Mr. Lemieux, a Liberal, has been returned by a majority of about eighty over Mr. Ray, Conservative, and this, too, in a constituency that has heretofore been good for a Tory majority of from three to four hundred. Hon. Mr. Mousseau does not need a Daniel to interpret the meaning of the handwriting on the wall in Levis.

Winter came upon us sharply and suddenly, and it finds many illy prepared for the unexpected change. The poor man, whose wardrobe cannot be over-stocked, is compelled to invest in warmer clothing. And the poor man generally invests in ready-made clothing, and the paternal Government of the Dominion helps the poor man in this wise: There is a tax on ready-made clothing of about 35 per cent. In 1882 ready-made clothing was imported to the value of $459,549, on which a duty of $16.000 was paid. Taking into consideration, therefore, the importer's profit, the poor man has to pay over $20 for a $15 suit. Of course this duty helps the Canadian manufacturer to put up his price and to realize large profits, and he grows rich at the expense of the poor man, by the help of the tariff. Of course, the manufacture of Canadian ready-made clothing gives employment at high wages, so, that if the poor man has to pay forty cents on every dollar for his clothing more than if the duty did not exist, he is helping some fellow-toiler. Yes, helping her in this way. The women and girls engaged in the business get the munificent wages of, on an average, 30 cents per day, and these wages, large as they are, have recently been reduced. Another instance of how protection makes the poor poorer and the rich richer.

The Tory party is so fond of bribing that it is not satisfied with a direct expenditure, but must needs "put up" jobs on Reform candidates who desire to carry elections honestly. Mr. G. W. Ross was unseated through the acts of one "Johnny" Barrie, who was trying to make money out of the election by betting on the result, and subsequent events tend to give strength to the suspicion that Barrie was acting in the interests of the Tory party when he professed to be working for Mr. Ross' return. Shortly after Mr. Barrie had, in June, got Mr. Ross into trouble, he went over, or rather returned, to the Tory party and was received with open arms as a good worker for the Ontario elections. Besides the betting game, Mr. Barrie in the witness box, furnished on oath the following record of bribery expenditure for the Tory candidate, the recently unseated Mr. Johnston: He gave Pettit $10, Benj. Fox's "old lady" $2, Wm. Cranston's wife $3, David Ramey $3, Burleigh Scram $5, Philip Mann, $5, Uriah Pearce $3, and he "could not remember the others." Under these circumstances it is not being unduly suspicious to assume that Mr. Barrie was in collusion with his Tory co-workers when he pretended to be working for Mr. Ross' election—only to commit some illegal act that would unseat a political opponent, who is a terror to Tory evil doers both in and out of the House of Commons.

A band of marauding Canadian half-breeds have been captured at Fort Buford by United States troops, and will be sent back to British soil.

The notorious "Bucket-shop" Flemming, so well known in Canada, has been arrested at Bismarck, Da., for using the mails for fraudulent purposes.

Frank Harrison and Charles Wilson, burglars, the former serving five years, and the latter four, escaped from Sing Sing prison by sawing the bars.

West Cleveland is suffering from an epidemic of diphtheria, supposed to be caused by noxious exhalations from offal used on a farm for manure.

Seven hundred unarmed Indians have been wantonly slaughtered by a column of Chilian troops under General Caceres, who made no effort to stop the massacre.

The Norton iron works, rolling mill, and nail mill, at Ashland, Ky., are burned. Loss unknown. Two hundred hands are thrown out of employment.

The Western Nail Association has ordered a general suspension of nail machines for five weeks, beginning December 22nd, if no improvement in trade is reported.

Woman suffrage has triumphed in Washington Territory, the measure accomplishing it having passed all stages except receiving the Governor's signature, which will be affixed forthwith.

Fannie Halburg, a beautiful young lady, was burned to death at Chattanooga, Tenn., owing to her clothes catching fire from a grate. Her mother tried to save her and was dangerously burned.

A month ago, in San Francisco, Ansella Dematties was married to a rich man by the command of her parents. On Thursday she invited a former lover to the house and took poison in his presence.

The American Catholic Bishops at Rome discussed the propriety of addressing a demand to the United States Government that the relations between Church and State be based on canon law.

In a suit to compel the Brush Electric Illuminating Company to remove their poles and wires from the streets of New York, Edison testified to the practicability of laying the wires underground.

A fire causing a loss of half a million of dollars occurred in the freight warehouse of the Norfolk and Western railway at Norfolk, Va. Seven thousand bales of cotton and fifty car loads of lumber were destroyed.

Many of the Cleveland iron works will make either a total or partial stoppage on the 1st of next month, ostensibly for repairs, but really on account of the lack of orders. Two companies at Milwaukee closed their works Thursday.

A meeting at the Mayor's office in Philadelphia raised $1,000 for the Shenandoah sufferers. The unexpended balance of $2,500, subscribed for the Western flood sufferers, will also be sent to Shenandoah.

Colonel Jerome Bonaparte, who is now in Baltimore, will in a few days take up his residence in Washington for the season. Twenty French servants have recently arrived from Paris for the Washington house, which is assessed at $33,000.

Puetz and McCullough, two young lads of Milwaukee, arrested for shooting car driver Grothe, when they attempted to steal his cash box, have confessed. The accused are boys addicted to dime-novel reading. The police have evidence of their work as highwaymen in other cases.

Lafayette Cook, who died mysteriously at South Auburn, Me., on Sunday night, was warned of death by a partridge which flew around him a number of times, sat on his shoulder, and pecked at his face. The bird remained with him half an hour, and then flew in the direction of the burying ground. Soon after Cook fell into a trance, when his death was foretold.

There was a large attendance at the session of the National Academy of Science at New Haven. Prof. Young outlined the success of the expedition to the Caroline Islands to observe the solar eclipse last May. Several other papers on scientific subjects were read by members.

Tamsen Walker, a white girl, eloped from Virginia with John Ash, colored, recently. Mr. Walker reclaimed his daughter and persuaded her to apply for a divorce. Ash has filed an answer to the petition, in which he claims the girl did most of the love-making and planning the elopement.

Wednesday morning the West Shore construction train at Savannah, N.C., was thrown from the track by a broken journal, and three box cars loaded with workmen, went down the embankment thirty feet. Thirty men were hurt. Several had legs and arms broken, and skulls fractured, and one man was horribly mutilated.

Harrison Thomas, a Florida negro, has been sentenced to work for life in a chain gang for the murder of Charles Belford. The men were married to sisters. Thomas has confessed that he killed his brother-in-law because he thought both women would live with him. He also confessed that when he was twelve years old he murdered his little brother during their mother's absence, and burned the body in the fire place, because the child bothered him. In 1871 Thomas outraged a mulatto, cut her throat, and buried the remains. In 1878 he killed a colored man, but was acquitted. In 1878 he chopped off a man's arm, but escaped punishment. The fiend will probably be lynched.

Choice lot of Mantle Cloths very cheap at Turnbull's. Cutting done on short notice.

Peterborough Markets.

PETERBOROUGH, Nov. 21, 1883.

There is not much doing in grain this week. Barley closes weaker, being lower in Oswego. Wheat is rather firmer, $1.06 to $1.09 being paid, and 95c. to $1.05 for fall. Goose wheat 85 to 89c. Peas 72 to 75c. Oats 37c., rather scarce. Rye 53 to 55c. On the market there is no particular change in prices. The quantity of keg butter offering is much smaller. Prices easier, 15 to 19c. being about the range; fresh in rolls 20 to 22c. Eggs 20 to 22c., few offering, prices being high people do with less. Dressed hogs $5 to $5.50. Poultry plentiful but all offering are sold at former prices.

BLACKVILLE, Oct, 4, 1883.

I write to tell you of the great and lasting benefits I have received from Dr. Wilson's Pulmonary Cherry Balsam. I had disease of the lungs for over two years. All the doctors I tried considered my case hopeless. A friend recommended your Balsam. When I began taking it I had violent coughing fits and strangulation from phlegm; my feet and limbs were swollen, and hectic fever had full possession of me. The Balsam relieved all these symptoms and made a complete cure of me. I am desirous of making my cure known. J. LAWSON.

Naught but Death Divorces;

OR,

LADY AUDREY'S SACRIFICE.

CHAPTER V.

"Mamma," said Audrey, "I do not know what you will say, but I have a secret. Mrs. Calverne wanted to write and tell you about it, but I begged of her to wait until I had seen you and told you myself."

It was a glorious evening, and Audrey had just returned home from her visit to River View, to the intense delight of both her parents, who had found the Rectory without Audrey very dull indeed.

There was nothing said during the drive from the station, but Mrs. Brooke, looking at her beautiful child, thought her much improved; there was a deeper light in the dark eyes, new loveliness on the fair young face. When Audrey went to change her dress, Mrs. Brooke, with something like a mist of tears in her eyes, turned to her husband.

"You see, Fabian, I was right. Our child has been away from us, in the very midst of the gay world we both dreaded, and she has come back to us as simple, as pure of heart, as innocent of soul as she was when she left."

Having said this, it was somewhat of a surprise to Mrs. Brooke when her daughter came to her with the frank and candid intelligence, "Mamma, I have a secret." Some girls would have hidden such a matter, would have waited until the lover himself came to tell the story—not so Audrey.

She could not keep a secret from her mother; she was so open, so candid, so transparent, that everything must be clear and above-board. She could not have lived in an atmosphere of secrecy, mystery or intrigue. Truth was as needful to her as fresh air; falsehood would have destroyed her as a pestilence would have done.

"I have a secret," she repeated—"a gentleman is coming to see you next week—and I love him very much."

"My dearest child!" cried Mrs. Brooke, half dismayed, half amused.

Audrey nodded her head with charming gravity.

"It is quite true, mamma. I do not wonder that you are surprised; I am astonished at myself. I have never thought about romance, and now it seems to me that I have never lived at all until I loved Roche; and if I lived a hundred years I should never love any one else."

"My dearest Audrey," cried the Rector's wife, "who is it? I cannot realize it! You were but a child when you left me."

"I know I was a child when he spoke to me first. While he was speaking to me a new soul, a woman's soul, seemed to come to me."

"But, my dear child, who is he?" asked the anxious lady.

"Sir Roche Villiers, of Rowan Abbey. I am sure you will like him, he is so handsome, clever and good."

"Sir Roche Villiers!" repeated the wondering lady as she rose from her couch. "Do you mean what you are saying, Audrey?"

One look at the sweet, pure face reassured her; there was no pride, no vanity, no self-satisfaction there. The fact that her lover was wealthy and a man of title did not seem to have occurred to her. She remembered only that she loved him.

Mrs. Brooke repeated the name.

"Sir Roche Villiers! Audrey, how has it come about? He must move in quite a different sphere of life from ours."

"I should imagine so, mamma; but I have given little heed to that. I have so much to tell you. My life is going to be like a fairy-tale; I am so happy—I love him so. When I am with him everything is quite different, so bright, so beautiful. I think no one else has ever loved any one so much. He is coming next week he says. I am almost afraid to tell you that he wants me to marry him very soon."

"My dear Audrey, is it possible that you are to be Lady Villiers of Rowan? I cannot believe it. I must tell your father at once."

Nor was Dr. Brooke one whit less surprised.

"Sir Roche Villiers?" he said. "The name is familar to me—I cannot tell why. But, my dear Audrey, this is a far more serious business than you seem to think it. The Villiers of Rowan are one of the wealthiest and most ancient families in England."

"Are they, papa?" she asked, in a voice of complete unconcern. "He is very good; every wish, every desire of my heart, every dream of my life will come true. I am to do as I like; I may build and teach and plan. I hardly dare think of it all."

"And you love him?" asked Dr. Brooke.

"Love him, papa?"—and the pure, fair face brightened with a wondering smile. "Why, my love is my life!"

Long after their daughter had retired to rest did the Rector and his wife sit up to discuss the unexpected news. The Doctor looked anxiously at his wife's face.

"What do you think about it, Isabel?" he asked. "A man like Sir Roche Villiers could marry the daughter of a peer; there need be no limit to his ambition. Audrey has no fortune worth speaking of, no influential connections; why should he choose her?"

"Perhaps he loves her," said the mother gently. "She is very fair and winsome; she has the great charm of purity and simplicity. Do not think I am foolish about my child, but I often fancy she is more like an angel than a mere mortal. Perhaps her sweet character has attracted him."

But Dr. Brooke was more worldly-wise than the gentle lady whom he called wife.

"I cannot help thinking," he said, "that there must be something we do not understand."

"Why should you say so? After all, there can never be any great difference between gentlemen; and there is no truer gentleman in England than you, Fabian. Sir Roche is marrying a clergyman's daughter; you cannot call it a mesalliance."

"Perhaps not; but there is a wide difference between my position and his. We shall see when he comes. My impression is that we shall find something in the background, some reason why Sir Roche has not sought a wife in his own sphere, but in ours."

On the next day, however, when Audrey talked of the Baronet, it was impossible to imagine anything wrong. Nothing could be clearer, more straightforward or to the purpose.

Sir Roche loved her, and wanted to make her is wife; he was coming to ask their consent.

He came, and at first sight both parents liked him; the proud, handsome face, with its lingering look of sadness—a face all noble and good—pleased them, though there was a trace of haughtiness about the firm lips and in the dark eyes.

They had no doubt, when they had seen him once with Audrey, that he loved her truly. Nothing could have been more manly, loyal, or straightforward than his offer of marriage to their daughter.

When Dr. Brooke said that she had no fortune, the Baronet smiled, and would not take the matter into consideration.

The settlements he had made upon her were magnificently liberal; nor would he make them less, even when the Doctor objected.

Such a prospect was surely never presented before to any simple country rector's daughter.

Sir Roche spoke of the Villiers diamonds, supposed to be some of the finest in England; he referred in his simplest way to his various estates, adding that Audrey could please herself in the choice of one for a residence; he talked of the cottages and schools that they were to build. He seemed to have but one purpose in life, and that was to make Audrey happy.

Later on Dr. Brooke said to his wife:

"I was mistaken; there is no drawback to the marriage, Isabel. I have made every inquiry; on all sides I hear the best possible account of Sir Roche. The only fault people find in him is his melancholy temperament and want of interest in life; that has disappeared since he knew Audrey."

"Why should there be any hesitation? A king might be proud to marry our daughter," rejoined gentle Mrs. Brooke.

"Still," declared the Rector, "I shall not be quite happy until I have spoken to him, and told him what is on my mind."

"Do not offend him, Fabian. Remember he is a proud man. What suspicion can you have? You do not believe that he has another wife living, do you?"

"No, that I do not; if he had, he would not dare to make his projected marriage with Audrey public. Certainly I do not think anything half so foolish."

"Do you suspect that there is insanity in the family?" asked Mrs. Brooke; and the Doctor laughed.

"Such news would be public property, Isabel, for the Villiers are as well known as the Howards or the Percies. I cannot tell what I fear; I only know that deep down in my heart is a dread of something—I know not what."

Dr. Brook did unburden his mind; he always remembered the day and the hour. The two lovers were together in the bay-window.

There was a look of perfect happiness on Audrey's beautiful face—a look which made her so bewitching that the Rector did not wonder that any man should lose his heart and head because of her.

He stood for a short time talking to them, listening to the sweet, sunny laughter, the bright words, the innocent, happy prattle, until his heart grew warm and his eyes moist.

Then he sent Audrey upon some trifling errand, and seated himself beside Sir Roche. Outside the blue sky had no cloud; the golden sunlight lay over flower and leaf; the white Ascension lilies gleamed in the golden haze.

Dr. Brooke turned suddenly to the handsome Baronet.

"Sir Roche," he said, "tell me why, when you could have chosen a wife from amongst the aristocracy of England, you preferred to marry my daughter?"

"You are right," he said; "I might have chosen from amongst the aristocracy of England, but amongst them I have seen none equal to your beautiful daughter Audrey."

"It is not an equal marriage in the eyes of the world," remarked the Rector. "Sometimes—pray pardon me for the thought—I have wondered whether you had any reason for choosing a wife quite unknown to the world."

For a moment the dark face flushed and an angry light came into the proud eyes.

"I lay all I have in the world at your daughter's feet," answered Sir Roche—"my wealth, my rank, my love, my heart, my life. I pray her in the face of the whole world to be my wife. What can I do more?"

"Nothing," said Dr. Brooke. "I am ashamed of my question."

Thereupon the two gentlemen shook hands; and that same evening the day for the wedding was fixed.

CHAPTER VI.

Every one agreed that it was one of the prettiest weddings that had ever been seen—the wedding of Sir Roche Villiers and Miss Brooke. It took place in the early autumn.

The Rector and his wife had both remonstrated about the shortness of the engagement, but Sir Roche had pleaded so hard that the let him have his way.

"I love Audrey," he said, "and she loves me. I have been lonely and miserable for years—why not let me be happy now that I have the chance?" Suppose we do wait as you wish, one, two, or three years; of what use will it be?"

So they consented to the marriage taking place very shortly, and Mrs. Calverne was invited.

The wedding was talked about for years in the country-side. The bridegroom was most munificent. He had ordered such festivities as people had not even dreamed of—a dinner for the poor, both old and young; he gave with a royal hand—clothes, money, all that was needed.

He made every heart light on his wedding-day. It was no wonder that the children cheered as they had never cheered before, and that the poor rose en masse to bless and to thank him.

Audrey's friends and relatives were all present, Mrs. Calverne looking perhaps a little paler and more anxious than the others; but—and they thought more of it afterward—it was a strange thing that no relative of Sir Roche's was there. He said to them half laughingly:

"I shall not shine in the way of aunts, uncles, and cousins on my wedding-day; I have so few relatives living—and even those few I do not know very well. I [illegible] Lord [illegible] Dr. Brooke for his w[illegible] because there seemed to be [illegible] about them. He [illegible] and it seemed to them that Sir Roche watched him continually lest he should say something indiscreet.

Lady Armond was the only other friend of his present, and she was serious, not to say dull, and talked a great deal about woman's duty and women's rights. She tried to impress the beautiful young bride with a great idea of her own importance. Just as Audrey was about leaving, she went up to her.

"I have something to say to you, my dear," she whispered, very solemnly; "let me beg of you always to uphold your rights. A husband should not always have his own way."

Before leaving, the bridegroom won golden opinions from all. He made Dr. and Mrs. Brooke promise to spend Christmas at Rowan Abbey; he invited Mrs. Calverne to meet them; he promised the good Rector introductions that delighted him. It was altogether a wedding without a drawback; there was not one thing to mar the gladness of the day.

When Audrey bid her parents farewell, she laid her beautiful head on her mother's breast.

"Mamma," she said, "I have been a happy girl—now I am going to be a happy woman. How good Heaven has been to me!"

"I hope you will always be happy, my darling," returned the gentle mother.

"I have but one fear," said the girl, "and it is that I shall be too happy."

So the newly-made husband and wife drove away amidst the tears and smiles, prayers, good wishes, and cheers of all around them. Dr. Brooke watched the travelling-carriage until it was out of sight, and then he turned to his wife and Mrs. Calverne, who stood near.

"Still," he said, "I cannot realize it. Why should a wealthy and distinguished man have sought a bride from my humble roof?"

"Look at Audrey, and the question is answered," replied Mrs. Brooke.

He did not seem to have heard her, but continued:

"Even now I shall not feel quite satisfied until I have been to Rowan Abbey. I have a feeling that I cannot explain—a dread that something in the background will start up, and then I shall understand this marriage. Yet common sense asks, What could it be?"

Mrs. Calverne was looking anxiously at him; her comely face had grown pale, and her lips trembled slightly.

"I have known Sir Roche for many years," she said—"my husband knew him when he was a boy—and I have never heard one word against his truth, his loyalty, his honor, or his good name—not one word. All that I can say about him is that he is proud and very high-spirited, with what the world would call severe notions of propriety. If I had known anything against him, he would not have been a visitor at my house, neither should I have introduced him to your daughter."

The words were so calm and reasonable that the rector could not help being impressed by them.

"After all it is but a nervous fear," he said. "I have made inquiries myself, and have heard nothing but the highest praise of him. Perhaps he is a little stern and unbending; but that is not a fault in an age when most men are disposed to be weak. I have watched him, but I have seen nothing in him but what was most admirable."

Mrs. Brooke noticed then for the first time that Mrs. Calverne's hands were trembling, and that her face was pale.

"You have frightened Mrs. Calverne, Fabian," she said, half reproachfully; but the fair widow looked up suddenly.

"No, he has not. I am not responsible for the marriage, even if it should not turn out well. And yet I see nothing but happiness before Sir Roche and Audrey."

"There is nothing but happiness before them," said Mrs. Brooke. "Happiness is the natural reward of goodness, such as Audrey has ever shown. She has always been sweet, gentle, self-sacrificing, kind and true. Why should she not be happy?"

Of course it was all nonsense, nervous nonsense, which caused the rector to speak as he did; still the gentle heart of the mother beat somewhat with fear. She looked at the late white lilies which Audrey had loved so much, and the scene of years before, when Audrey had read the marriage service, came back to her. She smiled as she thought of it. So loving, so gentle, so wise and sweet—how could her child be aught but happy?

So the sun set on Audrey's wedding-day. The guests went home, the festivities ended, the children ceased their playing. Father and mother, kneeling together, prayed the Almighty to bless their beloved child.

It was sunset when Lady Villiers reached her new home. She was hardly prepared to find such a magnificent and picturesque pile of buildings.

"This is our home, Audrey," said Sir Roche. He clasped his arms round his young wife, and drew her to his heart.

She wondered to find his lips trembling with emotion, his eyes full of tears.

"Lay your hands in mine, sweet love," he said, "and let us pray Heaven together to bless our home."

It did not occur to Audrey, either then or afterward, that it was strange that there was no public welcome for her, that no cheering crowds of tenants and dependents awaited her, that no joy-bells sounded from the old gray towers of King's Wynne, that no servants were grouped in the hall to receive their new mistress when she stood in the magnificent entrance.

Her husband turned to her, and said, "Welcome home!" A gray-haired old butler then came forward and bowed to her. Sir Roche looked round hastily.

"Send Mrs. Grey here," he said to a footman at a little distance; and in a few minutes a comely woman wearing a black silk dress and a white low cap was bowing before the beautiful young bride.

"I wish you long life, health and happiness, my lady," said Mrs. Grey; but Audrey thought it strange that she should speak to her without looking at her.

"Mrs. Grey," requested Sir Roche, "will you show Lady Villiers to her apartments?" And Audrey followed with her maid.

"Your rooms, my lady, are in the eastern wing," said Mrs. Grey. "Sir Roche thought you would find them pleasant and warm."

Audrey looked with a smile into her comely face.

"The Abbey must be very old," she said. "Many a young wife has been brought here, I should suppose."

"Yes," returned the housekeeper, slowly. "You will see the picture-gallery tomorrow, my lady. Some fair faces hang on the walls."

"And they have all had these rooms?" said Audrey.

There was a moment's silence, and then Mrs. Grey answered:

"No, I think not. But Sir Roche says they are the prettiest rooms, my lady. That is why he wished you to have them."

"Have you been here long, Mrs. Grey?" asked Audrey.

"Over forty years, my lady. I was still-room maid when Sir Roche's mother, the late Lady Villiers, was brought home here a bride, and I have been here ever since."

"And now you see another Lady Villiers. I hope I shall be as good and as much loved as the last one."

She wondered why the comely face grew pale.

"There are burdens in every life, my lady," said Mrs. Grey.

After this Lady Villiers asked some questions about the servants, and heard, to her surprise, that they were all new ones, excepting the housekeeper and the butler. It struck her as being strange.

Then her attention was drawn to the magnificence through which they were passing—to the grand corridors, the handsome pictures, and white marble statues, the carpets of velvet pile, so soft that no step could be heard upon them.

The wealth, the grandeur, the beauty of everything around her, took her by surprise. Sir Roche had never spoken to her of the beauty of the Abbey, and when at length she stood in the superb suite of rooms that had been prepared for her, she grew grave and silent, she had not thought of being mistress of all this magnificence. She wondered why she had not been placed in the rooms that the other ladies of the house had used, and why every servant in the house was quite new. It seemed very strange.

CHAPTER VII.

Her exalted position did not affect the character of Lady Villiers. She was as simple, kind, sweet, and wise as she had been in the Rectory. Before long the servants almost worshipped her; all the friends and neighbors to whom Sir Roche introduced her were charmed and delighted with her; in a short space of time she became the queen of the county.

Sir Roche was delighted; she was so wise, yet so simple, so unconscious of her wonderful beauty, so humble and unassuming in the midst of her splendid surroundings, that he felt he had won a treasure of priceless worth. Yet even during the first few months of her married life many strange things struck Lady Villiers in her new home. The first was that one day, when Roche was speaking of the house, and he expressed a desire to go over it, she fancied he seemed unwilling. Suddenly, however, he added:

"If you would like it, Audrey, I will take you myself. It is a very large house, and you will be very tired, I am afraid."

"I am never tired when I am with you," she said, laughingly; and they went together.

First he took her to the ruined keep whence the Abbey derived its name; he showed the ivy-grown arch of what had once been one of the finest windows in England. Then they went over the modern portion of the Abbey; he showed her the state-rooms, the grand banqueting hall, used when kings and queens came that way, the ball-room, the state drawing room, the old library, the bed-room where kings and queens had slept, the picture-gallery where the beautiful Ladies Villiers hung upon the walls.

They lingered long there; Audrey was charmed with the delicate patrician faces, and Sir Roche had a history for every portrait.

"This is my mother," he said, standing before the picture of a fair-faced lady whose blue eyes were filled with light and love.

Audrey looked up with a smile.

"And my place will be next to hers," she said. Suddenly she cried, "Why, Roche, there has been a picture here!"

His face grew white as death, and then flushed hotly.

"No picture will ever hang there but yours," he said evasively, as he hurriedly turned away.

She looked again at the wall. Assuredly there had been a picture there; but her womanly tact told her not to speak to Sir Roche about it.

They went to the southern part of the Abbey, and there again Sir Roche hesitated. Audrey suddenly remembered what the housekeeper had said.

"Where are the rooms that were used until lately?" she asked. "I should like to see them."

They were large, lofty, bright rooms. She preferred them to her own.

"I should like these rooms," she said, "much better than my own."

But Sir Roche, generally so keenly alive to her least wish, now said nothing.

Several of the rooms were locked—the best of them, it seemed to her; and as she turned the handle of each Sir Roche's face grew paler.

"Lady Villiers returned from her long inspection with a sense of mystery hanging over her which puzzled her. She was so obedient to her husband from principle as well as from affection that, if he had expressed a wish that she should not enter the closed rooms in the south wing, she would never have entered them; but he had never expressed that wish.

One day when he was absent, the idea suddenly occurred to her that she would go over the south wing. She rang for Mrs. Grey, the expression of whose kindly, comely face changed when she heard her ladyship's request.

"Fetch the keys, Mrs. Grey," she said; "I want to go through the rooms in the southern wing."

In vain Mrs. Grey made one excuse after another. Audrey smiled; she intended to be obeyed.

"Sir Roche did say, my lady, that he hoped those rooms would never be unlocked," she said at last.

"Sir Roche never expressed such a wish to me," Lady Villiers replied, laughingly. "You will make me think that the rooms are like Bluebeard's closet;" and she wondered again why the housekeeper looked as though someone had struck her a sudden blow.

In a few minutes more they were standing before the doors of the closed rooms. Mrs. Grey unlocked them unwillingly.

The Dublin Freeman's Journal publishes a letter signed by Dr. Redmond, priest of the diocese of Westminster, denouncing Errington's mission to Rome as being in the interest of the landlords and the English Government. He declares that the Irish clergy and laity have a right to fight their own political battle, and that the Curia must stand aside. If it decides adversely to the Irish people it may deal a mortal blow to the Church.

About Us All.

Constipation makes half the people sick. You are dizzy, have bad breath and taste, can't eat, can't sleep well, head aches, nervous, irritable. Can't work it off, can't rest it off. Well your Liver must be invigorated. Your food must digest properly. Now save a doctor's bill with a bottle of ZO-PE-SA. You will be surprised with a few doses. ZOPESA is a positive cure for these troubles, because it acts upon the Stomach and Liver and through the Liver the system and Bowels must be regulated. Ask for a sample. 41-4t

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price in a sealed envelope, on 6c. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

A Bankrupt Stock.

According to the Kingston Whig Mr. Wm. J. Hall, of this town, purchased the stock of dry goods, valued at $32,000, belonging to the estate of Wallace Ross, of Picton, Ont. The goods were sold by the sheriff.

Husband Missing.

In compliance with the request of the Lindsay Post, we give publicity to the following:—"Any information of Andrew Paterson, of Coldwater, who is supposed to have left Orillia by early northern train on the 28th September, will be thankfully received by his sorrowing wife and relatives. All papers please copy."

Traffic Returns.

The traffic of the Midland Railway of Canada for the week ending Nov. 10th, 1882, was as follows:—Passengers and mails, $7,034.30; freight, $19,910.65; total, $26,944.95, as compared with $24,692.70 for the corresponding week of 1882, being an increase of $2,252.25; and the aggregate traffic to date is $971,417.29, being an increase of $33,518.73 over 1882.

The Difference.

The Lindsay Post says that the Salvation Army is to make a raid on Peterborough, and will corral the penitents in the brick works on George street. This may be so, but a similar proceeding was found altogether impracticable in our sister town. Lindsay reprobates wouldn't quit committing sin long enough to be got to a brick works or any other building; the Salvation Army shooters had to wing them in the very act—on the fly, as it were.

Effects of the Cold Snap.

Last Saturday morning the Police Court showed the effects of the cold snap. After several dies non at the local dispensary of summary justice, five drunks stood arraigned on Saturday morning. The opinion seemed to have prevailed pretty generally that whiskey at five cents a glass was cheaper fuel than coal at $7.50 per ton, or wood at the rate of eight dollars per cord. Besides, the heat generated by the Police Magistrate's making it sultry for the culprits, was so much clear gain.

The Coming Comet.

The great comet of 1812 is whizzing towards the earth, and in a very few weeks it will be visible to the naked eye in the north-west heavens. It will be at its brightest and best about the beginning of 1884. It will not equal in size nor brilliancy the grand comet of 1882, but it will be a respectably decent member of the somewhat eccentric comet family. It is three score years and ten since it gazed upon Canada, and it will no doubt be surprised to note the wonderful strides the country has made in that time. In fact the comet may not recognize us as the same country—comets are so peculiar.

Journalistic Improvement.

We notice with pleasure the decided evidences of prosperity and thrift shown by the fact of the Belleville Intelligencer donning an entirely new suit of type. Its appearance is vastly improved, a fact which would be emphasized, if the paper employed were like some of its political positions assumed—a trifle less transparent. Our contemporary is a creditable sample of a live evening journal, and its prosperity is deserved. Both Belleville dailies have been recently subjected to improvements, and the City of the Bay has good reason to take pride in its journalistic representatives.

Egyptian Masonry.

On Thursday evening, Nov. 8th, M. Ill. Bro. Robert Ramsay, 33°, 96°, 90°, K.T.C., Substitute Grand Master of the Supreme Rite of Memphis, paid an official visit to Beniah Rose Croix Chapter No. 10, G.R.C., and was received with the usual honors. The following officers were elected:—

Another Bigamist.

The Orillia Packet says that on Tuesday, Constable Wiss arrested W. H. Fawcett, of Peterborough, aged 31, on a charge of bigamy. It is alleged that he was married on the 19th of June, 1878, by the Rev. Joseph Wheeler, of Bolton, County Peel, to Miss Catherine Keer, who is still living, but they had separated. On the 20th of June last, he was married by the Rev. R. McKee, to Emma Jane, daughter of Mr. George Rix, of South Orillia. On Wednesday, the prisoner was brought before the Mayor, and the second marriage proven, when the case was adjourned until to-morrow, in order to obtain evidence from the township of Albion. Much sympathy is felt for the family of Mr. Rix, in the trouble which has been brought upon them.

St. Andrew's Society.

On Wednesday evening of last week the annual meeting of St. Andrew's Society was held in the committee room of the Council Chamber. The attendance indicated that the Society was in a flourishing condition, and after all expenditures for charity, etc., there was a balance to good of $167. The chair was occupied by Mr. T. Telford, President of the Society. The following were the officers elected:

PRESIDENT—Duncan McLeod.
1ST VICE-PRESIDENT—John Erskine.
2ND VICE-PRESIDENT—D. Galletly.
3RD VICE-PRESIDENT—George Munro.
TREASURER—John Stewart.
SECRETARY—Chas. Cameron.
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE—Thos. Telford, Wm. Cumming, John Logan, Peter Hamilton, George Noble, W. Fairweather, Andrew McNeil and Melville Millar.

Preparations for the celebration of St. Andrew's Day (Nov. 30th) in a becoming manner, were intrusted to a committee composed of the President, Vice-Presidents and Mr. Wm. Cumming.

Eccentricities of a Peterborough Farmer.

The Toronto World is responsible for the following biographical sketch:—John Sellers is the name of a very eccentric farmer who lives in the township of Asphodel, Peterborough county. He has a flock of sheep that has not been shorn for six years. The wool has grown entirely over their eyes and is so long that it drags on the ground. The sheep have the appearance from a distance of big hay shocks in the field. Upon being asked why he did not shear his sheep, Mr. Sellers replied: "God put the wool on their backs to stay there and keep them warm, and I do not propose interfering with his plans." The flock is a great curiosity, and people come for miles around to see the sheep. Mr. Sellers never shaves nor cuts his hair or finger-nails. His hair hangs down his back and has the appearance of never having been combed. His whiskers were long and shaggy, and his general appearance is different from other men. He lives with his sister and owns a good farm. He has never brought any improved farm machinery, but all his tools are home-made.

Anniversary of Father Stafford's Death

Last Monday was the first anniversary of the lamented death of Father Stafford of Lindsay, and services were held in St. Mary's church. The first mass says the Post, was celebrated by Rev. Father Sweeney at 8 a. m., the second mass at 10.30 by Rev. Father Connolly, assisted by Rev. Fathers McEvoy of Fenelon Falls and O'Connell of Douro. Bishop Jamot of Peterboro and Rev. Father Lynch were also present. There was a very large attendance and over three hundred partook of the communion. Bishop Jamot preached a very eloquent and able discourse on the Catholic doctrine of the communion of the saints. In the course of the sermon his lordship alluded to the life and works of Father Stafford. He was very much gratified to see such a large congregation; and very much edified to see so many people going to the communion as a memorial of Father Stafford. Father Stafford had done a great deal for them, and they should now remember him. His lordship dwelt on what Father Stafford had done here and elsewhere for the cause of education, morality, temperance and religion, and paid a warm tribute to his memory.

Temperance Lecture.

On Monday night Mr. Thos. McMurray, a very clever lecturer, delivered in St. Paul's church an address containing many new points on the subject of temperance.

Cheap Carpets

and House Furnishings are selling fast at W. Fairweather's. Men's and Boys' Clothing are very cheap. Overcoats, stylish and good quality at very low prices. 42

Week of Prayer.

There was a very good attendance at the different services that comprised the programme at the young men's christian association rooms, last week and it is to be hoped that much good may result.

Our Brief Winter.

The brief but vigorous reign of winter has been broken by the reign of rain. Slush and mud have taken the place of snow and frost and comforts of travel are sacrificed for the good of the coal bin and the wood heap.

A Fine Team.

A few days ago Mr. T. Cavanagh paid $400, for a fine team of horses, to Mr. David Toole, of Emily. The pair weighed 2,900 lbs. Mr. Cavanagh seems to have a faculty for "spotting" the finest horses obtainable for his patrons.

More Plate Glass.

No less than six panes of new plate glass have been placed in the block corner of George and Simcoe streets, within six days—two renewed in China Hall, two for Matthew's pork packing establishment office, and two in Jas. Dolan's new dry goods shop next door.

The Henthorne Property.

On Wednesday the portion of the estate of the late David G. Henthorne, situate on George street, east side, north of Hunter, and comprising one double and two single brick stores, was sold to Mr. James Stenson, boot and shoe merchant, for $12,000. The property was sold by auction, by Mr. Charles Stapleton.

Condolence.

A resolution of condolence was adopted at the meeting of Carswell Lodge of Good Templars, respecting the late Mr. Esterbrook, photographer. The resolution recounted that the death of Mr. Esterbrook had deprived the Lodge of a firm and energetic member, and that his loss was deplored with feelings of the deepest regret.

The City Hotel.

In our advertising columns will be seen the card of the City Hotel, Mr. Wm. Clancy proprietor. Mr. Clancy seems bound to maintain the reputation which the "city" has achieved. Important improvements are to be made to the premises, including a new brick barn and stable, which will be erected as soon as possible.

A Good Dividend.

The management of the Peterborough Real Estate Investment Company (limited) has declared a dividend at the rate of seven per cent. per annum on the paid up capital stock. This is a very good rate of interest, considering that the investor has no trouble except to sign his cheque and, at dividend day, pocket his profits.

A Grand Chance.

On the first day of December next there will be offered for sale at the office of Mr. C. A. Weller, that valuable house and lot on Antrim street, known as the late David Carlisle property. It is situated in one of the healthiest and most picturesque portions of the town, and all those desirous of purchasing town property should be on hand at the sale. 47-2t

New Dry Goods Business.

Mr. James Dolan, late of the City Hotel, has returned to his first love, the dry goods business. On Saturday next he will open an establishment in the shop next south of Matthews' office, George street, which has been specially fitted up for his business. The public will find at this shop a full stock of dry goods, ready made clothing, gents' furnishings, etc. Bear in mind the place and date.

The Rink.

The repairs to the Peterborough curling and skating rink projected by the directors are now in course of execution. They consist of thorough drainage to prevent unauthorized flooding of the floor, repairs to the floor itself, and a general putting in order. The rink will be vastly improved in every respect, and it may be expected that its patronage will be correspondingly increased. The devotees of the stanes and steel will find things in much better shape than they have been before.

The Ubiquitous Yellow Dog.

Mr. Micawber, who was always waiting for "something to turn up," must have been in search of a yellow dog, for that ginger colored cur is something that turns up on every occasion. A dog smashed a glass in the window of the Singer sewing machine office, George street, on Saturday. Of course, it was a yellow dog. His master had gone out and left him shut in. The brute knowing that he wasn't wanted there—the yellow dog is never wanted anywhere—made a break for freedom and plunged through an eighteen by twenty-four light of glass, and fled up the street, with the tip of his tale pressed between his legs and pointing forwards. A dollar's worth of damage was done by a dog on which taxes were never paid—the yellow dog's master is not so far gone as that.

Bible Christian.

The Ladies' Aid bazar held in the Murray street Bible Christian Church on Tuesday afternoon and evening last was a gratifying success in spite of unfavorable weather. The net financial proceeds amounted to upwards of $115, with several dollars worth of goods yet available. The readings and the music supplied during the evening were of a most enjoyable order. The ladies and the Sunday school scholars worked well.

The anniversary services of the Ashburnham church will be held on Sunday and Monday, Nov. 25th and 26th. Sermons at 10.30 and 6.30 on Sunday by Rev. Dr. Rice, of Cobourg, and Rev. E. F. Torrance. On Monday evening a public tea will be held in the Council Chamber Hall, opposite the church, to commence at 5.30. A public service will be held in the church at 7.30. Addresses by Rev. Dr. Rice and Rev. John Shaw. The B. C. choir will be present. Collections at Sunday services. Admission to tea, 25 cents and 15 cents.

The many new customers calling at Turnbull's for Dress Goods is sufficient guarantee that his prices and colorings are right.

St. Paul's Social.

An uncommonly excellent programme has been prepared for the St. Paul's Church social to-night (Thursday).

Serenading.

The "City Band" was out serenading on Monday night. They performed very creditable music.

St. Luke's Band of Hope.

A very entertaining sciopticon seance was given to the members of the Band of Hope, in connection with St. Luke's Temperance Society on Monday night.

Vicious Dogs.

Savage dogs are becoming common. On Friday a dog attacked a child on the street, biting him in the face, and there is no knowing how he would have mangled his victim if he had not been prevented. Only a few days previous there was a similar attack by a vicious brute on a child on Hunter street. And ten to one neither of these brutes has paid its taxes.

A Call Extended.

We understand that the congregation of the Baptist Church has extended a call to Rev. A. H. Munro, of Montreal, who preached in the church twice last Sunday. Rev. Mr. Munro is considered one of the cleverest ministers in the Baptist connection, and it is to be hoped that he may be in a position to accept the call that has been extended him.

A Sad Sight.

The saddest of sad sights was seen at the Midland station on Monday night. A number of young men were amusing themselves by teasing an abandoned female, who was in a beastly state of intoxication. As soon as Mr. Brunadrett, station agent, was apprized of the facts he put a stop to the cruel sport, and the poor wretch, who in addition to her drunken condition, had her face covered with blood, the result of a fall, was removed.

Snow Ploughing.

It is held by some that a property owner or tenant has no more right to remove the snow from the walk in front of his residence, than he has to build the walk or keep the street in repair, and the acts of the majority are consistent with this belief. Our town fathers are evidently of the same opinion, for they have ordered two new snow ploughs from Mr. Peter Hamilton, similar to the excellent one belonging to that gentleman, which has been used on the streets to such good effect during the last fall of snow. If these ploughs are faithfully used during the winter, children will be able to attend school more regularly than they did last winter.

PERSONAL.

Mr. A. Bertram, of Toronto, was in town on Wednesday.

Messrs. Geo. A. Cox and A. White, of the Midland Railway, are in Montreal.

Rev. Mr. Clark, of Lakefield, preached in St. Andrew's Church last Sunday night.

The pulpit of the Baptist Church was occupied by Rev. Mr. Munro, of Montreal, last Sunday, at both services.

Rev. E. J. Stobo, formerly a minister in Peterborough, has been appointed vice-president of the Ministerial Association of Belleville.

Mr. Simpson, of the Morgan House, on the occasion of his marriage last week, was presented by the boarders with a handsome token of their esteem.

We notice that Mr. J. P. Eastwood, of this town, has very creditably passed his first intermediate in law at the recent examinations at Osgood Hall.

We notice by a Winnipeg exchange that Hon. W. N. Kennedy, a former resident of Peterborough, has been appointed president of the Y.M.C.A. of that city.

In our brief sketch of the life of the late Robert Nicholls, published last issue, we omitted to mention that he was one of the first magistrates commissioned in Peterborough county—by Sir George Maitland.

His Lordship Bishop Jamot assisted in the services held in St. Michael's cathedral, Toronto, on the occasion of the celebration of the 24th anniversary of His Grace Archbishop Lynch, last Tuesday.

We had the pleasure of a call on Wednesday from Mr. Maxwell Hall, secretary-treasurer of the Longford Mills Lumbering Company, and during a conversation we learned that these well-known mills started to saw lumber on the 9th of May, and continued without a break of any importance till Nov. 9th. During this time the mills sawed seventeen million feet of lumber and two million lath. These have been the company's largest operations for any year. In spite of the dullness of the trade, the company has disposed of all its lumber except four million feet. The closing of the mills was followed by a grand supper and delightful dance, provided for the employees by the company.

White Blankets, best makes, very cheap this year at Turnbull's.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY SERMON

Preached in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Peterborough, on Sunday Evening, Nov. 25th, 1883, by the Rev. R. F. Torrance at the Request of St. Andrew's Society.

Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry and that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house? When thou seest the naked that thou cover him, and that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh.—Isaiah LVIII, 7.

There was always a large class of persons among the Jews who regarded what was merely ceremonial as of more value than what was moral, and who observed certain religious rites while they neglected the weightier matters of the law. A considerable part of the teaching of the Old Testament prophets, as well as of the teaching of our Lord aimed at correcting this error, and pointing out that what was moral had a far higher value than what was ceremonial in the sight of God. When Saul smote the Amalekites in battle he spared Agag their king and the best of their cattle. Shortly afterwards, meeting with Samuel, he said, "I have performed the commandment of the Lord." But Samuel showed him that in taking of the spoil, even to sacrifice unto the Lord, he had disobeyed the Lord's command, and asked, "Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." In the beginning of this prophecy the Lord assured the Jews that He had no pleasure in the sacrifices which they offered and in the religious duties which they performed. "To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto Me? saith the Lord: I am full of the burnt offerings of rams, and the fat of fed beasts, and I delight not in the blood of bullocks or of lambs or of he-goats. Bring no more vain oblations: incense is an abomination unto me; the new moons and Sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting. Wash you, make you clean, put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil, learn to do well; seek judgments, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow." And in the chapter from which the text is taken, the Lord declared that the fast which He had chosen was different from the one which the people observed. "Is is such a fast that I have chosen, a day for a man to afflict his soul? is it to bow down his head as a bulrush, and to spread sackcloth and ashes under him? Wilt thou call this a fast and an acceptable day to the Lord. Is not this the fast which I have chosen: Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house? When thou seest the naked that thou cover him, and that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh." And as we pass on from Isaiah's prophecy to Matthew's gospel, we find that the teaching of our Lord was of the same character. He exposed the hypocrisy of the Scribes and Pharisees, who paid tithes of mint and anise and cummin and omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgments, mercy and faith. The subjects upon which I wish to address you is the claims of the poor, a subject which is not inappropriate in view of the circumstances under which we meet tonight.

I. Let us consider why the poor have claims upon us.

(1.) They have claims upon us because of their abiding existence as a class of the community. In the 15th chapter of Deut. there are certain directions given as to the treatment of the poor. "If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren within any of thy gates in thy land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not harden thine heart nor shut thy hand from thy poor brother. For the poor shall never cease out of the land: therefore I command thee saying, Thou shalt open thy hand wide unto thy poor and to thy needy in thy land." It was because of the abiding existence of the poor as a class of the community that the Lord's people were commanded to supply their wants.

"For the poor shall never cease out of the land."

This prophecy, uttered many hundred years ago, has been fufilled in all ages and among all nations. When Jesus defended the woman who annointed him with the ointment, against the murmurings of some of the disciples, He said, "For ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good, but Me ye have not always." There were the poor among the Jews when Jesus was upon earth just as there were the poor among the children of Israel at the time of their entering the promised land.

The poor have always been a large class in the community. The number of those who by patient industry and brilliant genius rise to fame and fortune, has never been very great. The majority in every community toil on through life in the condition in which they were born, a few rise to fame and fortune, a much larger number can scarce eke out a livelihood. The proportion of the poor to the other classes in the community varies in different places. In the large cities of the old world, such as London and Glasgow, the number of the poor is much larger than in Canada and the United States. But in our own land, where work is plentiful and wages are good, there are quite a number, who from age, infirmity and other causes, depend for their support upon their fellow men.

(2.) They have claims upon us because they are of great value in the sight of God. God thinks nothing of those distinctions which prevail among men. Neither the nobleman nor the millionaire are of any more account in His eyes than the peasant or the beggar. He looks away from all external trappings to the soul within. Beneath the tattered garb of the beggar He sees one made in His own image, the possessor of a soul of infinite value, one who, though without this world's goods, is capable of inheriting heavenly riches. And He frequently represents the poor as being the objects of God's special regard. It was predicted of Christ, "For He shall deliver the needy when he crieth, the poor also, and him that hath no helper. He shall spare the poor and needy, and shall save the souls of the needy. He shall redeem their soul from deceit and violence, and precious shall their blood be in His sight." When Christ came into the world He showed His regard for the poor by identifying Himself with them. He was emphatically a poor man. How lowly his earthly lot! He was the child of a mechanic's home. At the age of thirty he exchanged the manual labor of a country artizan for the more dependent position of an itinerant preacher. He lived on casual bounty and often had not where to lay his head. He died an absolute pauper. His clothes, forfeit as a perquisite to his executioners. His only resting place a borrowed grave. It is not surprising that God should specially regard that class of the community with which more than any other the Lord Jesus was identified. If the poor are of great value in the sight of God they surely have claims upon us.

(3.) They have claims upon us because they are our brethren. There is really a brotherhood existing between all mankind. "God has made of one blood all nations of men to dwell upon the face of the whole earth." But the brotherhood which exists between the members of the same nation is closer than the brotherhood of humanity. The Bible does not forbid men to be patriots or to love the members of their own nation above all others. Some of the most eminent Bible characters were patriots. Yea, the Lord Jesus was a patriot himself. David was a patriot and so he said, "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem; they shall prosper that love thee. Peace be within thy walls and prosperity within thy palaces." Paul was a patriot as is evident from his pathetic words. "For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh." And in the tears which Jesus shed over Jerusalem we see the tears of a patriot mourning because of the doom of his countrymen as well as the tears of a Saviour mourning over lost man. In the different individuals patriotism doubtless assumes different forms. There were some patriots whose chief desire was to obtain for their country military renown, making its name feared among all the nations of the earth. Such was the patriotism of men like Julius Cæsar and Napoleon Bonaparte, a patriotism with which selfishness may be largely mixed up. A higher form of patriotism is that which leads men to labor for the social and political advancement of the members of their nation. John Howard was a truer patriot than many a one who breast has been covered with the badges of military glory—because he devoted his life to the alleviation of the suffering of those confined in prison cells. A man like Barnardo, who spends his time in rescuing the little homeless in London, has a deeper love for his country than many a politician whose speeches are reported in the papers from week to week. And how may you as Scotchmen show your love of country in this, your adopted land? Not by boasting of its picturesque lakes and heather hills; not by glorying in its men of letters or its military heroes, but by regarding your poorer fellow countrymen as your brethren and stretching out to them a helping hand.

II. Let us consider how we may best show our regard for the claims of the poor. (1) By providing for their temporal wants.

The duty of providing for the temporal wants of the poor was insisted upon as strongly under the Mosaic law as under the Christian dispensation. The Israelites were not to harden their hearts or shut their hands against their poor brethren; but to open their hand wide unto their brethren, to the poor and to the needy in the land. In reaping the harvest of their land, they were not to reap wholly the corners, nor gather the gleanings, nor gather every grape of the vineyard; but they were to leave them for the poor and the stranger. The Psalmist says: "Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble." Solomon says: "He that oppresseth the poor reproacheth his Maker; but he that honoureth Him hath mercy on the poor." And as we turn to the teaching of our Lord and His Apostles, we find frequent reference to the duty of benevolence. In describing the final judgment, our Lord makes the retributions of eternity to depend upon the regard which men have paid to the claims of the poor. He says: "For I was an hungered and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger and ye took me in. Naked and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison and ye came unto me." While the great theme of Paul's preaching was Jesus Christ and Him crucified, he never forgot to urge upon his hearers the claims of their poorer brethren. In the different Gentile cities, which he visited, he acted on the principle that, as the Gentiles had been made partakers of the spiritual blessings of the Jews, it was their duty to minister unto to Jews in carnal things. And James, the Apostle of practical religion, adds his testimony to that of the others, when he says: "If a brother or sister be naked or destitute of daily food. And one of you say unto them, depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled, notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit?"

But is there not a difficulty in knowing how best to provide for the temporal wants of the poor? It is certainly not advisable to give indiscriminately. Many a kind-hearted person has been imposed upon by the pitiful tale of a beggar, asking alms; for on inquiry he has discovered that the alms were not needed or that they were expended in an improper way. Before alms are given, pains should be taken to find out whether the applicants are really deserving objects; and, if so, in what way the alms may be best bestowed. If one has become a pauper through intemperance, employs all the means which he can obtain, in gratifying his fatal appetite, it would certainly be no charity to put money within his reach. If he is hungry, feed him; if naked, give him raiment; but do not place temptation in his way by giving him money.

The St. Andrew's Societies relieve us to a large extent from the necessity of indiscriminate giving. They have the means of finding out who are worthy recipients of aid, and in what way aid may be best bestowed. So that in subscribing to these Societies we may be assured that our money will not be used in an improper way.

(2.) By supplying them with the bread of life.

In all of our large towns and cities there are numbers of the poor who do not attend the means of grace. It has been estimated that in London there are some populous districts where not more than two per cent. of the people attend the means of grace. It is too often the case that as people lose their earthly goods, they have the less inclination to go to church. And so, instead of our churches being the places where the rich and poor meet together, they are frequently attended only by those who are comfortably off. If this be the case it is our duty, surely to provide them with the bread of life. We must not be satisfied with feeding the hungry and clothing the naked; but we must aim at bringing them to a saving acquaintance with Christ. We must go out into the highways and hedges and compel them to come in to the Gospel feast.

III. Let us consider the blessings promised to those who thus have respect to the needs of the poor.

"Then shall thy light break forth as the morning and thine health shall spring forth speedily; and thy righteousness shall go before them; the glory of the Lord shall be thy reward. And the Lord shall guide thee continually and satisfy thy soul in drought and make fat thy bones, and thou shalt be like a watered garden and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not."

The recognition of the claims of the poor is a means of calling out our own sympathies. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." It is the same old story of the man who stopped to raise up the traveller who had fallen under the blinding snow, and whose own life was saved by the effort which he put forth. There is a reflex influence exerted upon ourselves by kindness to the poor. The consideration of their needs makes us more grateful for our own mercies. We become more sympathetic and large-hearted by ministering to their wants. A nobleman, weary of life, was hurrying along the streets to the river, when he felt a sudden check, and turning, he beheld a little boy who had caught the skirt of his cloak in his anxiety to solicit his notice. His look and manner were irresistible. "There are six of us and we are dying for want of food," he said. The nobleman said to himself, "Why should I not relieve this wretched family. I have the means and it will not delay me many minutes. But what if it does?" When he arrived at the scene of the misery he threw them his purse, and their gratitude quite overcame him. He felt a thrill of joy pass through his heart, such as he had never experienced before. A rich lady in New York, who has all that wealth can purchase, stated some time ago that she had more real pleasure in the time which she spent each week in visiting the hospital, than in the whirl and excitement of fashionable life. Would that some of our rich worldlings, who complain that the time hangs heavily on their hands, might taste the luxury of doing good!

(2.) The recognition of the claims of the poor will be richly rewarded by Christ in the world to come. He identifies Himself with His poor brethren, and regards favours bestowed on them as if they were bestowed on Himself. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Deeds of mercy are not like so much water spilt upon the ground, which cannot be gathered up. They are rather like bread cast upon the waters, which will be found after many days.

And now, in conclusion, let me urge upon you to respond to the call to help your less favored brethren, in this your adopted land. Many of them, perhaps, set out from Scotland with prospects as bright as your own; but from different causes they have been reduced to poverty. In days gone by they wandered with strange delight by the side of those beautiful lakes, and across those heather hills; they loved the Sabbath as God's day, and the sanctuary as God's house; they were taught to read out of the old family Bible, and to sing the Psalms. Some of them may be the descendants of heroes, who were ready to shed the last drop of blood for Scotland's sake. In their veins may flow the blood of Hamilton, or Wishart, or Knox, or Melville, so that in helping them you may be doing honour to those great ones, who have long since passed away.

Turnbull has just placed on his counters a large consignment of bankrupt stock which he is offering in many instances at less than Manufacturers' prices, consisting of goods every family wants, such as Blankets, Flannels, Winceys, Ginghams, Towelling, Carpets, Hosiery, etc. Call early; these goods are sure to sell quickly at the prices offering.

BRANDON, Man., Jan. 17, 1883.
About a year ago I was taken with a severe cold which settled on my chest and brought on bleeding of the lungs. I bled very freely and was very low. I feared it would ultimately turn into consumption. Consulted a number of physicians, and used an number of so-called cough remedies and lung pads but all to no avail until I saw a notice of Dr. Wilson's Pulmonary Cherry Balsam in a paper. Although a forlorn hope I purchased a bottle, and to my surprise found it doing me good, I persevered in its use and am now completely cured. Please publish this that others may be saved.
Yours truly, J. A. PERLEY.

WATER SUPPLY.

Mr. Thomas Rutherford, Chief Fire Department:

SIR,—I think it cannot fairly be said that the Peterborough Water Company has been niggardly with its water. Last summer the use of the hydrants was freely given to facilitate the watering of the streets without any charge to the town or the ratepayers. That was a great comfort to the inhabitants and a large saving of expense to the town. And at the fires on Brock street and Mr. Halpin's stable, water was freely supplied without hesitation, and by that means large conflagrations were prevented. I think I may safely say that if water had been taken from the hydrants in the first place, instead of waiting until the steam fire engine had steamed up at the tank, Fitzgerald's large brick factory would today be intact. When at last the firemen threw water on the building from the waterworks the fire was soon extinguished. Fitzgerald's shop and Halpin's stable were both outside of the limits in which ratepayers are paying for water for fire protection, and the company was not in anyway bound to supply water, or attempt to stop these fires from spreading. But the Board has a duty to perform to the shareholders of the company, and hereafter their interest must, in the first place, be considered.

The company have water to sell not to give away. The cost of maintaining the works in running order, both night and day, independent of the large capital invested in the works, is very large, and the company must receive some remuneration for the water supplied, or shut down. Therefore be good enough hereafter not to take water from the hydrants for fire purposes unless permitted by the directors or officials of the company, that is, when the fires are outside of the limits fixed by the town by-laws, where the ratepayers are assessed for the use of the water.

I remain, yours truly,
W. CLUXTON.
President.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

I propose, between now and the ensuing town elections, to call the attention of the electors of the town of Peterborough to the reformation of certain town matters, and to the necessity of using more wisdom and more care in the choice of councillors for the ensuing year. As an offset to this you will be told of the growth and prosperity of the town, and you will be told that your municipal taxes are lower than any such taxes are in many other towns of this province. But if this be so, your councillors have no right to boast of it, and if low, they can be made still lower. This year your taxes are largely in excess of what they have been for several past years, and for this increase the Council is to blame. I have no hesitation in saying that the town taxes should not exceed eight mills on the dollar all told. Thousands of dollars can be saved yearly if the affairs of the town were managed with the same care and economy as your councillors conduct their own private business. The assessed value of the town property increases each year by thousands of dollars, but still the rate of taxation is not diminished, but, this year, is very largely increased. Why is this so, and why, as the assessable value of the town property so largely increases every year, are not our taxes less? Moreover, according to the present rate of taxation, if our property were assessed at a lower value than it is, and as it ought to be, our taxes would be quite two cents on the dollar. The ratepayers do not see this because the rate of taxation is made upon a valuation, which, in some cases, is as much as the property could be sold for. I make these remarks as preliminary to others which are to follow, in order to draw public attention to our town affairs, in view of the near approach of the town elections.

THE MAYORALTY.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

Several parties appear desirous of having Mr. Sawers become a candidate for the office of Mayor. I am opposed to this, for I consider that he can be of far more usefulness to the town in his position as Councillor. He serves us well there, and there is the best place for him. The ratepayers of Ward No. 2 have reason to feel grateful to Mr. Sawers for his endeavors to serve them faithfully, and it is to be hoped that they will put him in again at the head of the poll, to show their appreciation of his services. No doubt there will be strong efforts made to keep him out of the Council, by persons whose interest it is to prevent investigation into transactions which they would like to keep secret; but the ratepayers must look to it and take care to uphold the man who is working in their interest and for their good. If they do not do this, then, all I can say is, that they do not deserve fair treatment, and when their interests are sacrificed they will have no right to complain. Mr. Sawers could no doubt be elected Mayor, and he would no doubt make a good Mayor; but his place is in the Council, where he is needed.

RATEPAYER.

Peterborough, Nov. 22, 1883.

WHO IS TO BE MAYOR?

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I saw by yesterday's Rural Times a letter from "Ratepayer," asking the question, "Why not make Campbell W. Sawers the next Mayor of Peterborough?" Fie! fie! You should have known better than that, Mr. Ratepayer, females of his species are called "Jennys"—not mares, though they do belong to the same grand animal family.

Rule—"You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's lug."

ANOTHER RATEPAYER

That job lot of Blankets which Turnbull's customers are getting the benefit of, weigh eight and nine pounds.

I can't eat, Have a pain in my stomach after my meals. My dear sir, use Crowfoot Bitters.

MIDLAND DISTRICT DASHES.

The Cream of Occurrences Skimmed from Contemporary Columns.

BETHANY.

Messrs. Staples & Sadler shipped a car load of fat cattle to Toronto one dry last week.

LORNEVILLE.

No less than thirty-three different trains passed through here last Monday.

Rev. J. Gillis, from Scotland, was inducted on the 15th as pastor of the Old Kirk congregation.

MILLBROOK.

The officers of the new Millbrook fire company are:—Captain, Wm. Reynolds; 1st Lieutenant, J. W. Curry; 2nd Lieutenant, R. H. Kells; Secretary, R. D. Doak; Treasurer, J. C. Kells. The organization has a membership of thirty-five, and is now awaiting the arrival of the necessary appliances to be ready to quench the thirsty tongue of the fiery god which laps up and consumes the property of the honest taxpayer. Meantime the captain will continue to quench other thirsty tongues.

Rev J. W. Foster, Curate of the Rev. Rural Dean Allan, rector of Cavan, has been promoted to tht Incumbency of Selby, near Napanee. On the occasion of his departure, he was presented with a purse and an address.

BETHANY.

The Bethany Tobogganning Club held their first regular meeting of the season on Nov. 1st. The following officers were elected: J. H. Barber, Honorary President, Dr. T. G. Brereton, President, Wm. White Vice President, A. P. Walker, Captain, J. J. Preston, Treasurer, Walter Chapman, Secretary. This year a new course has been selected that slopes to the West which will afford a much longer slide, and for safety, convenience and point of excellence will be superior to any in the province. The membership of the club already exceeds that of last year and is rapidly increasing. The first annual ball of the club will be held on Tuesday night December eleventh.

LINDSAY.

The thaw will have the effect of raising the water in the river to such a height as will ensure plenty of power for Needler & Sadler's mill during the winter.

A petition is being circulated asking the Council to accept the offer made by a responsible party to clean the snow off the sidewalks within a reasonable limit of the town, throughout the winter and spring months, for a lump sum of $100. Surely the council will never refuse.

Mr. James Hastie, late minister of St. Andrew's in this town, has during the past two or three weeks received "calls" to Cornwall Petrolia, Streetsville and, we believe, another place. We understand Mr. Hastie has signified his acceptance of the call to Knox church, Cornwall. There is a good stipend and a comfortable manse.

BOBCAYGEON.

The Forest House bowling alley has been refitted and put in first class order.

The close of navigation has delayed a large shipment of butter and cheese. A North Verulam farmer got $260 for his season's make of butter.

The lakes are still open and may possibly remain open for some time, but the cold snap of last week has closed the rivers and navigation has been stopped.

The interesting ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father McEvoy on Wednesday, and as usual the congregation joined in the celebration of a low mass. Mr. Excelsior J. McNeil, of Little Bob, who is now united to Miss Catharine Collins, of Bobcaygeon, then received the congratulations of their numerous friends. Mr. H. Early and Miss M. Kearney assisted the contracting parties through the trying ordeal.

COBOURG.

At Trinity College, the son of Mr. Dumble, police magistrate of this town, took the Wellington classics scholarship, the science scholarship, and the classical prize and a special prize.

At the law examinations held in Osgoode Hall last week, Mr. A. E. Barber received his certificate as Solicitor, passing sixth, without an oral, in a class of 24.

At the late examinations at Osgoode Hall, Messrs. C. A. Masten, B.A., and R. A. Coleman, B.A., both passed highly creditable final examinations, and were admitted to the bar.

The fishermen of this town suffered considerable loss from the late heavy blow. All their nets were rendered useless, and they went out on Sunday to pick up the remnants.

The firm of Winch & Hill has been dissolved, and Mr. Winch will continue the business in the old stand, where, for the past twenty-five years he has supplied a numerous lot of customers with choice and seasonable meats.

In consequence of the resignation of Mr. G. [illegible], headmaster of the Model School, Mr. W. F. McDiarmid, of Morrisburg, was appointed to the position.

CAMPBELLFORD.

Mr. John Ogilvie, P.L.S., has returned home from the Northwest. He intends to remain here for the winter.

Two sons of Mr. W. West, of Seymour, Samuel and Marshall, took their departure Thursday morning for Aiken, Georgia, the latter going for his health.

Mr. W. Whitton made a shipment of geese and turkeys to New York on Saturday. He has shipped three thousand sheep since last spring.

The Messrs. Dinwoodie Bros. are again into the grain business, and are buying both here and at Hoard's Station. Mr. William Donald is in charge of the latter place.

On Monday last, a wild turkey, so rare in this section of the country, was observed flying over the hill to the west of the village. Mr. Geo. Odell, a local sportsman, succeeded in bringing it down.

Mr. Roderick Keller, of Seymour, closed up his business of frog capturing and exportation on Tuesday last, when he shipped 250 pounds to New York. His greatest catch during one night was 630. This was done last summer when the amphibious race was most numerous. Since last spring the Keller Bros. have captured and exported two tons of frog meat representing probably more than 8,000 frogs. There is a fine market in the United States for Canadian frogs.

PORT HOPE.

We understand that on Saturday last the earthen floor of the drill shed was flooded with water for the purpose of transforming the building into a skating rink.

Dr. W. H. Briggs, of Rochester, N.Y., paid Port Hope a visit on Friday night last, on his way to Burleigh to spend a few days hunting.

About 1,000,000 feet of lumber yet remain to be shipped at this port, but as the rates offered, $1.75 per thousand, are not in proportion to the risk, the vessel-owners do not feel disposed to carry it this season.

The steamer Norseman was laid up on Tuesday last for the season. The season has not been as profitable a one as might have been expected, in fact was the worst that has been experienced for six or seven years.

Henry Comfort, a man hailing from Ottawa, has been bringing anything but comfort to a number of Port Hopeites. He ingratiated himself into the graces of a respectable young girl, borrowed several sums of money ranging from $5 to $20 to get married with, secured the loan of a suit of clothes and a pair of superior kid boots, and took the Grand Trunk east for a distant spot. The marriage was to have taken place Thursday.

NORWOOD.

Mr. S. J. Clysdale will commence work on the elevator early in the spring. It will cost over 3,000.

There are sixteen men working on the new school buildings. Mr. J. McNamara, of Peterborough, has the contract for the brickwork, and is making a good job of it.

The N. B. Band, under the leadership of Mr. H. Stickles, is making rapid strides to the front. The playing of the Band on Saturday evening last was highly praised.

Mr. J. McKelvie is having the drill shed put in shape for a skating rink. The N. B. Band has been engaged to play once a fortnight at the rink during the season, and at all carnivals except one. The Peterborough "City Band" has been engaged for the "exception."

Men have been engaged during the last few days in laying out the grounds for the station here on the O. & Q. Railway. It will be ninety-one feet in length. Mr. Davis, contractor for the brick work on Roxburgh's new block, has the contract for 600 square yards of plastering in connection with the station. Work will be commenced immediately.

On Thursday afternoon last a gang of men commenced laying the track on the Ontario & Quebec Railway from Crow River bridge west—towards this village. The bridge, which has been a drawback for some time, was completed on Wednesday, and on the afternoon of the following day half-a-mile of track was laid on this side of the bridge.

SLAIN WHILE SLEEPING.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY AT JACKSON, MICHIGAN.

FOUR PEOPLE MURDERED IN THEIR BEDS—FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN CARRIED OFF.

Jacob Crouch, aged 70, the wealthiest farmer in Jackson County, Michigan, his daughter and her husband Henry White, and Moses Haley a visitor, were found dead in bed Thursday morning, evidently murdered. All had been shot through the head behind the ear. It is supposed they had been chloroformed first, as no signs of struggle appeared. Each victim was lying as if asleep and an odor of chloroform was noticeable when the bodies were discovered. Mrs. White was also shot through the left arm. No clue has yet been discovered although tracks round the house indicated that guard was placed while the murder was being prepetrated. Crouch was a wealthy farmer living seven miles southwest of Jackson, and owner of an extensive sheep ranche in Texas. It is rumored he had just received about $50,000 from Texas in payment of sales made on the ranche. Haley was stopping at Crouch's, having just come from Texas with a large amount of money for the purpose of buying blooded stock. The house below stairs was thoroughly ransacked and every thing of value carried away. A young girl, an adopted daughter of the Whites, and a negro age 18 sleeping upstairs, say they heard no firing, although the negro says he heard a thumping noise about the middle of the night. He though it was caused by the fierce wind that was blowing. Mrs. White was expected to become a mother stortly. The murder caused intense excitement. Hundreds of people flocked to the scene.

DECIMAL DIVISION OF THE DAY.

A PLAN TO DO AWAY WITH A.M. AND P.M.

A correspondent of the Toronto World, F. T. Jones, submits a plan for a new division of the day into hours, which, from its novelty and interest at the present time, is here submitted:

"To do away with a.m. and p.m. in reckoning the time of day, and to count through the whole 24 hours, from midnight to midnight, as you propose, and as has been done by one or two railways in the United States, would be an undoubted advantage. Men of science are usually in advance of the public in the adoption of such improvements, and the suggested mode of reckoning time has been in universal use among astronomers for very many years. In like manner the decimal (or metric) system of weights and measures has been in use for many years among men of science in all civilized countries. The decimal system of division being undoubtedly the most natural and therefore the best, why not—if a change is to be made—adopt it for the day, making that natural division of time to consist of ten hours, each of 100 minutes, and each minute having 100 seconds? At present the day contains 24 hours, equal to 1,440 minutes, or 86,400 seconds. Under the system here proposed it would contain 10 hours, equal to 1,000 minutes or 100,000 seconds. The proposed minute would therefore be somewhat longer, and the proposed second slightly shorter, than the present minute and second respectively. The advantage resulting from the decimal division would be that computations as to the number of minutes or seconds in a given time would be greatly simplified or rendered altogether unnecessary. The correspondence between the present and proposed times of the day would be as follows:

Proposed System.	Present System.
1	2 24 a.m.
2	4 48 a.m.
3	7 12 a.m.
4	9 36 a.m.
5	12 noon
6	2 24 p.m.
7	4 48 p.m.
8	7 12 p.m.
9	9 36 p.m.
10	12 midnight

Reversing the two systems, the correspondence would be as follows:

Present System.	Proposed System.
3 a.m.	1 25
6 a.m.	2 50
9 a.m.	3 75
12 noon	5 00
3 p.m.	6 25
6 p.m.	7 50
9 p.m.	8 75
12 midnight	10 00

It will be noticed that the latter set of figures of the proposed system would give the exact number of minutes which had elapsed since the commencement of the day. The necessity for the signs a.m. and p.m. would of course be done away with. If it be objected that the proposed change would render our present clocks and watches useless, it may be replied: first, that a similar objection was urged, and urged in vain, against the adoption of the metric system, which, notwithstanding that it rendered worthless all existing weights and measures (both of length and volume), is now in general use in many countries in Europe. The permanent gain has been found to greatly outweigh the temporary loss. Second: the necessary change in our clocks and watches could probably be made at a trifling cost. A new face, and the substitution of one or two wheels cogged differently, would most likely be the only alterations necessary. Perhaps some of our practical watchmakers would enlighten us as to the probable cost of the change."

THE BROWN MONUMENT.

ARRIVAL OF THE GRANITE MATERIAL FOR THE PEDESTAL.

The granite material for the pedestal to be erected in the Queen's Park for the statue of the late Hon. Geo. Brown has arrived in Toronto from Montreal, and will be placed in position at once by Mr. Forsyth, of Montreal, the contractor. The pedestal alone will be some eleven feet in height, and will be built from a design prepared by Mr. Birch, A.R.A., the artist who is making the statue. The statue, it is expected, will arrive and be placed in position early in the spring. It is of heroic size, and will be ten feet high the entire height of the pedestal and statue being thus 21 feet. The site chosen is in the Queen's Park, a short distance north of the Volunteer Monument, and just opposite the gate leading into the University.

PUTTING HIS FOOT IN IT.

A gentleman not long since was dining with a friend, and was asked to take down a certain lady to dinner. Now there were two ladies present, one a widow, whose husband had not lived or died exactly a saint, the other a married woman, whose husband had gone to India. The unfortunate thought he had the married lady on his arm, but it was the widow, and turning to her with his most facinating smile, he said:

"Nice day this has been."

"Do you think so? It has been so awfully hot!" replied the widow,

"Do you call this hot?" said he archly. "Why, it is nothing compared to the place your husband had gone to."

You can't expect to succeed in business or in pleasure either, for that matter, unless one feels all right in health and spirits. This is the first consideration. Now, itsa small matter when this remedy, BO-PE-SA, is recommended as highly, even guaranteed to renew one's energy and spirits by invigorating the Liver and aiding Digestion, by clearing the Brain, opening the pores of the skin, regulating the Bowels and system, to go to the drug store and get a single bottle of Zopesa as a trial. It is a duty every one owes to himself. Try a bottle then. 41-4t

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them a name of their own, and not try to sell them on the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back. 2-tf

THE FRANCO CHINESE WAR.

HOW IT ORIGINATED.

Now that war between France and China is inevitable, our readers would perhaps read with interest an outline of how the difficulty arose. We have to go back many years to find the first cause of the present difficulty. Years ago France fought a foothold in Tonquin a province of China for the purpose of trade. This country is one of the four divisions of Annam or Cochin-China and lies south of China proper. Its area is over eighty thousand square miles, and its population is estimated at sixteen millions. Its chief exports are fish, rice and sugar in considerable quantities, together with raw silk, cinnamon, etc., France coveted this trade, and after gaining an entry to her ports she extorted concessions from time to time until these culminated in the treaty of Hue, which gave her power over revenues and access to the whole country. The Emperor of Annam either regretting that these concessions had been made, or acting at the instigation of China, refused some time ago to carry out the provisions of this treaty, and the consequence was that France sent an armed expedition to enforce her rights. The Annamite forts were bombarded, and the Emperor found himself in no position to offer fight, and so a new arrangement was made by which France secured an absolute protectorate over the country, and placed French officers over native troops. All this displeased China, which felt jealous of the growing influence and power of the French, and especially as the power arrogated the right to supervise the taxation. As China holds sway over a large number of Provinces by bonds no more secure than those which bound Annm to her, she could not afford to allow France to take possession of the country under the forced treaty with the Annamite Emperor. Therefore China sent a force into Annam by way of protest, and as a sort of gentle hint of what might be forthcoming. The Chinese force is now in garrison ar Bac-Ninh and the French force is at Hanoi, both considered to be "keys to the situation."

A CRANIAL CURIOSITY.

One of the queerest curiosities on the globe is a man with a silver skull, who is now visiting in Louisville, Ky. During a fiercely contested battle in the late war this interesting individual was struck in the head with a piece of shell, which tore away the entire top of his skull, leaving the brain most horribly exposed. Strange to say he survived the terrible wound, and a noted surgeon, who was one of the physicians in attendance upon the late lamented Garfield, succeeded in fitting a silver plate over the opening, which shielded the brain equally as well as the skull. This plate is about the size of a man's hand and works on hinges, and may be raised up and down at will. The re-skulled man does not experience the least pain, and as he wears a wig all evidence of a shattered skull is concealed. [There is a gentleman in Welland county, named Page, who about forty years ago was kicked in the forehead, by a horse, breaking the skull and exposing the brain. A silver plate was placed over the opening and the gentleman has worn it forty years. He has enjoyed good health and is living yet unless he has died within a few weeks. —ED EXAMINER.

LITTLE THINGS WORTH HEEDING.

To each quart of apple-sauce add a small spoonful of butter. You will find your sauce improved.

One of the most dangerous things in a sick-room is an over-wise nurse.

Remember the children's birthdays. Make them red-letter days for them; a simple gift or a little treat answers as well as more costly gifts. It makes them happy, and that is the main point.

As a rule sick people eat too much. Did it ever occur to our readers how little food a convalescent child or adult requires?

According to Mrs. Beecher, a plain but good, black silk dress is to be chosen over all other dresses for travelling purposes.

Mothers often fall into the habit of chiding their children for every little offence. It is "Don't do this and don't do that," from morning till night. The command becomes odious to the child and he pays as little attenion to his mother's remonstrances as to a cat's mew. As a to-be-looked-for result the mother loses all control of her child and makes both him and herself peevish and miserable.

WHERE HE GAINED.

Twenty years ago there was an old farmer living about 100 miles from New York who took forty pounds of dried apples to the village merchant and was told that the price was four cents a pound.

'I'll be hanged if I submit to this extortion any longer!' he exclaimed. 'Why, they are quoted in Hoarce Greeley a paper at seven cents!'

'Hadn't you better take 'em to New York!'

'I'll be kicked if I don't!'

And he did. When he came home and figured up he said to his wife:

'Well Hanner, it cost me $8 to come and go, $2 tavern bill maybe a little extra for tobacco.'

'Then you lose by the trip?'

'Yes, kinder lost in one way, but in another I got my tea for four cents a pound less than Jackson sells it, and I tell you four cents don't grow on every thistle.'

Rest and Comfort to the Suffering.

"BROWN'S HOUSEHOLD PANACEA" has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures Pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and Heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixir or Liniment in the world, should be in every family, handy for use when wanted, "as it really is the the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 6-1y

Mothers! Mothers!! Mothers!!!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere. 25 cents a bottle.

Plain Truths!

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible, if disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known and the highest medidical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the Iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS will thoroughly and quickly assimulate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth cause headache or constipation and is positively not injurious.

St. Johnsbury, Vermont Oct. 2nd, 1882.

For six years I have been a great sufferer from blood disease, dyspepsia and constipation, and became so debilitated that I could not retain anything on my stomach, in fact life had almost become a burden, and when hope had almost left me, I was induced to give SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS a trial. I am now taking the third bottle and have not felt so well in six years as I do at present.

MRS. S. L. MOORE.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS effectually cures dyspepsia, indigestion and weakness, and renders the greatest relief and benefit to persons suffering from such diseases as kidney and liver complaints, dyspepsia, indigestion etc.

Peterborough Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV. 29, 1883.

The Christmas Examiner.

Our annual Christmas edition will be published earlier than usual, and six thousand copies will be distributed free early in December. This early distribution will secure an earlier reading of the advertisements of our patrons, and a correspondingly prompt attention will thus be drawn to the unusually complete facilities made by our Christmas advertisers, for supplying the demands of the holiday trade. We can confidently promise the public that the forthcoming issue of our Christmas edition will surpass in every respect, all our previous successful efforts in this direction, a fact that will make the Christmas EXAMINER doubly welcome in the six thousand homes to which it will be sent. Thus the number of readers who will peruse it and study its attractive and promising advertisments, will be about thirty thousand. Advertisers must see, therefore, the immense publicity that will be given their announcements, appearing in the Christmas edition. Our regular subscribers should be on the look-out for it and tell their less fortunate neighbor, who does not receive the EXAMINER that a copy of the Christmas issue will be found at his post office, early in December.

The New Minister of Education

Contrary to the general expectation, Hon. Adam Crooks' health has not so improved that he can continue to discharge the duties of Minister of Education. He has therefore resigned, and Mr. G. W. Ross has accepted the portfolio. Mr. Ross' appointment will be eminently acceptable to every class that is concerned in the promotion of education. His widespread experience in educational matters fit him especially for the position he has assumed; his parliamentary experience, in which he has signally demonstrated his ability as a debater of a high order, is another recommendation. He is in the prime of life, being forty years of age. He was educated for the teaching profession at the Normal School, and has filled successively the offices of Public School Inspector, and Inspector of the model schools of Ontario. He has represented West Middlesex in the House of Commons since 1872. It will thus be seen that he has passed through every stage of educational experience tending to fit him particularly for the Ministry of Education. His acquaintance with educational matters, which is more thorough perhaps than that of any public man in the province, is all the more valuable because it has been practically acquired. Mr. Ross was unseated for West Middlesex in the Commons through a treacherous scheme, concocted by his political opponents, but he will seek re-election in the corresponding riding for the Local House. The riding for the latter purpose, is differently constituted, but the difference is in Mr. Ross' favor, and there can be little doubt of his election. He is a valuable acquisition to the administrative and debating ability of the Cabinet.

The writs for the local elections in West Middlesex, West Simcoe and Cardwell have been issued. The days of nomination and polling will be probably Dec. 7th and 14th—the same in all three ridings.

Lennox Redeemed.

Mr. D. W. Allison, the Liberal candidate, has won a grand triumph for the Reform cause in Lennox. He has been elected by a majority of five for the Commons, in a riding that gave Sir John a majority—purchased, however,—of 295 in June, 1882. The Tory party strained every nerve and used every one of their peculiar persuasions, but in vain. The people repudiated the bossism of Roe and would not be bribed by the contract cash of Sir John. Thus in a pronounced Conservative riding, the people have thrown off the shackles of Ottawa dictation and have struck a key note that indicates the beginning of the end.

Sir Richard Cartwright.

The rumour that Sir Richard Cartwright was about to seek to re-enter the Dominion Parliament excited the deepest interest in every part of Canada and in the ranks of both political parties. The idea was of course hailed with delight or disgust by the respective parties, and both had the same reason for the feelings experienced. Sir Richard Cartwright is, beyond all doubt the most able and thorough financier in Canada, and one of the ablest debaters in the Dominion, and this ability conjoined to his honesty of principle and conduct, makes him honored by Liberals and hated and feared by the Tory party. He has been always considered a most caustic and scathing critic. But this he could not help being. The strength of his convictions led him to be earnest, while his own honesty of purpose led him to be bitterly hostile in denunciation of the hypocritical theories by which his political opponents have in the past sought to delude the people. To the strength of his financial convictions may be attributed his defeat when in office. He was too honest, for the sake of retaining power, to yield to popular clamor and adopt a false and misleading fiscal policy. Popular opinion, deluded by the sophistries of the protection party, decided against him, and he bore the result with equanimity as far as he was personally concerned; he had, no doubt, an abiding belief that time would justify his course and policy, and cover with confusion that party, which, trading on the financial embarassments of the people, led them to adopt a fiscal policy that must ultimately result mischievously for the public interests.

Once more Sir Richard Cartwright will appear on the floor of the House of Commons to battle for the best interests of the people of Canada. Mr. McMillan, the present representative of South Huron, has magnanimously resigned in favour of Sir Richard, who will no doubt be elected. Both the Liberal party and the country are to be congratulated on the circumstances that secure to both the services of so able and honest a statesman as Sir Richard John Cartwright.

The Consumer Pays the Duty.

The apologists of the N.P. are fond of asserting that a protective tariff does not enhance the value of goods to the consumer. They assert that the seller or manufacturer of goods sent to Canada pays the duty for the pleasure of selling us his goods. That is, an American dealer will sell a bill of goods to a Canadian customer at so much lower a figure, that the duty is covered and the consumer has no extra price so pay? This is the theory but what is the practice. The importers of Toronto got Minister Bowell in a corner the other day and laid before him the vicious maladministration of his department in no mistakeable terms. The whole tenor of the facts elicited by the conference went to show that the vexatious regulations of the department tend to increase the cost of the goods to the consumer. An extract from the report will illustrate:—

"The discussion upon this point gave rise to the question of the duty charged on packages, which the crockery and glassware dealers feel especially undesirable, their packages being so expensive. Mr. Gowans called attention to this matter, and gave some figures showing the great additional expense entailed upon the business of his own firm by the "package clause." Mr. Bowell said he supposed the extra duty was added to the amount charged to the consumer, and that really the dealer lost nothing.

Mr. Gowans—Generally speaking it affects us this way since the new tariff came into operation: it requires a much larger capital to do the same amount of business than it did before. Of course the consumer has to pay for it."

This shows that Mr. Bowell frankly admits that the tariff adds to the cost of the article to the consumer, thus admitting that at last the consumer pays the duty. It was also shown that the consumer gets no benefit from the special prices allowed to the Canadian importer to offset the duty. No matter what price the importer may buy his goods at, the department of customs revises the invoice and the goods are appraised up to the highest possible figure and thus the importer is compelled to add extra prices to his wares and the poor consumer has to pay an extra figure for the goods. The importer is thereby deprived of the chance of giving the retail customer the advantage of the sharp bargain he has driven in the purchase of his goods. The N.P. Government seem bound to exact their pound of flesh—to seize the last cent in the way of taxes, that their custom law and its absurd and inefficient administration by Mr. Bowell will admit of. It doesn't make any difference to the Government, or Mr. Bowell, who heartlessly "supposes the duty is added to the amount charged to the consumer." It is some satisfaction, at least, to have Hon. Mr. Bowell, Minister of Customs, admit that the consumer pays the duty.

Canadians in Dakota.

The Tory journals, with an effrontery phenomenal even to them, deny that there has been any considerable exodus of Canadians to the United States. Dakota is heard from thus: Prof. Bryce has returned to Winnipeg from a recent visit to Dakota. He says in Northern Dakota there are 30,000 settlers, nearly all Canadians, who, in spite of their chosen place of residence, continue to be greatly attached to the Dominion. He mentions that at Bathgate on July 4th last the orator of the day made a regular spread-eagle speech, in which the United States was extolled at the expense of Great Britain. The audience didn't appreciate it, and expressed their disapproval in a very decided way. In another household that Prof. Bryce visited the dogs and cats were called Lord Dufferin, Lord Lorne, Princess Louise, and so on. If the Dominion Government had dealt fairly with settlers in relation to our Northwest possessions, the vast majority of these Dakota exiles would now have been valuable settlers in Manitoba or some other portion of our Northwest Territories. If the Tory Government at Ottawa loved and looked after the country as earnestly as they do after the interests of the Pacific Railway monopoly, political "colonization" companies and sharky speculators, the settlers in the Northwest could be counted by hundreds where they are now counted only by tens. The feeling of patriotism and loyalty to Canada shown by the Dominion Government-made exiles in Dakota, shows that they did not seek that country from choice, but were driven out by the reckless monopoly-manipulated land policy of the cabal, to whom for the time are committed the destinies of the Dominion.

The N.P. organs are greatly elated because Canadian manufacturers are exporting cotton to England. If they reflected what this fact means, they would not be so jubilant. It simply means that the people of Canada have by way of the tariff subsidized Canadian cotton manufacturers, who by virtue of this encouragement, have over produced and glutted the market. But the manufacturers, instead of recouping the people by giving them cheap cotton, prefer to make England a slaughter market, or shut down their mills and cease production to enhance the price of their goods, thus throwing numbers of operatives out of employment at the beginning of a hard winter.

THE MAYORALTY.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—

As Mr. H. H. Smith, our present Mayor, some time ago, signified his intention of not seeking re-election to the office of Mayor of the Town of Peterborough, at the earnest request and solicitation of a very large number of the representative ratepayers, I now offer myself as a candidate for that office.

For many years, I, as Councillor, have represented you, and have always striven diligently and faithfully to perform my duty towards my constituents and the public at large, and I now confidently refer you to and rely upon my labors and honest exertions in your behalf.

If elected, it will ever be my pleasure and honor to do my utmost to preserve and advance the interests of your town, and by strict integrity, economy and attention to your affairs, to merit the good will and esteem of my fellow citizens.

I do not intend, nor will I be able to make a personal canvass, but take this means of asking the votes of each of the independent electorate of this town, remaining

"Upright Pianos."

A few extracts from the numerous endorsements by the leading artists of the World as to their Superiority:—

The pianoforte of your make used at last concert is the most admirable ins ment I have ever seen. Please send to address in London one of your Upri Pianos. This, I think, is the best endo ment of your instrument I can give yo CHRISTINE NILSSON.

Neither in Europe or America have I s an Upright to equal yours.—ELI GERSTER GARDINI.

In all the qualities an artist can req your Upright Pianos surpass anythi have ever seen.—SOFIA SCALCHI.

It is superior in quality of tone and ev ness of action to any instrument I knew CLARA LOUISE KELLOGG.

Having had an opportunity of using y New Concert Upright Piano at the conce given by Her Majesty's Opera Company, beg to compliment you upon your gr success. You can justly claim a superio over any piano we have hitherto seen. concert purposes and accompanying voice.—ITALO CAMPANINI, ANTONIO GA SI, ANNA DE PELOCOA, EMIL ARTEMA.

The successful manner in which your right Piano has stood the severest test such as Toronto's has been applied to Grand Piano only, and it commands our qualified endorsement.—OLE BULL, E THURSBY, ALFRED H. PEASE, MAUR STRAKOSCH.

LAKEFIELD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A BARREN BEAR HUNT.

It is not often that Richard Purser, the jovial Boniface and veteran Nimrod, of this hamlet, gets fooled in the forest, but sometimes—well, first the deer hunt. A few days since Mr. Purser and party, composed of J. Dinwoodie, Couch Grylls, and Smoke, an Indian guide, went forth on a still hunt. They succeeded in securing three fine deer, but the snow going off, put an end to their sport; it was no longer possible to track the noble stag. Mr. Purser happened to be roaming at some distance from the camp, when he thought he saw evidences of a bear, a game worthy of his skill. He determined to beard the bear in his den, and approached the hole in a tree where evidently Bruin was "at home," and his belief was confirmed by hearing noises—ursa major and minor notes we suppose—which roused the hunter to greater enthusiasm. He returned in great glee to the camp, mustered the whole force—horse, foot and artillery—which returned in heavy marching order to the lair of the bear. About fifty rounds was fired at the denizen of the excavated tree. These having no effect, the party advanced, and thrusting the muzzles of the guns into the hole, discharged them. Nothing resulting, the seige was raised. An hour afterwards on returning to the spot, the discovery was made that the bear-like noises were caused by the wintry wind sighing and moaning around the roots and crannies of a tenantless hollow tree. The disgust of the party and of Richard may be imagined, and it will be some time before "Richard is himself again." It will require many a foaming flagon of Labatt's, quaffed in the cosy precincts of the Lakefield House bar parlour, to drown the recollections of mistaking the whistling of the wind for the growl of a soliped. The bare allusion to the hypothetical bear, is more than the party can bear.

PETERBOROUGH PRESBYTERY.

SPECIAL MEETING.

A special meeting of the Presbytery of Peterborough was held in the First Presbyterian Church, Port Hope, on Wednesday, Nov. 21st, Rev. C. H. Cook, of Baltimore, Moderator, presiding.

The following members were present: Revs. A. N. Bell, N. Clarke, J. Cleland, D. McCrea, B.D., S. W. Smith, P. Duncan, E. F. Torrance, R. J. Beattie, W. H. Jamieson and W. Bennett.

The object of the meeting was to consider the calls from Orangeville and Guelph to the Rev. R. J. Beattie.

The Orangeville congregation was represented by the Rev. A. McFaul and Mr. McCormick. The Guelph congregation by the Rev. R. Torrance, Messrs. McBean, Hobson and Hodgkins. After considerable discussion, Mr. Beattie was translated to Guelph, Ont., by his own preference. There being no other business, the Presbytery adjourned. Mr. Beattie will preach his farewell sermon on Sunday, Dec. 2nd.

Rev. Mr. McCrea will preach in the First Presbyterian Church on Sunday, Dec. 9th, and declare the pulpit vacant.

If you are troubled with a "hacking cough," DOWNS' ELIXIR, will give you relief at once. Warranted as recommended, or money refunded. Price, 25c., 50c. and $1.00 per bottle. 46-tf

NORWOOD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

RAILWAY NOTES.

During the past week considerable activity has been observed in the vicinity of the station grounds here. Large quantities of heavy timber and sawn lumber have been deposited there for a tank house and other building purposes. Mr. Thomas Work has a large gang of men and a number of teams widening the railway bed for a considerable distance to provide increased shunting grounds, and otherwise improving the premises set apart for the station. Messrs. Rathbun & Son have in hand the construction of the station house, which, it is said, will be about 200 feet in length, a very good-sized building, indicating that Norwood will be a place of some importance on the line of the Ontario and Quebec Railway. Work will be commenced on the station house immediately, and the contractors intend bringing the material in a prepared state from their own mills.

STANDARD TIME.

The churches, factories, public institutions, as well as the people generally, of this village, have adopted the standard time, and all feel very grateful to the originator of this movement, for the success of his scheme.

THE IRON HORSE.

All our people are anxiously looking for the arrival of the iron horse, which is expected to be "tooting" through our village by the end of this week. The construction train on Monday last was only about eight miles east of Norwood, with a gang of seventy men laying the track at the rate of about a mile and a half a day. It will be received here with considerable rejoicing, and our band is practising for the occasion the celebrated tune, "See, the conquering hero comes."

A FORTUNE.

Intelligence has been received here, through Mr. Postmaster Butterfield, that a fortune of $30,000 awaits a navvy who has been working for some time past on the Ontario and Quebec Railway.

N. M. I.

A meeting of the directors of the Norwood Mechanics' Institute was held on Friday afternoon last, when Messrs. Thos. M. Grover, Thos. Burke, Thos. Fraser and Dr. Pettigrew were appointed to collect subscriptions and to solicit for members for the Institute; and Messrs. I. Davidson, T. Burke and W. H. Mullins were appointed a committee to arrange the reunions for the season. The Institute is now in good working order, and it is expected that a generous and appreciative public will substantially encourage the directors in the noble work of sustaining this highly meritorious and valuable local institution.

A CAR LOAD.

Nominally a car load is 20,000 pounds. It is also 70 barrels of salt, 70 of lime, 90 of flour, 60 of whiskey, 200 sacks of flour, 6 cords of soft wood, 18 or 20 head of cattle, 50 or 60 head of hogs, 90 to 100 head of sheep, 9,000 feet of solid boards, 17,000 feet of siding, 13,000 feet of flooring, 40,000 shingles, one-half less green lumber, one-tenth less joist, scantling, and other large timbers, 340 bushels of wheat, 400 of barley, 400 of corn, 680 of oats, 300 of flaxseed, 366 of apples, 340 of Irish potatoes, 300 of sweet potatoes, 1,000 bushels of bran.

The Egyptians have sustained another defeat at the hand of the Abyssinians.

Borough Brevities.

A literary society has been formed in connection with Carswell Lodge of Good Templars

Mr. Wm. English is putting the finishing touches to ten canoes, to be shipped to England.

George Street Methodist Church holds its anniversary services on Sunday and Monday, Dec. 30th, and 31st.

Mr. L. Laplante, has got no trace of the thief who tapped his till to the tune of $45 dollars a few days ago.

The membership of St. Luke's Church of England Temperance society is about one hundred and fifteen.

The Midland Railway is putting up a signal hut at the junction of the Main line and the Link, on Brock street.

At the police court, on Wednesday, of last week, Mary Barnhart was sentenced for theft, to one year in the Central Prison.

Watches, Clocks, Jewellry, etc., carefully repaired and warranted at Haghan's. Office lately occupied by Elias Burnham, Simcoe Street. 18-tf

Work on the excavations for the enlargement of St. Paul's Church has been begun by the contractor for the masonry, Mr. J. J. Hartley.

If "Subscriber" who writes about misappropriation of wood, had sent his name with his letter, the latter would have received some attention.

A description of the improvements to Little Lake Cemetery this year, is in type, but is held over, with other local matter till next issue.

A fire in Port Perry last Sunday morning destroyed a large portion of the business part of the town. Loss $150,000, fairly covered by insurance.

The smoking car of a Grand Junction train, Mr. Wm. Morris conductor, the other day left the track and jumped on to the rails again without doing any damage.

The mails from Toronto arrived at the Post Office on Wednesday at eleven o'clock—five minutes ahead of time. Score one for the Link and the new time table.

Rev. W. C. Bradshaw has been appointed a member of the executive committee of the newly formed Diocesan Branch of the Church of England Temperance Soiety.

For a hard cold, with pain in the head, bones, or through the chest, take DOWNS' ELIXIR, at once and in liberal doses, cover up well in bed, and our word for it, you will soon be well. 46-tf.

There will be a grand organ recital in St. John's Church, about the middle of December. There is no use in speaking of the nature of the musical treat in store, to those who have heard former recitals.

In our advertising columns will be found the card of Miss Susan H. Bennett, of North Monaghan, who acknowledges the receipt through Peterborough Lodge, No. 135, A. O. U. W., of two thousand dollars, the amount of a beneficiary devised to her by her brother, Dr. Bennet, who was a member of Priceville Lodge No. 140. Thus a trifling investment resulted in a substantial benefit.

PERSONAL.

Rev. Mr. Therrien, of the Grand Ligne Mission, Quebec, occupied the Baptist church pulpit on Sunday.

Mr. A. J. Ritchie left on Monday morning to spend a term at the Royal School of Gunnery, Kingston.

Mr. F. Palmer, of Dakota, formerly a resident of Peterborough, accompanied by his bride, is spending the honeymoon in town.

Mr. T. S. Cole, the travelling secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, was in town on Sunday and addressed a meeting in the Association rooms in the evening.

Mr. A. N. Diamond, late of Napanee, has become a citizen of Peterborough and has entered into the grain buying business here. While he carried on the business in Napanee he earned a reputation for square dealing and enterprise which will commend him to the confidence of those in the trade here.

Right Reverend Bishop Jamot assisted last Wednesday at the ceremony attending the taking of the final vows by several young ladies at Loretto Abbey, Toronto. Among those who renounced the world forever, on this occasion, was Miss Twomey, of Fenelon Falls, who will be known henceforth as Sister Leontina.

Vital Questions.

Ask the most eminent physician
Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?
And they will tell you unhesitatingly
"Some form of Hops!"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians:
"What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—
"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu."
Ask the same physicians
"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia; constipation, indigestion, billiousness, malarial fever, ague, &c.," and they will tell you:
"Mandrake! or Dandelion!"
Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable
And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed which is so varied in its operations that no disease or ill health can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is Harmless for the most frail woman, weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II.

"Patients
"Almost dead or nearly dying"
For years, and given up by physicians of Bright's and other kidney diseases, liver complaints, severe coughs called consumption, have been cured.
Women gone nearly crazy!
From agony of neuralgia, nervousness, wakefulness and various diseases peculiar to women.
People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of Rheumatism.
Inflammatory and chronic, or suffering from scrofula!
Erysipelas!
Salt rheum, blood poisoning, dyspepsia, indigestion, and in fact nearly all diseases frail
Nature is hair to
Have been cured by Hop Bitters, proof of Which can be found in every neighborhood in the known world. 46-tf

A strike is impending in England that will throw out 150,000 miners.

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT ON TEMPERANCE CONSISTENCY.

In the brilliant speech made by Sir Richard Cartwright at Napanee on Monday last, the following passage occurs: "If Mr. Prayn (the Tory candidate and a liquor merchant) sold good liquors—and he believed the gentleman did, if he did not take too much of his own good liquor, he (Sir Richard) was not the man to throw his occupation in his teeth. He left that for the Conservative party, led by Sir Leonard Tilley and seconded by A. H. Roe to do. (Hear, hear.) All his life long he (Sir Richard) had been a strictly temperate man. The difference between him and those gentlemen was that he had to a considerable extent practised while those gentlemen had preached. He had not been displaying himself on temperance platforms from one end of the country to the other, but he had laid down this rule for his guidance, and advised his friends to follow it, that when an eminent public man.

REGULARLY DISGRACED HIMSELF

before a great mass of the people and on the floor of Parliament, that man was not fit to be trusted by the people of Canada. (Cheers.) He well remembered when at an important crisis in our history, that hon. gentleman's unfortunate habits were likely to lead to a great misfortune to the country, he being then one of his supporters, sent the hon. gentleman a message to the effect that if he did not put an end to his evil habit and come and attend to his business he (Sir Richard Cartwright) would forthwith renounce him on the floor of Parliament and state the reason why. Never did Sir Leonard Tilley, let alone A. H. Roe, work so effective a cure in so short a time as did that message."

Naught but Death Divorces;

OR,

LADY AUDREY'S SACRIFICE.

"They are very dusty and dirty, my lady," she said; "for you see, Sir Roche would not have them touched."

The dust of years, it seemed to Audrey, lay upon them; yet they were beautiful rooms—large, lofty, light, and magnificently furnished. She saw no signs of preservation; the bookcases, wardrobes, and drawers had evidently been quickly emptied, some pictures had also been hurriedly taken from the walls, the vases and jardinieres still held the withered, dead leaves of what had been blooming flowers.

There was something most sad and pathetic about the rooms; on the mantelpiece of one lay a little gold watch that had long ceased ticking.

"This was lady Villiers' watch without doubt," said Audrey. And she touched it with reverent hands.

"I would not touch anything, my lady," cried Mrs. Grey.

She saw a book—almost the only one there—thickly covered with dust. It was turned over at Adelaide Proctor's beautiful "Legend of Provence."

"Lady Villiers admired good poetry," she said musingly.

She saw a pretty little satin slipper and and a white lace shawl. She could not tell why, but she did not like to touch them. As she stood there she shuddered.

"I cannot tell what it is," she said slowly to Mrs. Grey, "but there is something in the very atmosphere of these rooms that saddens me. I wish I had not seen them—it is as though some one lay dead here."

"They will be all the brighter and more wholesome, my lady, for your having been in them," returned Mrs. Grey.

"They seem to me to have been wrecked rather than emptied," remarked the young wife, looking around. "I could imagine that some one had been here in a violent passion and had half emptied all the rooms without order and method. Why are you staring at me, Mrs. Grey?"

"I beg your pardon, my lady—I was not aware of it. I was listening to you."

"Close the rooms," said Audrey. "I shall never want to see them again. I have often read that apartments have this strange appearance after the people who have used them have died in them. Did Lady Villiers die here? Why do yon look so frightened? Did my husband's mother die here?"

"Yes, my lady," was the subdued reply. And then they left the south wing together.

"I have been through the closed rooms to-day, Roche," she said to her husband when he returned home.

He looked at her with a startled glance.

"Have you? Who was with you?" he asked; and she answered, "Mrs. Grey."

Was it fancy, or did she that same evening really overhear her husband speaking in an angry voice to the housekeeper? Did she fancy it, or did she really hear Mrs. Grey answer, "I could not help it, Sir Roche—indeed I could not. I did my best to avoid arousing suspicion."

She must have imagined the words; she would not believe that she had overheard them.

Some weeks after this she was in the library with Sir Roche, looking over some music, when she came upon a song that she knew well—Blumenthal's "Message."

"I know that," she said, taking it up. She saw written on it, in a flowing Italian hand, the name "Elodie." She repeated it aloud. "What a beautiful name! Have you had a sister or a cousin called Elodie?"

She wondered why he should take the music so abruptly from her hand.

"I did not know there was anything in this house with that name on it," he cried.

"Elodie!" she said again. "It is a beautiful name; it reminds me of the flow of a river. Why, you have destroyed the song!"

He had torn it into pieces and trampled them under his feet.

"I hate the song, the name!" he cried. "Do not speak of them again."

She was very quiet and subdued for some time; the scene had puzzled and troubled her.

Several other things began to puzzle her. She was the idol of half the county, but there was one family that had never called upon her, the Letsoms of Burrowdale.

She noticed that they were never invited to meet them, and she wondered why. She asked Sir Roche about it more than once, but he always returned an evasive answer. One morning she spoke of it to Lady Moreton, who was a great friend of hers.

"Why have the Letsoms never called on me?" she asked.

"Have they not done so?" returned Lady Moreton.

"No," replied Audrey. "They avoid me—they never go where I go. It seems so strange."

Her quick instinct told her that Lady Moreton evaded the question and would not answer it.

"Do tell me," she said; "if there is really any reason, I should like to know it."

"I can imagine no reason," was the answer, "unless it be that they are very religious and look at life in a very serious light."

Lady Villiers opened her beautiful eyes very wide.

"That is what I like," she cried. "But I cannot understand why the fact of their being very religious should prevent them calling upon me."

Lady Moreton looked uncomfortable.

"Some persons are so strange," she said in a half-apologetic tone, "that have such old-fashioned ideas."

"I cannot imagine any ideas, be they as old-fashioned as they may, which could prevent any person from calling upon me," remarked Audrey, proudly.

That same evening Lady Villiers, putting her arms caressingly around her husband's neck, said:

"Roche, could you give a reason why so-called religious people should not visit me?"

She never forgot the flame of anger in his face.

"I cannot. Tell me what you mean, Audrey?" he said.

She repeated her conversation with Lady Moreton. He cried out angrily that he would not allow the Letsoms to come near them, and that Lady Moreton was a woman without common sense. He did not grow calm again until, looking into the eyes of his wife, he saw no suspicion there.

CHAPTER VIII.

Christmas came, and in accordance with their promise Dr. Brooke and his wife spent it at Rowan Abbey. If any doubt had lingered in the rector's mind, it was now dispelled; if any lingering fear, suspicion or dread had shadowed his thoughts about his beautiful daughter, it now ceased to exist.

It was plain that nothing could be more prosperous or bright than her lot. There was no skeleton in the Villiers cupboard.

Audrey told her parents of the closed rooms—the rooms into which Sir Roche would allow no one to enter—and they agreed that it was perfectly natural, as his mother had died there, that he should wish to keep them as they were. They thought that so good a son must make a good husband; they liked him all the better for this trait in his character.

The rector laughed away the last remnant of his fear. He was so sorry for having entertained it, that he was less observant than he might have been. Had he been more attentive, he might at times have seen a smile almost of contempt on the face of some with whom he came in contact. He might have understood the covert sneer when Lord Colvil, one of the guests, complimented him upon having "advanced views."

"I am not aware of it, my lord," he answered with a smile of wonder.

"You have given ample proof of it," said his lordship; and the rector did not ask why.

He might have been struck, too, by the fact that, while half the country worshiped his beautiful daughter, some few held aloof as though there were contamination at Rowan. He might have noticed also how his son-in-law kept near him when he was talking to strangers, and seldom left him. But none of these things struck the rector.

One day he was puzzled. A number of guests were speaking of their plans for the ensuing year, and Lady Moreton said to Sir Roche:

"You will go to London, of course, for the season? Lady Villiers will be presented at the first Drawing-room?"

Dr. Brooke was surprised when Sir Roche, growing white, even to his lips, said he was not quite sure—he should consider about it. The rector saw a sudden gleam of intelligence came over Lady Moreton's face, and—how it was he never could tell—the conversation turned upon the Court of St. James, and how particular the Queen was, and how impossible it was for one to obtain an entree within the highest circle if not blameless and without reproach.

The rector looked in dismay at those around him. Why were they talking in this strain? Then he smiled at his fears; it had nothing to do with his child. Audrey was listening with a bright laughing face; it was by mere accident that such a subject had come to be discussed. He put it aside; it did not concern his daughter.

"Hers was a marriage made in heaven," said the rector to his wife. "It is wonderful what an amount of good Sir Roche and Audrey are doing."

He would have enlarged upon it had he known the full extent of their benevolence. A church was being built, also schools with spacious playgrounds; almshouses too, which overlooked the fields and woods; the small ill-drained cottages were giving way to clean, healthy dwelling houses. Rowan promised to be a model estate.

The rector went away quite satisfied as to his daughter's happiness, and ashamed of the fears he had felt.

Spring came with its fair delicate loveliness, and Sir Roche found that he would have to spend some time in town.

"I shall be sorry," he said, to leave Rowan, Audrey. You have taught me to love the place. I feel now that it is my home; my sweet wife has brightened it until it seems to me like an earthly paradise. I wonder if you will like London, Audrey?"

"I shall like any place where you are," she answered. "It is not the place—it is you that make home."

"You have learnt to love me well, Audrey," he said, drawing her gently to him, and kissing the sweet face.

She looked at him with with thoughtful eyes.

"My love has made my life complete," she responded.

So they talked together while the tender raidaace of the spring brightened all the land. No one on seeing Sir Roche would have recognised in him the miserable man whose lips had trembled with a curse he dare not utter. His very face had changed; it had grown hopeful, bright and animated. The winter of sorrow had passed over him, and the summer sun of happiness shone upon him.

It was a sight never to be forgotten when her ladyship, the beautiful young mistress of Rowan, left the Abbey for London. Sir Roche was touched more than he liked to own. The poor and the children thronged around her ladyship to say good-bye to her. They wanted nothing from her—only to look once more on the beautiful face of her who was always so kind and gentle to them.

"How they love you, Audrey," said her husband, as the train steamed out of the station. "I am almost jealous of them."

"You might be jealous of one," she replied, "but not of a crowd."

He raised her hands to his lips.

"My darling," he said, "I love you with such a pure and perfect love that jealousy is not possible to me."

They talked so happily and lovingly, little dreaming of the tragedy that would be played before they saw Rowan Abbey again.

CHAPTER IX.

Fashionable London opened its arms to receive Lady Villiers. She was not presented at Court, but she never asked the reason. It was sufficient for her that Sir Roche had not mentioned the matter.

The fact did not seem to affect her popularity. She was overwhelmed with invitations. The beautiful Lady Villiers very soon became a celebrity. In the midst of the gay world, with every temptation around her, she preserved the same sweet wisdom, purity, truth, and loyalty that had always distinguished her. She made her influence felt.

Above all things she disliked cant. She never touched upon religious subjects unless the circumstances suited. None the less her influence as a good woman was felt. No one liked to speak lightly of sacred things before her. People in her presence did not jest about a man's truth or a woman's honor.

There was something in her pure face and clear, steadfast eye which elevated men's thoughts as they looked at her—something which forbade evil speech, which stopped light, false words on the speaker's lips.

"Do you like this life, Audrey," asked her husband one day.

She looked at him with a charming smile.

"It is very pleasant she said, "but I should not like it always. You are its chief charm."

Day by day she grew to love him more deeply, more dearly, more tenderly; so the coming blow, when it fell, fell more heavily.

One lovely morning in May Lady Villiers sat alone in the drawing-room of her London house. Sir Roche came in with a pleased smile.

"Audrey," he said, "I have good news. I have met an old friend of yours who is anxious to renew her acquaintance with you."

She looked at him.

"I did not know that I had any old friends in London," she said; "they are all new ones."

"Lady Rockhaven claims to be an old one."

"Lady Rockhaven!" she repeated. "Why, that is Bertha Hamlyn's name. Is she in town?"

"Yes, and very desirous of seeing you. I like Lady Rockhaven herself very well; but she has a clique of friends for whom I do not care. I would not allow her to introduce any of them here, if I were you Audrey. They are most of them very fast, and talk loudly about horses and so forth, if they do no worse."

And Sir Roche described to his simple, innocent wife the different varieties of ladies who composed what is called "society."

On that same day Lady Rockhaven called, and professed great delight at seeing Audrey again. Lady Rockhaven had made a position for herself, but it did not quite satisfy her. She wanted to climb higher, and it struck her that in beautiful, wealthy Lady Villiers she had found a medium.

"Marriage has not altered you in the least, Lady Villiers," she said. "You are just the same."

"Has it altered you," asked Audrey, with a smile.

"Yes, it has. I love the world and life ten times better than I ever did before," said Lady Rockhaven. "I have more to live for."

But in some vague way the Lady Audrey not quite satisfied with her newly-found friend.

Shortly after a ball was given at Rock House by Lady Rockhaven, and Sir Roche and Audrey attended it. Audrey was the loveliest woman present. She wore a beautiful costume of white and gold, and her wonderful loveliness was the theme of all present. Lady Rockhaven was jealous of her. She wished her to grace her ball, but she did not intend to be so utterly extinguished by her superior grace and beauty. It was jealousy perhaps that caused her to be somewhat brusque with her lovely young rival.

Lady Villiers was talking to the Countess of Northendon, when a lovely golden-haired woman, most exquisitely dressed, crossed the ball-room on Lord Rockhaven's arm.

"Who is that?" said Lady Villiers. "What a beautiful face! What a lovely woman! Who is she?"

The Countess of Northendon shrugged her white shoulders.

"That is the fault I find with Lady Rockhaven. She will not keep her balls select. That woman has no business here. I am not a prude, but I do not care to meet such people."

"Who is she?" persisted Audrey.

"She is Lady Glenarvon now, I suppose. She was Lady Tirwell some time since."

"Why has she changed her name?" asked innocent Audrey.

Again the Countess shrugged her shoulders.

"My dear Lady Villiers, she said, "do you never read the divorce cases?"

"Never," answered Audrey emphatically.

"Surely you must have heard of that one—'Tirwell versus Glenarvon?' It has been discussed at every breakfast-table and in every club in London. I never did or could understand the right or wrong of the matter; all that I know is that Lady Tirwell disappeared under a cloud. Now Lady Glenarvon has suddenly appeared, and she is received everywhere. She has been to Court. The line must be drawn somewhere; and I do not think any divorcee would be welcome there."

Lady Villiers was listening with great attention.

"Divorcee!" she repeated. "You do not mean to say that that beautiful lady has been divorced?"

"What else can I mean? Lord Tirwell is abroad somewhere, and she has married Lord Glenarvon," Audrey looked up in such wonder that her companion was struck. "Do you really mean," she said, "that that lady has two husbands living?"

The Countess laughed.

"You are so delightfully simple, my dear Lady Villiers. Of course she hasn't two husbands; the law relieved her of one, and she took another."

"The law could not; no law could—divine law forbids it!" cried Audrey. And the Countess laughed again.

"It is the question of the day," she said; "I leave it to wiser heads than mine to settle."

"But it is monstrous!" cried Audrey, her fair face flushing. "I did not think such things were permitted in a christian land."

"You are new to the outer world," said the Countess, half sadly. "I read and hear of divorce cases continually. I could tell you stories of divorce that would frighten you—of false swearing, of conspiracies, of persecution—of women with broken hearts, of men with ruined homes. Not till the end of the world will the true records of the divorce court be known. I—but it is useless talking."

"Why do people receive such women?" askan Audrey. "I would not. There are no words stronger or more sacred than these—'Those whom God has joined together let no man put asunder;' there can be no doubt as to what is the right course."

"We cannot discuss the question in a ball-room," said the Countess.

As she spoke Lady Rockhaven came up to them, and the Countess went away.

"Audrey," said her friend, "I want to introduce you to Lady Glenarvon; she has been enquiring about you, and is very anxious to know you."

Never in her life had Lady Villiers looked so proud as when she raised her head and gazed with calm eyes into the handsome face of the hostess.

"I must decline, Bertha; I do not wish to make Lady Glenarvon's acquaintance. I beg you will not mention her to me; I decline decidedly to know her."

Perhaps Lady Rockhaven's temper had been a little ruffled; she looked very impatient.

"May I ask why?" she said,

"You know why, Bertha; and allow me to add that I wonder you should make such a woman your friend or invite her to your house."

"Will you tell me why, Lady Villiers?" she said. "I have a great desire to hear the reason."

"You know the reason; I have just heard it. That person whom you call Lady Glenarvon has—oh, shame Bertha, that you should make me say it!—her rightful husband living abroad; she is a divorcee!"

"This is amusing," laughed Lady Rockhaven—but for the moment she hated the woman whom she felt was right. "Yes, my dear Lady Villiers, decline to know Lady Glenarvon because she is a divorcee! This is one of the jests of the season."

"I do not see that it is a jest," said Audrey.

"But I do. What a capital story to tell everywhere. 'People who live in glass houses should not throw stones.'"

"I do not live in a glass house," said Lady Villiers, proudly. "I would rather have died a thousand times than have gone into a divorce-court."

Lady Rockhaven seemed suddenly to recollect herself.

"Of course I know, Audrey, that divorce-courts were not make for such as you; but, all the same, I would not, were I in your place, say too much against divorce."

"I shall never speak of it without reason; and I shall tell the truth," she said.

"What excuse am I to make to Lady Glenarvon?" asked Bertha.

"Make no excuse; I am willing to abide by what I have said. Why should you or I seek for false excuses? Why frame a pretence that she must see through? I think she has acted wrongly, and I decline to know her."

A strange smile curled on Lady Rockhaven's lips.

"You will not get on in society, Audrey, if you hold bygone opinions," she said.

"Society is quite a secondary consideration with me," returned Lady Villiers. "If the leaders of society refused to tolerate wrong doing, this would be a very much better world."

"I have neither time nor inclination to reform it," laughed Lady Rockhaven. "Now remember, I warn you not to send that message to Lady Glenarvon. You will not like the consequences, I am sure."

"They cannot affect me; and, even if they did, I would never pretend to countenance that which I believe to be wrong."

"Well, you will remember that I warned you; whatever happens, do not blame me, Audrey."

"Nothing will happen," said Lady Villiers; "but when I have more time to talk to you, I shall try to persuade you to give up such friends."

Lady Rockhaven laughed.

"You may try, my dear, but you will not succeed," she returned. And then the conversation ended.

Thousands of young Men and Women—married and single—through the effects of vicious youthful habits, or excessive indulgence in later years, have so undermined their general systems as to induce almost every other disease, and the real cause of these troubles being scarcely ever suspected, they are drugged and doctored for everything but the right one. The ordinary modes of treating troubles of this nature do no good. The JERUBEBIN COMBINATOIN REMEDY is offered as A Speedy and Certain Cure, as hundreds afflicted with every form of disease have been restored to complete health by its use, after all other remedies failed. This remedy is adapted to every condition of nervous debility and weakness in either sex, but especially in cases arising from imprudence. Its recuperative powers are truly astonishing, and its continued use for a short time changes the languid, debilitated condition to one of renewed life and vigor.

President Arthur has the reputation of being the hardest man to interview in the United States.

Horatio G. Billings, lumber dealer of Chicago, has suspended. Liabilities $100,000.

Chubbuck, confidential clerk of J. T. Robbin, New York, has absconded with $2,000.

Floods are reported along the banks of the Mississippi. Several houses have been washed away and lives lost.

The flags in Buffalo were at half-mast on Thursday out of respect to the memory of the men lost in the recent gales on the lake.

Miss Hanson, the Belle of Maple Park, Ill., committed suicide because her father opposed her marriage to a man who drank whiskey.

W. C. Cousins, of Tarrytown, N.Y., committed suicide at Jacksonville, Fla., because he thought two detectives were after him.

Chas. Miles, a colored waiter in New York, killed Henrietta Hall, who had deserted him, and then made away with himself.

A negro servant at Dyersburg, Tenn., "keeked" his master, who discharged him. The servant then fatally stabbed the master and the latter's father.

Sixty vessels and 55 lives were lost on the lakes between Nov. 11 and Nov. 17. Seventy-six of the vessels valued at $400,000; nothing was saved.

The annual convention of the National Grange opened at Washington on Thursday. Twenty-seven states were represented by Masters of State Granges.

The editor of the Corsario, Rio Janerio, was recently assassinated opposite his own office for publishing scandalous stories reflecting an influential family.

A lunatic has been terrifying the people of Ohio, Va. One day he called at the house of a Mrs. Powell, brained her, ran off with her boy and brained him.

A pool comprising fifty paper mills throughout the Northwest has resolved to shut down all the mills from Dec. 1 to Feb. 4. This will throw 2,000 men out.

The Irish convention at Syracuse, N. Y., on Thursday, on motion of Father Lynch, resolved to raise a special fund of $25,000 from New York for presentation to Parnell.

Johnson, a man between 50 and 60, criminally assaulted a nine-year-old girl at Louisville, Ky., and left her for dead on the floor. The man is in danger of lynching if caught.

O. H. Oldroyd has leased the old Lincoln homestead for a term of years, and will preserve it as nearly as possible just as Lincoln left it when he assumed the Presidency.

New York transactions in tea on Thursday aggregated 1,250,000 pounds, the largest since the war. The crop of black tea is reported short, and a rise in price anticipated.

Geo. Darrell and Godfred Brand, of Pittsburg, Pa., had a dispute with a conductor on the Pittsburg and Lake Erie road. In revenge they three times tried to wreck his train.

Smallpox in a malignant form has broken out at Girardville, Pa. Two girls named Higgins have died. Another girl is in a precarious condition. The disease is spreading.

The Irish convention at Syracuse, N. Y., passed a resolution pledging its members not to use English goods in any shape or form. It was then decided to recommend the postponing of the closing of American contributions to the Parnell fund until next St. Patrick's day.

Eleven people were poisoned at New Haven, Conn., by eating biscuits in which there was a large quantity of arsenic. There was enough of the poison in each biscuit to poison four men, and the vomiting produced by the overdose alone saved the victims' lives.

Wm. H. Vanderbilt owns $47,000,000 in United States registered four per cent. bonds, a draft for the interest on which is mailed to him quarterly from the treasury. The interest on these bonds amounts as follows: Per annum, $1,882,000; per quarter, $470,500; per month, $150,883.-83⅓; per day, $5,156.16; per hour, $214.84; per minute, $3.58.

NO WAR SHIPS WANTED.

Admiral Porter, of the United States navy, wants to have some of the surplus revenue devoted to the construction of war-ships on the upper lakes, which in the event of war with Great Britain can be used to destroy the entrance to the Welland Canal. Whereupon the Hamilton Times remarks that the old crank ought to be hamstrung. What business have England and the United States to think of fighting each other? Both have enough to do in the way of peaceful development. And what interest would Canada have in a quarrel between those two nations? American statesmen had better get rid of their surplus revenue by reducing the tariff than by building ironclads. There is nothing like free trade and an extensive foreign commerce to make the people interested in the preservation of peace.

BROAD TIRED WAGONS.

A farmer who has used a wagon with broad tires on the wheels long enough to ascertain their relative value as compared with narrow tires, writes; A four-inch tire will carry two tons over soft ground with greater ease to the team than a 2½-inch tire will carry one ton. The wheels are not so much strained by stones and rough track on the road, and the road is not cut up, but, on the contrary, is packed down and kept smooth. The prevalent idea that the draught is increased by widening the tire is altogether baseless; on the contrary, a wide tire reduces the draught. The extra cost of the tire is repaid many times over every year in the extra work that can be done by a team.

"WILLIE DID IT."

A JEALOUS LOVER MURDERS HIS SWEETHEART, HER MAID AND HIMSELF.

William Brown, a medical student residing in Lanarkshire, Scotland, quarreled with Miss Spiers, his intended, Sunday night on the highway near her house, accusing her of unfaithfulness. He cut her throat and stabbed a maid servant who rushed to her assistance, and then cut his own throat. Before dying the servant dragged herself to the house, knocked faintly at the door, and receiving no reply, traced with bloody fingers on the doorstep the words, "Willie did it."

Dear Sirs,—For over twenty years I have suffered greatly from Nasal Catarrh; sometimes being unable to smell or taste properly. The disease caused a severe pain over the eyes, and frequently stopped my writing on account of dizziness, The phlegm of my throat gave me much annoyance, especially in company, balls of which would occasionally fall down into my throat, and I could seldom breathe through my nose. I have taken quarts of various medicines without any apparent benefit, until I was induced, by your agent of 69 Muter street, to try your Fountain of Health. After using five bottles I am prepared to give it as my honest opinion that for the cure of Catarrh it is a grand success. I have recommended it to many of my friends, one of whom endorses his testimonial with mine. Wishing you deserved success, I am gratefully yours, JOSEPH BROWN, Bookkeeper, 52, Sherborne street, Toronto. 47-2t

"Yes," said Mrs. Soddington: "Mrs. Smith is a clever sort of woman, no doubt; but, then, she is so vulgar! Would you believe it, she wears her own teeth!"

To fatten and prepare horses, cattle sheep, and swine for market, Dr. Scott's Prepared Spice is the best medicine yet discovered for the purpose; it gives the animal a fine appearance. For sale by all Druggists, and Patent Medicine Dealers.

An Arkansas man found after he had married a woman that she was a widow and he had helped to hang her first husband. It is presumed she married him out of revenge.

A Little Behind Hand.

Some people are always a little behind hand in all undertakings; delays are dangerous, and none more so than in neglecting what seems a trifling cold. Prudent people break up the ill effects by timely use of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. thus preventing serious lung troubles.

"O, ma," exclaimed a little Austin girl, glancing at the steam-gauge on a stationary engine, "its 60 o'clock. I didn't know it ever got so late as that."

Waterbrash Cured.

Twelve years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia and Waterbrash, with which I suffered extremely ever since until last spring. I tried the Crowfoot Bitters and less than one dollar's worth cured me perfectly.

An Omaha pastor says the Protestant church embraces three times as many women as men. That is all right, but we thought it might be just as well to let the husbands know about it.

An Answer Wanted

Can any one bring us a case of Kidney or Liver Complaint that Electric Bitters will not speedily cure? We say they can not, as thousands of cases permanently cured and who are daily recommending Electric Bitters, will prove. Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Weak Back, or any urinary complaint quickly cured. They purify the blood, regulate the bowels, and act directly on the diseased parts. Every bottle guaranteed. For sale at 50c. a bottle by Taylor & McDonald.

An old farmer in Texas having said at a church meeting, "I have belonged to the church thirty years and, bless the Lord, it has never cost me a dollar," the good preacher arose and responded, "The Lord bless your stingy old soul."

A Suggestion.

A day's pleasure at your disposal, instead of a day's agony. Everyone who has corns can testify to the constant discomfort they produce. "I could have enjoyed the ball, or the picnic, or some other social pastime; but, oh! how my corns ached!" No necessity now, for such complaints. PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR removes the cause speedily. Try it. Beware of another article "just as good." Take only Putnam's. Sold everywhere. N. C. POLSON & CO., Kingston, Proprietors.

"You ought to be in your own room now," said Amy, "we have a teacher that rules the roost." "Well," replied the Boston high school girl, "I'd be ashamed of myself; you should say, "governs the horizontal perch on which the fowl reposes,' not 'rules the roost.'"

A Lawyer's Opinion of Interest to all

J. A. Tawney, Esq., a leading attorney of Winona, Minn., writes: "After using it for more than three years, I take great pleasure in stating that I regard Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, as the best remedy in the world for Coughs and Colds, It has never failed to cure the most severe colds I have had, and invariably relieves the pain in the chest." Trial Bottles of this sure cure for all Throat and Lung Diseases may be had Free at Taylor & McDonald's Drug Store. Large size, $1.00.

"Dollars and cents are a mighty valuable consideration in matrimony," said Mr. Blipking to his wife. "Yes, dear, I'm aware of it." "And it is seldom that it is equally divided. Have you noticed that?" "Yes, dear; in our own case, for instance. You had all the dollars and I had all the sense."

About Us All.

Constipation makes half the people sick. You are dizzy, have bad breath and taste, can't eat, can't sleep well, head aches, nervous, irritable. Can't work it off, can't rest it off. Well your Liver must be invigorated. Your food must digest properly. Now save a doctor's bill with a bottle of ZO-PE-SA. You will be surprised with a few doses. ZOPESA is a positive cure for these troubles, because it acts upon the Stomach and Liver and through the Liver the system and Bowels must be regulated. Ask for a sample. 41-4t

In high dudgeon: "I cannot understand what offended Mr. Duday last night at the party," said the high school girl; "he and his company took their departure in high dudgeon very early, however." "Why, I thought they left in the same carriage they came in," replied Amy.

The introduction of Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya constitutes a new era in popular medicine, as it is seldom that a purely scientific preparation, compounded on physiological principles, is offered to the public. Being composed only of ingredients that enter into the formation of the system, it is perfectly safe under all circumstances, and may be taken with benefit wherever there is nervous prostration and general debility from whatever cause. It immediately augments and sustains the vital forces, imparting vigor to all the organs of the body. It is especially adapted to women prostrate with family cares, and delicate children, being as agreeable to take as the finest liqueur. Sold by all druggists at $1.

MANHOOD HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price in a sealed envelope, only 6c. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

On the first day of December next there will be offered for sale at the office of Mr. C. A. Weller, that valuable house and lot on Antrim street, known as the late David Carlisle property. It is situated in one of the healthiest and most picturesque portions of the town, and all those desirous of purchasing town property should be on hand at the sale. 47-2t

The Port Perry Fire.

In the terribly destructive fire that swept away a large portion of the town of Port Perry, on Sunday morning, two former residents of Peterborough, Messrs. Lang & Meharry, hardware merchants, met with a loss of $15,000, which was partially covered with an insurance of $7,000. Mr. Lang was a former resident of Otonabee, and Mr. Meharry of Cavan.

St. Paul's Social.

The social held on Thursday night in aid of the Foreign Mission Fund, was a most pronounced success in every way. Mr. G. M. Roger occupied the chair, and Misses Johnston, Rush and Walsh, and Messrs. Elliott, Porteous and Shaw furnished extremely fine music, Messrs. Roper and Dr. Clark gave good recitations, and Rev. Mr. Torrance a neat address.

A Narrow Escape.

A few days ago Mr. John Kelly, Superintendent of the Little Lake Cemetery, had a narrow escape from serious, if not fatal, injury. He was grooming his horse, when the brute resented his attention to his hind legs, and kicked out savagely, hitting Mr. Kelly in the side of his face, with the whole sole of the foot. The blow knocked him against the wall of the stable, and was followed by two more vicious kicks in the back and side. Mr. Kelly was severely bruised in the face, his teeth loosened, and painful wounds were inflicted on his back and side. Had the horse been sharp shod the injuries would have been much more serious. As it is, they are painful enough.

Rather "High" Poultry.

The sons of sunny Italy who are hanging around town since the completion of the "Missing Link," are not at all particular in the matter of food. On Sunday a gentleman observed one of them pick up four dead hens, which had succumbed to the weather during the late cold snap, and had been thrown out at Mr. Elias Burnham's place, on the Gravel Road. The dead hens were stowed away under a capacious waterproof coat, borne off in triumph, and were no doubt cooked and devoured as rare luxuries. They must have been rather "high" eating.

The Cheeky Tramp.

This is the season when the keen teeth of the winter wind bite through the scanty attire of the tramp, and suggest a little sneak thief enterprise. On Monday morning, in broad daylight,—about seven o'clock—a tramp who had been begging at other doors in the neighborhood, entered a house on Charlotte street and stole an overcoat, the first article he saw hanging in the hall. He was seen to enter the house, but the coat was not missed till the owner, on going out to business, bought it. It was well for the cheeky tramp that he was not discovered, for the owner of the coat keeps a terribly ferocious dog, whose teeth would have proved keener to the anatomy of the rascal than those of the winter wind. Our citizens should be on the lookout for these strolling vagabonds, for they have committed similar depredations in other parts of the town. They are very bold, little caring, sometimes, if they are caught. Regular meals and warm quarters for the winter in jail, at honest men's expense, is just what some of them long for.

Our New Watchmaker, Mr. Hughan, comes well recommended, and we are sure any work entrusted to him will be done in good style. Office lately occupied by Elias Barnham, Simcoe S treet. 18-tf

Lecture.

A lecture under the auspices of the Young People's Association of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church will be delivered in the school room on Thursday December sixth, by Rev. Dr. Cleland, of Port Hope. Subject, "Anglo-Israel." Admission 25 cents.

A New City Daily.

The first issue of the Toronto Morning News, a new venture in journalism, is before us. It is bright, readable and newsy, and its pages indicate the elements necessary to success. It is independent in politics, and devoted to the dissemination of ultra democratic principles. It is published by Mr. E. E. Shephard, who makes himself responsible for the carrying out of an original and rather extensive programme.

Splendid Organs.

We call attention to the advertisement of Mr. D. Smart, who has purchased the business of Mr. R. W. Errett, and is now sole agent for this district of the Dominion and Bell organs, two instruments of such well known excellence that words of praise are superfluous, and it is only necessary to point out where they can be had. Mr. Smart's office and warerooms are one door south of Clegg's furniture shop, George street, where will be found a large and varied stock of those superb instruments, the Dominion and Bell organ. Give him a call.

Charlotte Street Church Bazaar.

The second annual bazaar of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church will be held at the residence of Geo. A. Cox, Esq., during the afternoon and evening of Friday, December seventh. Aside from the "immense bargains" which the bazaar will present in articles of use and vertu, a select programme, of first-class vocal and instrumental music will enliven the occasion on Friday evening. Members or friends of the congregation willing to aid the bazar with money or by contributions of articles for sale, will be good enough to communicate at once with the Secretary of the Bazaar Committee, Mrs. A. L. Davis.

The Caisse House.

Messrs. Daly Bros., the new proprietors of the Caisse House, are making a revolution of the premises. The outside of the front is being painted, as well as the whole of the first floor, a parquet floor of hardwood is to be laid in the bar, the ceilings throughout are to be calcimined, and new paper put on all the walls. "City" water service is being put in, a thorough renovation of the premises from cellar to roof, making them bright, clean and comfortable, is to be carried out, and every effort made to make the Caisse House a first-class hotel in fact as well as in name. A wing is to be built in rear of the billiard room, which will contain eight or ten new sample rooms on the ground floor—a fact that will be appreciated by travellers. Messrs. Daly Bros. have taken a ten years lease of the house, and it is their will, as well as interest—both ably backed by their experience—to run a thoroughly first-class hotel.

Sadly Sudden Death.

On Tuesday afternoon, Miss Emma Drake, of Grafton, who has been on a visit for some time to town, the guest of Dr. Halliday, dropped dead with appalling suddenness, at Mr. Robert Lundy's residence, Brock street. Formerly the young lady had been in rather delicate health, but recently her health had improved, and about an hour before her death, while partaking of a midday dinner with Dr. Halliday's family, which she ate with unusually good appetite, she remarked that she "hadn't felt so well in a year," and was in the best of spirits. Shortly after she drove to Mr. Lundy's. As she passed through the hall she laughed and chatted with the little girl, and going up stairs, accompanied by Mrs. Lundy, to remove her wraps, she suddenly fell across the bed, and when Mrs. Lundy turned her over life had fled. A medical man was immediately called, but of course without effect. It is probable that her death was due to heart disease of some sort, for she had often complained to Mrs. Lundy of trouble with her heart. The sudden death of the young lady has deeply saddened the large circle of warm friends she had formed during her stay here. She was a sister of Mrs. Cartright, of Selwyn.

A Beautiful Monument.

Mr. James Byrne, marble worker, has completed and set up, on Tuesday, in the Roman Catholic Cemetery, a beautiful marble monument, erected by the contributions of commercial travellers, to the memory of the late Thomas Molloy. The monument is of a beautiful and tasty design. It rests on a foundation of Clear Lake limestone. Upon this rests the square base of white Vermont marble. From the corners of this spring four graceful Doric columns of highly polished, veined Columbia marble. Upon the capitals of these rests a vaulted cap, also of white marble, richly moulded, surmounted by a plinth of elegant design. The monument is finished by an artistically chiselled rustic cross in white marble, and stands seven feet in height. Within the space formed by the four pillars is a marble vase filled with a bouquet artificial flowers, protected by a glass of shade, the gift of Mr. T. Dolan, the late Mr. Molloy's employer. The inscription on one side of the base reads: "In memory of Thomas Molloy, a native of Ireland, who died Nov. 8th, 1882. Erected by his friends, the Commercial Travellers." The monument is not only a beautiful work of art, creditable to the builder, but a pleasing testimony to the finer feelings of the commercial travellers, and a proof that, while death sunders all earthly friendship, it cannot destroy the pleasant memory of a genial, whole-souled gentleman, whose contact with his friends ever made them brighter, better and happier.

Constitutional Lightning.

Thunderstorms in November are a rarity, but the consideration of the lightning in striking where it can kill nobody, is a new and fanciful freak of the electric fluid. During the storm of Nov. 9th, the day of the funeral of the late Robert Nicholls, the lightning struck the sward near a hydrant in the northern part of Little Lake Cemetery, tearing up and hurling around a square yard or so of turf.

B. C. Anniversary.

The anniversary services of the Bible Christian Church, Ashburnham, were extremely successful. Large congregations listened to sermons on Sunday from Rev. Dr. Rice and Rev. E. F. Torrance. The tea on Monday was also largely attended. Excellent addresses were given by Rev. Jno. Shaw and Dr Rice, Rev. Mr. Joliffe in the chair. Good music by the B. C. choir. It was a fine financial success.

M. C. Poultry Association.

At the annual meeting of this association, held on last Thursday night, there was a fair attendance. The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand. The following officers were elected:—President, Thomas E. Bell; vice-president, Robt. B. Lundy; secretary-treasurer, Jos. McClelland; Directors, Wm. Ross, J. E. Murray, Isaac Dormer, M. O'Brien, Robt. Hall, Richard Mead, D. Mason and Wm. Logan. The directors will actively canvass for subscriptions, and report at a meeting to be held on Friday night. An increasing interest is being developed in the affairs of the society, and a good exhibition may be expected.

The Mails.

Last Monday, in accordance with the new Midland time table, the arrival and closing of mails changed. The night mails from the east and west arrive at 7.30 a.m., the west again at 11.05 a.m., and the eastern at 12.15 p.m. The mails close in the morning at 7 a.m, for the east and west, and again for the west at 4.30 p.m., and for the east at 7.30 p.m. The Old Country mails via Halifax close at 7.30 p.m., Wednesday; via New York the mails close at 7.30 p.m. on Monday. Mr. Rogers, our obliging postmaster, with his usual keen appreciation of the public convenience, considers the present time table of the Midland the best for the mail service that has ever been compiled. Now all the western mails arrive and are distributed before noon. Mail clerks have been put on the mail trains west, and letters can now be mailed at the station, which is another obvious advantage.

St. Luke's Parochial Association.

A very well attended entertainment held under the auspices of this society, took place in St Luke's school room, Ashburnham on Monday evening last. The programme was an excellent one and met with much appreciation, every performer receiving an encore. The following aided in carrying out a long and entertaining list of songs and readings:—Mrs. Bowman, the Misses Shaw, the Misses Stephens, Miss Ellsworth, Dr. Clarke and Mr. A. Clegg. Mrs. C. B. Orde played the accompaniments in her usual first class style. The next entertainment will be given by the Temperance Society in St. Luke's school room on Monday, Dec. 10th, at 8 p.m., when the programme will contain some new and pleasing features. Admission only ten cents.

"The Queen's Lace Handkerchief."

The public of Peterborough can look forward to a grand operatic treat in the appearance in Bradburn's Opera House, on Monday evening, Dec. 3rd, of the New York Opera Company, which consists of 40 people, and has had a most brilliant success wherever it has appeared. The London Advertiser thus highly speaks of the performance as presented in London:

"It is a decided pleasure to sit through the performance of "The Queen's Handkerchief," as interpreted by Patterson's New York Opera Company. There is an utter absence of anything offensive in the piece. It is full of harmless pleasantry and pleasing music, and by this company is much more than ordinarily well dressed, acted and sung. The comedians, Messrs. Greensfelder and Adolphi, succeeded in being very funny without in the least departing from good taste, and all the principals of the company are first class No one is strained, but there are several who might be made the feature of a comic opera company. A number of changes of costume are made—we forget whether it is poor or fine—and each change displays taste and elegance. The chorus is large, the orchestra excellent, and the tout ensemble—no notice of an opera is of any good that does not contain a reference to the tout ensemble—such as convinced the audience that in Patterson's New York Comic Opera Company there is a mine of fun and innocent pleasure that is deserving of patronage everywhere."

St. Andrew's Society Supper.

The St. Andrew's Society of Peterborough will hold a sort of dual celebration on St. Andrew's night, Friday. First, the celebration of the day itself and, incidentally, the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the society in town. A quarter of a century ago, or in 1858, Messrs. Charles Cameron, Alex. Murray, now of Montreal, Geo. Thompson, of Edinburgh, since deceased, and Robert Taylor, who died last year, casually met on George street and the project of establishing a society was broached. A meeting was held at McGregor's hotel, then occupying the site on George street opposite the EXAMINER Office, now occupied by Cox's block, and a society was constituted, of which the late John Harvey, father of Dr. Harvey, was first president. The late W. A. Scott, Alex. Smith, Wm. Cummings and other prominent men of that time at once fell into line, and worked energetically for the promotion of the objects of the society. Since that time the society has been continuously in existence, and has never been without a dollar in its coffers, and not one deserving Scotchman has been forgotten in his need. The best men of the town honored its banquets with their presence. The late Sheriff Hall was an active member, and Mr. Charles Cameron was twice unanimously elected president but declined the honor, though he made up in activity as a private member. This year, as intimated, the society is in a flourishing condition, and the annual banquet at the Morgan House will be unusually interesting. Mr. Wm. Telford, the bard of the society, though suffering from physical affliction, may be expected to be on hand with his posm in of the day.

PATRIARCHAL ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Mount Hebron Encampment Instituted—The Grand Officers Present—Banquet at the Oriental—Officers of the New Encampment.

An encampment of Patriarchs was instituted in the hall of Peterborough lodge of Oddfellows on Tuesday evening last. The ceremonies of institution were performed by the Grand Patriarch of the Grand Encampment, H. Urquhart, of Stratroy, assisted by the Grand High Priest, Joseph Oliver, of Toronto, and the Grand Scribe and Treasurer, M. D. Dawson, of London. A number of brethren were present from Port Hope, who, with Bro. Wyatt, of Prince Edward Island, and Bro. Clapp, of Mount Ararat Encampment, Napanee, assisted the grand officers in the interesting and impressive ceremonies. An encampment bearing the same name was in active existence in Peterborough some forty years ago, but from various causes, chiefly lack of support, it ceased to exist. Mount Hebron Encampment has been re-organized under the most favourable auspices and a large number of prominent citizens have been initiated members of the new encampment. Bro. William Claxton is one of the charter members of the new encampment, and the wisdom gathered by years of busy life and his experience in the arena of Oddfellowship, is as warmly welcomed by the members of Hebron encampment as his youthful vigor and zeal were within the circles formed by the triple links, 40 years ago. The following officers were elected and installed for the ensuing term:

D. H. Moore	C.P.
R. W. Bell	H.P.
R. J. Lee	S.W.
J. S. Smith	Scribe.
J. C. T. Lacy	F.C.
J. E. Murray	J.W.
A. McFarlane	Treasurer.

A large number of candidates was also initiated, and the prospects for a bright and successful future for Mt. Hebron encampment are full of promise.

It is only justice to remark that Messrs. J. E. Murray, S. Clegg, D. H. Moore and J. C. T. Lacey, D.D.G.M., were mainly instrumental in securing the institution of the revived encampment.

After the first degree work had been finished an adjournment was made to the Oriental Hotel, where a banquet was tendered the grand officers. The dinner was irreproachably complete in all its appointments, as becomes the reputation of this first-class hotel.

The following is the

Dr. Bell, H. P., occupied the chair, and Mr. D. H. Moore, C. P., the vice-chair. The following toasts were proposed:—"The Queen"; "The Governor-General"; "The Grand Encampment," responded to by the grand officers, H. Urquhart, Grand Patriarch, Joseph Oliver, High Priest, and M. D. Dawson, Grand Scribe; "Our Visiting Brethren," by Messrs. McGill, Port Hope, Wyatt, Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, S. T. Clapp, of Mount Ararat Encampment, Napanee, and E. E. Henderson, of Guiding Star, Manilla; "Mount Hebron Encampment," by Dr. Bell and D. H. Moore; "The Ladies," by Messrs. McKee, Port Hope, and Workman, Peterborough; "The Press," by Messrs. J. R. Stratton, EXAMINER, and S. R. Armstrong, Review; concluding with several volunteer toasts and "Our Host and Hostess." The company separated with "God Save the Queen," and returned to "labour" in Peterborough Lodge Rooms.

The New Link Line.

The Midland Railway began on Monday to run trains according to their new time card over the Link line to Toronto. A trip had been made on Friday and the Link was found in excellent order, everything safe and steady, showing that it is a first class piece of road. Trains to Toronto by the Link make an hour better time than by the old route, leaving business men an hour longer in the city. The fine new bridge at Lindsay greatly shortens the route. The new route will add greatly to the popularity of the Midland. Everybody interested agrees that the new time card is the best ever brought out by the company.

A Long and Dreary Meeting—Into the Wee Sma' Hours—Deputy Returning Officers and Polling Places.

Council met in regular session. Acting Mayor Menzies in the chair, and Messrs Cahill, Davidson, McNaughton, Kelly, Paterson, Sawers, Yelland, Douglas, Rutherford and Hartley.

COMMUNICATIONS

were received.

From W. A. Morrow, secretary of the School Board, requesting the Council to pay over to him the amount of money demanded by the School Board for the current year.—Finance Committee.

From John McNaughton, respecting the use of hose by the chairman of the Fire, Water and Gas Committee.

Mr. Rutherford denied all knowledge of the hose.—Received.

Petitions for the remission of taxes were received from T. & W. McKee (half year's taxes on Brodie's woollen mills building, paid by them when it was exempted), P. Sullivan, Mrs. McGhee, Mary Callaghan, Margaret Hoolihan, R. J. Weir (who pays taxes in Ashburnham), Margaret Bird and James Yule.

Of the above communications, some were referred to the Charity Committee and some to the Court of Revision.

From "Pro Bono Publico" in reference to a breach of the fire limits by-law on Brock street, and stating that the owner of the town team did not sleep in the fire stables.

Mr. Sawers acknowledged that he wrote the anonymous letter.

Mr. Rutherford stated that Mr. Smith had moved with his family to within fifty feet of the stables.

From Thos. Beavis respecting loss to him of use of store house on Bethune street, through blocking the siding with cars and asking relief; and in case it is not granted he will take legal steps to secure the quashing of the by-law granting permission to put in siding.

The Clerk was instructed to write to Mr. Cox, requesting him to carry out the conditions of the by-law.

From Wm. McDowell, asking use of the hall in the Bank of Toronto building as a dancing room. Received.

From Mrs. Gilmour, inclosing Dr. Kincaid's certificate of Noble's ineligibility for admission to the home for incurables, Toronto.—Charity Committee.

Several accounts were presented and dealt with.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Mr. Paterson submitted the report of the committee recommending the payment of the following accounts:—

Wm. Forsyth	$ 1 50
T. E. Fitzgerald	1 50
W. G. Yelland	3 50
Gas Company	31 50
Gas Company	35 70
John Halpin	13 08
McKee & Davidson	100 80
Toker & Co.	16 13
Jas. English	1 40
Canadian Rubber Co.	711 00
Lochart & Chowan	60 96
E. Dunsford	3 20

And that a grant of $100 be made to the Mechanic's institute.

Mr. Paterson, in moving the adoption of the report moved also that Mr. Kingan be paid at the same figure, as Messrs. McKee & Davidson, in the latter $3.25 was charged for nails per keg, and in the former $3.40.

Mr. Sawers moved in amendment to the adoption of the report that the account of Mr. Kingan be not paid until it had been explained why the figures of the account had been raised from $3.25 to $3.40. Mr. Sawers insinuated that forgery had been committed in raising the figures from $3.25 to $3.40.

Mr. Rutherford said the change was evidently a mistake, as the total showed $3.40 was meant.

Mr. Cahill made explanations and said that the price of nails had been raised by all except McKee & Davidson, and he had instructed the Street Inspector to get the nails where he could get them the cheapest.

The amendment was adopted and the yeas and nays were taken as follows:—

YEAS.—Messrs. Cahill, Davidson, McFaughton, Sawers, Yelland, Douglas and Hartley.

NAYS.—Mr. Paterson.

TOWN LUMBER.

Mr. Rutherford moved, seconded by Mr. Hartley, that all lumber used by the corporation be measured by the Market Clerk and that no lumber account be paid without his certificate.

Messrs. Cahill, McNaughton and Sawers stated that Mr. Rutherford's motion sounded very like buncombe and an election dodge, brought in at this late season.

Mr. Rutherford replied that he would have introduced the motion before if Mr. Sawers and his man Friday, had not prevented it by their obstruction.

The motion was declared lost on division.

CHARITY WOOD.

Mr. Kelly moved, seconded by Mr. Paterson that the Finance Committee be authorized to purchase fifty or one hundred cords of wood for town purposes by tender. The motion was agreed to.

AYLMER STREET HYDRANTS.

Mr. Cahill introduced a by-law for the purpose of establishing hydrants on Aylmer street, between Brock and Charlotte, which was duly passed.

A motion of Mr. Sawers to extend the area did not receive a seconder.

ELECTIONS.

Mr. Davidson introduced a by-law which was duly passed, providing for the apointment of deputy returning officers and the places for holding elections as follows:

No. 1 Ward, at the Mission School House, Joseph Lundy, deputy returning officer, Angus Williams, poll clerk; No. 2 Ward, at the Council Chamber, Chas. Cameron, deputy returning officer, Jas. Noble, poll clerk; No. 3 Ward, at Geo. Sanderson's shop, John Irwin, deputy returning officer, Jas. G. Macdonald, poll clerk; No. 4. Ward, at Wm. Lee's shop, Wm. Lee, deputy returning officer, John Sawers, poll clerk.

MISCELLANEOUS.

On motion of Mr. Sawers, seconded by Mr. McNaughton, it was resolved that the Street Inspector, or any other civic officer, should not purchase supplies from any member of the Council, and that no member of the corporation should have business dealings with the town.

Mr. Sawers gave notice of motion to the effect that the offices of Town Clerk and Treasurer be separated and each office held by a different person.

A motion of Mr. Rutherford, seconded by Mr. Davidson, to have the Market Clerk measure and label with its contents every load of wood coming on the market, was agreed to.

Mr. Rutherford called attention to the delay in opening the culvert on Reid street, obstructed by railway works.

A motion of Mr. Sawers, seconded by Mr. McNaughton, to instruct the Building Inspector to remove a wooden shed recently erected within the fire limits by Mr. Birdsall, on Water street, was referred to the Building Committee.

Mr. Menzies explained that the removal of the building and replacing it with a brick structure, greatly lessened the fire risk.

Mr. Kelly's motion seconded by Mr. Paterson to extend the time for the return of the collector's roll one month from Dec. 14th, was carried, an amendment by Mr. Hartley, seconded by Mr. Sawers, to extend the time to Jan. 1st, 1884, having been lost on a division.

Council adjourned at 12.05 Tuesday morning, for three weeks.

LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY.

Improvements of the Season.

[Crowded out of last issue.]

The delightful weather of last Sunday drew out many visitors to the most beautiful rural cemetery in the Dominion. On that day the place, thanks to the skill, care and taste of Mr. Kelly, presented a beautiful appearance, There was not a stray leaf or bit of rubbish to mar the almost spring-like beauty of the sward. Indeed in some places the grass looked as green and bright as in May. The improvements of this year are very marked. The water works, which have before been fully noticed in these columns, provide for thirteen hydrants, which will keep the lawn in growing order in the dryest weather of summer. Beautiful fountains have been erected—one opposite the entrance gates, and one on Ravine Avenue in the valley, and another is laid out on River avenue. A new avenue has been opened, called River Avenue, and a beautiful plot of ground containing 200 lots, lying between River and Ravine Avenues, has been completed ready for seeding. This is a vast improvement to this part of the cemetery. In addition large numbers of ornamental trees and shrubs have been planted in different parts of the cemetery. A new office for the superintendent has been projected east from the lodge. Under Mr. Kelly everything is kept in the best of order, the drives and lawns are as perfect as possible, while the hedge rows around family plots are trimmed with beautiful precision. Not only in detail but in general effect is Mr. Kelly's taste and knowledge of landscape effect exceedingly commendable. Mr. Kelly is continually devising new features to add to the beauty of this burial place and to add to its attractiveness to visitors. One is the construction of a filter to cleanse the waste water from the fountain at the right hand side of the entrance gates and convey it under the drive to a drinking fountain at the right hand side of the entrance gate for foot passengers. This will be a great convenience to the public and one that will cost but little to bring into use. Another desirable feature that would remove what now seems to be something like an eyesore, is the erection of a small building to enclose the staging and water tanks, which are now anything but ornamental, and are more suggestive of a brewery than a burying place. The building could take the form of a temple, and by being constructed in a style corresponding to the chapel, could at a trifling cost be made a decidedly ornamental feature of the grounds, and could at the same time be made useful by serving for a tool house for the gardeners' working tools. Beautiful and attractive as this cemetery is it will continue to grow in beauty and attractiveness in proportion as the directors second the suggestions and efforts of Mr. Kelly, whose judgment, stimulated by an experience of twenty-seven years, renders it peculiarly worthy of attention and consideration.

The interments at the cemetery up to Nov. 26th were as follows:—January 8; February 11; March 16; April 15; May 9; June 15; July 10; August 15; September 9; October 17; Nov. 13; making a total for 11 months of 138, against a total for the whole of 1882 of 118.

WILFUL MURDER.

The trial of O'Donnell for the murder of Carey, the informer, was concluded on Saturday, only one witness being called for the defence. The jury after two hours' deliberation returned a verdict of "wilful murder," and the judge passed sentence of death. After the sentence had been pronounced the doomed man broke into violent curses, and had to be removed from the dock by force.

Our New Watchmaker, Mr. Hughan, comes well recommended, and we are sure any work entrusted to him will be done in good style. Office lately occupied by Elias Barnham, Simcoe Steet. 18-tf

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The regular meeting was held on Tuesday night.

Present, Mr. Stevenson in the chair, and Messrs. Stratton, Wrighton Burnham Kendry, Sproule Robinson, Denne, Rutherford and Weir.

COMMUNICATIONS

were received and referred to the committee on teachers, from Miss Mary Simm, and Miss Jennie J. Batcher, requesting appointments as teachers in case of vacancies.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

The report of the attendance at the public schools for November was presented showing:

	On Roll.	Av. Att.
Central School	582	445
South ward school	226	158
West do	168	110
	976	713

The Chairman called attention to the question of a grant to a memorial of the late Dr. Ryerson, the originator of our school system.

Mr. Stratton, inspector, explained that a committee of Toronto educationists had charge of the matter.

Matter deferred till the next meeting in January, 1884.

Mr. Rutherford said that it was known that for several years the Collegiate Institute has been declining—it has not been self sustaining and the expense has increased. He believed that the teachers were efficient, but there was a lack, and he pointed out how great a saving might be made by a reduction of the staff. Therefore he moved, seconded by Mr. Denne, that in the opinion of the Board the Collegiate institute was ripe for improvement on account of the large expenditure and the small number of pupils, and that the Board meet as a committee of the whole on Tuesday night next, to consider the matter of the reduction of the expense of the Institute.

Mr. Wrighton,—How large is the attendance?

Mr. Rutherford,—About 75 or 80.

Mr. Stratton,—How much more does the Institute cost now than five years ago?

The Secretary stated that the figures at the moment available showed that the expense was in 1880, $3,001 and in 1883 $3,550.

Mr. Stratton suggested that the motion be allowed to stand as a notice of motion, and the Chairman ruled that it must do so according to the rules.

A motion of Dr. Burnham to reconsider the adoption of Gage's series of readers was lost.

SCHOOL ELECTIONS.

Mr. Stratton moved, seconded by Mr. Wrighton, that the elections for Public School Trustees be held at the same time and place as last year, and that the following persons be deputy returning officers: First Ward, Joseph Lundy; Second, C. D. Macdonald; Third, John Irwin; Fourth, Wm. Lee; and that a meeting of the Board be held on the first Thursday in January, to receive the report of the returning officer and to complete the election.

Mr. C. D. Macdonald, Town Clerk, was informed by the Secretary that the latter had sent the "detailed estimates" to the Town Clerk on or about October 25th

SKATING RINK.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Lakefield Skating and Curling Rink, held in Dr. Caldwell's office, the following officers were elected:—

PRESIDENT—Mr. A. J. Wright.

SECRETARY-TREASURER—Mr. Robert Grahame.

COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT—Messrs. LeFevre, Hull and R. C. Strickland. Mr. Geo. Postlewaithe was appointed manager for the season. The rink is undergoing thorough repair.

MUNICIPAL.

Not much being said as yet as to the future city fathers. The "young blood," or "new blood," to be introduced is being discussed by some. The impression seems to be that the old blood is not to be thrown overboard as yet. The Council holds its last meeting for the year on Monday next, in their Chamber.

MAYORALTY MATTERS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

"Who is to be our next Mayor?" is a question which is now often asked, and it is an important one, too. There is one thing which I would like to see, and that is that, in the choice of a Mayor (as well as Councillors also), that the best man will be chosen for that office, without regard to politics, or religion either. Let us try and all unite upon the selection of a good man for Mayor, one who will be a credit to the town as its municipal head, and one who will act fairly and honestly as head of the Council. In addition to Mr. Paterson I hear the name of Mr. Cahill mentioned, and that he is to be a candidate also. I have the same objection to Mr. Cahall that I have to Mr. Paterson. In my opinion he is not the man to lead in any scheme for retrenchment or municipal reform, and I think he would not help us much in our efforts to cut down expenses or to reduce our taxes. It might gratify Mr. Cahill's ambition to be Mayor; but the ratepayers have something else to look to. They have their own interests to protect. They don't want a Mayor who goes in for poorhouses and hospitals, and for an indefinite extension of the waterworks, and after that the loss and misery of high taxation. If we have to choose our Mayor from among our present Councillors, which of these, let me ask, has the most claims upon our support? Who has tried hardest to redress the abuses and keep matters straight? If that man is not Mr. Sawers, then I don't know who has done so. Mr. Sawers is a young man and comparatively new to the Council, but he has manifested a strong tendency to stick by the people, and, if so, the people ought to stick by him. And I think they will, that is to say, assuming that he will be a candidate for the office. Mr. Menzies is another good man, and he, too, has done the town yeoman service as a Councillor. He opposed the plan of a poorhouse and hospital and the increase of taxes for the water works. But I hear he will not be a candidate among so many.

ANOTHER RATEPAYER.

"RATEPAYER" RALLIES THE ELECTORS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

It is an old saying that what is worth doing is worth doing well. And there is another saying—never put off till to-morrow what can be done to-day. These sayings the ratepayers should bear in mind and act upon, in view of the approaching municipal elections; and now is the time to be up and doing, and not put off this duty until the last day. Remember to work while it is day for night cometh when no man can work; and the night will soon come if the ratepayers delay their work much longer. They must not allow themselves to be led by others, who have an interest in leading them, but they must act and think for themselves. They have only one opportunity to do this in a year, and if that opportunity is allowed to pass by unheeded, the night has come when they cannot work. But when the night comes a few interested parties will work for them, and then it will be too late to complain. Let your watchword, therefore, be not to put off till to-morrow what can be done to-day. The ratepayers must not allow themselves to be misled or deceived as to their choice of Mayor or Councillors. Those Councillors who have been recreant to their duty must be left at home, and the electors should support those who have tried to do right and to serve the town to the best of their ability. They should encourage honesty and put down dishonesty and selfishness, and to this end all private friendships and inclinations should be left aside. I do not know who are to be the candidates for Mayor or Councillors, save that Mr. Paterson is in the field for Mayor. In private life Mr. Paterson is a worthy man, but I won't say as much for him in his capacity as Councillor. He is too extravagant and has not backbone enough to fill the office of Mayor. That office must be filled by the man who has proved himself worthy of it. The ratepayers ought to know where to find such a man.

RATEPAYER.

BUCKET-SHOP FLEMMING ON TRIAL.

A Chicago special says the trial of John Flemming and F. N. Loring for the so-called "Fund W" frauds is now in progress in the United States Court. Motion in behalf of the defence to quash the indictment was overruled. Witnesses from interior points in Wisconsin and Illinois testified to receiving circulars from the defendants extolling their investment scheme; to forwarding per post considerable sums of money; to receiving certificates for the same, and afterwards to receiving dividends for some months on the money invested. "Dividends" amounted in most favorable cases to from 25 to 36 per cent. and in most to much less, and presently ceased altogether. The trial will last some days.

PETEBBOROUGH, DEC. 6, 1883.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY SUPPER.

Eating the Haggis and Honoring the Day.

Celebration of the 25th Anniversary of the Society in Peterborough—A Very Large Attendance and a Most Successful Supper—The Songs and Toasts—The Poem of the Bard—The Minstrel Reaches his "Majority."

The supper at the Morgan House on Friday evening last in celebration of the festival of Scotland's patron saint was a gey grand success. Over a hundred gentlemen were present. The dining hall was beautifully and appropriately ornamented with evergreens, flags, mottoes, etc. At the head of the hall was displayed in evergreens the motto, "The Secret of Scotland's Greatness, her Kirks and her Parish Schools," while on the opposite wall, on an out-spread British banner, was displayed Scotland's contribution to the Union Jack, the cross of St. Andrew. Athwart the ceiling were draped festoons of several different clan tartans, the "Black Watch" the most prominent. The orchestra of the "City Band" was present and rendered several selections during the evening and accompanied the singers. The tables were beautifully laid, and the substantial and varied bill of fare presented, was in keeping with the fine appearance of the board. The whole arrangements, the supper itself and the tasteful adornments of the hall, reflect the highest credit on Mr. Morgan's taste and the resources of his culinary department.

Mr. Duncan McLeod, President of the Society, occupied the chair, having on his right and left, respectively, the guests of honor, Messrs. Geo. A. Cox and George Hilliard, M.P. Mr. John Erskine occupied the vice chair, Mr. D. Galletly the second, and Mr. Donald McDermid, of McDermid & Hendrie, the third.

The following letter was received by the Secretary:—

Charles Cameron, Esq., Secretary St. Andrew's Society:

MY DEAR SIR,—I duly received the notice of the Annual Dinner to be had at Morgan's Hotel on "the day". My state of health is such as to make it out of the question that I should join in the gathering this time. You have my best wishes for a successful and pleasant evening, and for the prosperity and continued usefulness of the Society.

Yours faithfully,
JAMES F. DENNISTOUN.

Nov. 29, 1883.

After the usual loyal and patriotic toasts had been fittingly honored, the toast of "Army, Navy and Canadian Volunteers," was drunk with rousing honors. Mr. Galletly, accompanied by the orchestra, sang in stirring style "The Red, White and Blue," the company giving the chorus. Capt. Edwards of No. 1 Company, 57th Battalion, in a very neat speech responded, followed by remarks from Mr. D. McLeod.

"The Day and a' wha Honor It," was drunk with immense enthusiasm, and Mr. D. Galletly, in his unapproachable style, gave "Scots Wha Hae." In response, Mr. John Erskine gave a very fine address, eulogising the hardy and enterprising character of the Scots, and closing by eloquently detailing the objects of St. Andrew's Society.

"The Parliament of Canada and Legislature of Ontario," brought Mr. Geo. Hilliard, M.P., to his feet, who, in a brief speech recounted the benefits of Parliamentary institutions, and spoke in high terms of the value of the Scotch as citizens.

"Trade and Commerce" was responded to by Mr. Thomas Menzies, in a brief but telling speech, which expressed great hopes for the commercial future of Canada, and Peterborough especially.

"Our Agricultural Interests" brought forth a call for Mr. John Fowler, and Mr. Millar, of Otonabee.

"Our Railroad interests," was warmly honored. Mr. A. McNiel sang "Castles in the Air" and "The Rocky Roads to Dublin," and in reply to an encore gave the song and recitative, "Brown the Tragedian."

Mr. Cox, responding, said that when he was in the Council he had tried to induce manufacturers to come to Peterborough, but the objection was want of railway facilities, and therefore he had used his best exertions to remove the objection, and, he hoped, with some degree of success. (Cheers.) Now we had two railway lines passing through the town, whose connections reached from shore to shore, and he hoped these facilities would be taken advantage of to improve our inexhaustable manufacturing facilities, and make Peterborough what it was plainly destined to become, a large and thriving city. (Cheers.)

Mr. McDermid also made a few pertinent remarks.

THE POEM.

Mr. Wm. Telford, of Smith, the venerable bard of the society, was loudly called for, and said that the present was his twenty-first poem written for the society. Mr. Charles Cameron had read his first production, and he (Mr. Telford) might now imagine Mr. Cameron would to-night read what he feared would be his last. He had not missed one St. Andrew's supper for twenty-one years. The poem, read by Mr. Cameron and received with deafening cheers, was entitled:

MA GRANNIE AN' ME.

When I was a bairn, I mind it richt weel,
On ma auld grannie's knee I used aften ta speel,
An' she sleeket ma hair, an' she clapet ma cheek,
An' sic fine hoseyed words the auld bodie did speak.
When we gaed oot taegither grannie leaned on her staff,
An' the neighbors stood glouren ta greegie an' laugh,
For the age o' ma grannie was eighty an' three,
Sic an odd lookin pair was ma grannie an' me.
Oh, the stories she telt me ta believe I was laith,
Aboot fo'ks that cam' back an' appeared after daith;
Ghosts, witches and warlocks an' faries was seen
Brisk ridin the broomsticks on auld Hallowseen.
Auld time's superstition she held as her creed,
The daith tick an' warnin's when ons ane deed;
I has listened till fear brought the tear in ma e'e,
But ma grannie neer thought how her stories gifted me.
Ma grannie was auld but her memory was young,
An' deepend on my word she was gilb wi' the tongue
On the wark she performed in her earlier days,
On her spinin an' cleedin a' the bairns wi' claes;
She span a' the woo', lint, towan' flax
Ta knit socks for their feet an' mak' claes for their backs.
The young wives nowadays isna worth a bawbee,
Sae, tak' tent wha ye wed, said ma grannie ta me.
How I lauched when she spake of her girlhood years,
When ma grandfather whispered true love in her ears;
Man's love in her youth was as true as the sun,
But she said it was now just ha'f less an' ha'f fun.
She telt me ma granfather wore hoddin gray,
It was noo shinein braidcloth for style an' display;
And the lasses forgie me, they are proud as can be Wi their new-fangled fashions said ma grannie ta me.
When she saw the hooped skirts on a lass in oor toon
She said, tell me, ma laddie, is that a baloon?
An' she telt me their heads noo was busket see fair,
Wi' the plaits an' the rolls o' some deid body's hair.
Grannie wore a short dress gey auld fashioned and plain,
How she raised up her hands when she saw the lang train;
It's to hide their bad feet, or perhaps it may be
Just ta sweep up the glar, said ma grannie ta me.
Then the auld bodie drew me close up ta her side,
Sayin, dear me, o' laddie, sic a wareld wi' pride
For instead O the bir o' the auld spinin wheel
The piano or organ in ilka house squeal.
I wadna believe it when I was a lass
Pride, folly and fashion wad hae come ta this pass;
If I live a while longer O perhaps I may see
Some ane gaun on their heed, said ma grannie ta me.
Though she eaed lads an' lasses yet she lodged nae complaint
About worthy St. Andrew—Scot's patron saint,
An' tho muckle she telt me, yet the worthy auld dame
If she kenned him ava, never mentioned his name.
Perhaps he was deid eer ma grannie drew breath,
Or he micht be in Greece where they say he met death,
His fingers an' taes came to Scotia by sea,
But hoo many there was grannie never telt me.
If ma grannie could rise frae her cauld musty chamber,
An' gaze on the Scots on the last o' November;
She wad hear sic harangues, aye, an' see sic a sight
That wad mak' her believe a' the Scots had gane tyte
Wi' their stampin an' toastin an' hip, hip hurras!
An' loud singin lang syne, yo banks an' ye braes.
If I joined in the chorus O her tongue I micht dree,
Just as daft as the others would ma grannie ca' me.
She wad hear the braid Scotch o' the land o' oor birth,
Hear them say how the Scotch was the saut o' the earth.
Tho' like a fat office, they can haud the baubee,
They can live an' get rich where anither wad dee;
On St. Andrew's nicht Scotish fare they partake,
Just ta practice their jaws on the hard oaten cake,
An' the big rockin haggis—Scots ga far it free,
An' hand round twa big platefu' ta grannie an' me.

Mr. Telford's health was drunk with round after round of applause.

Mr. D. Galletly, in a speech which was itself a prose poem of marked ability, proposed the "Poets and Poetry of Scotland," followed by the "Battle of the Baltic," sung by himself.

"The Mayor and Corporation" brought Mr. Menzies to his feet, who predicted a great future for the town.

Mr. John Douglass, with his usual caustic humour, said that a councillor was expected to build improvements at every man's door, but without their costing anything.

The toast of "Canada our Home" brought out the orchestra with "The Maple Leaf."

Messrs Hilliard and Cox made brief responses to the toast of "Our Guests."

"Our Mothers, Sweethearts and Wives," brought responses from Messrs. E. B. Edwards, G. M. Roger and Wm. Cumming, the latter paying a telling tribute to the grand character of Scottish mothers.

"The Press," was acknowledged by Messrs. Toker, of the Review, Yokome, of THE EXAMINER, and Robertson, of the Times.

"The President and Officers of St. Andrew's Society" was responded to by Mr. D. McLeod, the president.

"Our Host and Hostess," was briefly acknowledged by Mr. Morgan.

SERIES OF SONGS.

The programme having become exhausted, a number of volunteer songs were well rendered. Mr. Henry Bowie, of Smith, gave "Allister McAllister" with great spirit, the bagpipe accompaniment excellently imitated, which gained roars of applause and an encore. Mr. Robert Smith sang "When the Kye come Hame"; Mr. Alex. Stewart, "The Umbrella"; Mr. Fraser, "Robbie Tamson's Stithie," and Mr. Johnson, "Rovin', Rantin' Robbin." The delightful evening was closed with "God Save the Queen," by the orchestra, and "Auld Lang Syne," rendered in the time honored style, brought the enthusiasm to fever heat, and the company separated with warm congratulations on the splendid success of the St. Andrew's supper of 1883.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

To the Ratepayers of the Town of Peterborough:

I don't imagine that anything I may say will have any effect, or will induce any one of you to go counter to your own inclinations. I suppose, when the time for voting comes on, you will do just as you have hitherto done, go to the polls and deposit your votes just as your private feelings and friendships incline you to do, looking at the candidate in his private, individual capacity, and without regard to his integrity and his ability to serve you as your Councillor, or whether he will or will not put his own interests before yours. This is the great difficulty which encounters the ratepayers of every municipality in their choice of representatives, and it is the cause of the dishonesty and of the waste and extravagance which we so often hear of. If the electors would but disregard their private feelings and inclinations in the selection of candidates, and would judge them by the standard of their public worth and their likelihood to do good, they would have less to complain of, and the result would be a better administration of municipal affairs, and more satisfaction among the people. It is worse than folly for any one to tell us that we are well enough served, and that we do not require any improvement in the management of the business of the town, and to say this, is simply to seek to deceive us. We do need improvement on the part of our representatives, and a large improvement in the management of our affairs. Every municipality needs these things, and they will get them when the people vote for only such men as they know will do their duty honestly and fairly, and keep out of their councils all those who seek to go there to serve their own private ends. We have had too many of this latter class of councillors, and if report is true, we are not yet free from them. We know what human nature is, and how much more inclined men are to serve themselves rather than to serve others, and it is therefore our imperative duty to take care and select only such candidates as we have reason to believe will look to the public good alone. One chief cause of our mistakes in the choice of councillors, is our apathy and our neglect to pick out the best man before nomination day, and the result, therefore, is that when this day comes we are unprepared for it, and we have then to take such as ambition and private interest bring before us. We neglect, indeed, I may say we refuse, to do our duty to ourselves, and we leave it to others to act for us and to dictate to us whom we shall vote for. Let me ask you if this is right? and let me ask you if you are prepared to justify such conduct; or, justifying it, if you have any right to complain? I hope and trust that before nomination comes on you, the ratepayers, will have met together and have agreed upon and selected good men to represent you for the ensuing year. Do not be misled by the sophistries and soft words and liberal promises of those men, who, as your past councillors, will come before you and protest their honesty and their determination to serve you again, not for their good, but for your own. Beware of all such men, and learn to form your own opinions of men and things and to judge for yourselves. Do not be again deceived by those of your present representatives, who you have reason to believe, are not above suspicion. Turn a deaf ear to their entreaties, and when the election is over they will find out that honesty is the best policy. Do not forget that a very great deal of good or evil is depending upon your proper choice of councillors. That your taxes will be reduced or increased according as you do your duty honestly. Let your watchword be the town first and your private friendships afterwards. You must not forget that the water works question is to you an important question, and needs a careful watching. But this and other matters I will reserve for another day.

THE CHEESE INDUSTRY.

Interesting Particulars of the Operations in this County and Vicinity for the Season of 1883.

LILLY LAKE FACTORY.

The patrons of Lilly Lake cheese factory, the season having concluded, met at the call of the president, Mr. James Middleton, at No. 1 school house, Smith, Nov. 21st. The president submitted a statement of the progress of the factory and of the results of the operations for the past season. The amount of milk received at the factory was 425,884 lbs., or nealy 213 tons. The amount of cheese produced therefrom was 41,513 lbs., for which there was secured $4,225.77½. He further stated that the avarages, to find the amount of cheese manufactured from the milk, and the money derived from the sale of cheese, had been struck eight times during the season—twice for May, twice for October, and once for each of the other four months, with the following result, the figures in the column showing the average amount of milk required to produce one lb. of cheese:—

	Lbs.
First half May	10.51
Second half May	9.93
June	10.60
July	10.70
August	10.25
September	10.02
October, first half	8.55
October, second half	9.13

The average prices per lb. for cheese were as follows:—

May, first half	12.87½-100 c.
May, second half	11.17-100
June	9.50½-100
July	9.06-100
August	10.27-100
September	10.99-100
October, first half	11.18-100
October, second half	11

He also stated that much credit was due to the manufacturer, Mr Myres Sine, for his wonderful skill in making an A 1 article of cheese, and said that not one pound had been returned or sold at the least reduction in price. After a few remarks from the directors and patrons, the business for the season was closed. A high compliment was paid Mr. Middleton in his unanimous re-election to the position of president, an office whose duties he has discharged most efficiently during the past year. A salary of fifty dollars attaches to the position. Messrs. Joseph Barnard, Jos. L. Walton, Wm. Swinton and Andrew W. Tully were elected as directors for 1884.

TREWERN FACTORY.

Trewern factory, situated on lot 19, 8th concession of Smith, has had a very successful season. The number of lbs. of milk delivered at the factory was 1,290,320 or 645 tons, and the number of pounds of cheese produced amounted to 125,608. The number of pounds of cheese disposed of was 122,774 pounds, and 2,834 lbs. were taken out by the patrons of the factory. The average price obtained for cheese was 10¼ cents. The number of "standards" (2000 lbs.) was 430. Mr. Geo. W. Fitzgerald was salesman; he sold all the cheese and transacted all the business in the most satisfactory manner. The number of patrons of Trewern was 57. The number of "standards" was 180 better than the business of 1882, and the patrons being well satisfied with the result of the season's operations, it is probable that the ensuing year will be as prosperous, if not more so. The annual meeting has not yet been held, and will probably take place in February next, a date late enough to admit of arrangements being made for the next season's operations. The experience of the patrons of Trewern shows that cheese pays better than wheat raising, although grade cattle are almost exclusively employed as milk producers; but the introduction of thoroughbred grades is beginning to receive attention, and there is no doubt that when the employment of a better class of cows becomes general, the profits of the business will be greatly added to. It costs very little, if any, more to feed a good cow than a poor one, and the result is much more satisfactory. The cheesemaker of Trewern, Mr. Porter Robinson, has given unusually good satisfaction. He has added new mechanical appliances to the factory of the most improved design. One of the most important labor saving appliances is a machine for stirring the milk which works admirably. The proprietors and patrons of Trewern have reason to be highly pleased with the result of the operations of 1883.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them a name of their own, and not try to sell them on the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back. 2-tf

NORWOOD.

Mr. Henry Cope killed two spring pigs (seven months old) the other day—one weighed 223½ pounds and the other 260 pounds. Next!

The first annual ball of the Norwood [illegible] club will be held in the Town Hall here on the evening of Friday, Dec. 7th.

Mr. R. W. Waters, of the firm of Waters & Co'y, has purchased Mr. Askey's residence on Queen street. Mr. Askey, we believe, intends taking a trip to British Columbia shortly.

ALLANDALE.

Mr. James Taylor, Otonabee, has buried four of his children during the past week, they having died of a malignant type of scarlet fever. Three other children of the same family are not expected to recover.

A proposition has been made by Mr. John Wood, Otonabee, to start a cheese factory in this village, providing he receive sufficient encouragement. A meeting was held under very favorable circumstances.

The Methodist church, Keene, has been painted, and the interior otherwise improved, and as the paint and varnish was not quite dry the Presbyterians kindly opened their church to their Methodist friends, who held services therein the last two Sabbaths.—Register.

PORT HOPE.

The Times says:—Our readers will learn with deep regret of the sudden death of Mrs. Mark Burnham which took place at her son's residence on Tuesday night. Deceased had been out during the day, and appeared to be in her usual health. Heart disease is supposed to have been the cause of death.

A telegram from Boston announces that Rev. Wm. Mitchell, a newly installed pastor, was arrested on a charge of stealing a book from a bookstore. It is probably a mistake, for the Port Hope Times adds to the telegram it publishes:—"We can scarcely believe that these grave charges are true. The rev. gentleman resigned was for some time pastor of a church in Millbrook and is well known in this vicinity, having frequently preached in Port Hope."

ORMERLE.

Mr. John Bailey is again in the field for the reeveship of Emily.

The Orange Young Britons of this district will hold a grand ball and supper on Christmas night, in Mr. Grandy's Hall.

Work has been commenced on the new temporary station for the Missing Link, and travellers as well as many of our villagers, says the Herald, are loud in condemnation of where the Railway Company is placing it. Instead of being handy, the station is a great deal further away than ever.

The residence of Thomas Rowan, which was burnt on Monday of last week, was insured for $600, and its contents for $200. On Wednesday T. J. Parson's store had a narrow escape from burning. These fires revive the project of a hook and ladder company for the village.

LINDSAY.

Rev. Mr. Hastie, late minister of St. Andrew's church, on the occasion of his departure from Lindsay to take a congregation in Cornwall, was presented with an address and a purse of $104.

A commercial traveller became nearly drowned in the mud in Lindsay the other day. Lindsay is a mud-el town.

The Manager's office at the Ontario Bank, Lindsay, has been recently remodeled.

On Tuesday last, old Mr. Killaby, while walking from the house of his nephew, Mr. P. Killaby, east ward, was taken with an apopletic stroke and fell to the ground. He died next day.

The Victoria County Council will meet in Lindsay on Tuesday, the 11th day of December, 1883.

Mr. W. McDonnell—otherwise Squire McDonnell—is spoken of as a candidate for the mayoralty. The present incumbent, Mayor Wallace, will undoubtedly offer again.

SCUGOG.

Mr. Wilson, who has been purchasing butter for the last few day, shipped a hundred and eleven kegs of first-class butter on Tuesday, prepared during Jerusalem, and for which he paid nearly $2000.

The heavy wind of Wednesday night and Thursday of last week, together with a considerable rise in the water, completely cleared the Scugog, and on Friday evening the Maple Leaf arrived with a scow load of freight, and continued towing scows on Saturday. On Monday the Mary Louise arrived with 1,200 fruit trees from Port Perry, for delivery on Pigeon and Chemong lakes, and she went on through on Tuesday. It is probable that the frost of Wednesday night has now stopped the navigation "for keeps."

Owing to the irregularity of the Victoria railway, says the Independent, a numerously signed petition has been forwarded to the Department, asking that the mail be forwarded direct by stage from Lindsay. An excess of traffic beyond the capacity of the train service is said to be the cause of the delays complained of.

CAMPBELLFORD.

The Rev Mr. Dunkley, pastor of the Bible Christian Church, has been suffering from a severe attack of erysipelas. He is improving.

One of the industrious farmers of Seymour harvested ten acres of peas, one day the latter part of last week.

Mrs. West, wife of Mr. W. West, of Seymour, suffered a stroke of paralysis on Monday morning last.

David Macoun, Richard Skinner and George Ogilvie, all young men, have just returned from the North-West. They will remain here for the winter.

Messrs Rathbun & Son are enlarging their storehouse near the station and building an elevator. It is to be operated by horse power. Mr. Vrooman has the contract for its erection.

Mr. Geo. S. Miller has resigned the License Inspectorship of East Northumberland, and Mr. Robert Cock, of Campbellford has been appointed in his place.

Mr. G. F. Stephens, while out gunning one day last week, killed as large and as beautiful a specimen of the "cat" owl as was ever seen in the township. The bird's wings when extended, measured 4 feet 8 inches from tip to tip.

DIED OF A BROKEN HEART.—A young woman aged about 23 years, second daughter of Mr. Thos. Steen, died very suddenly on Friday evening last under very distressing circumstances. It appears the young woman had been keeping company with a heartless villain by the name of Truesdale who through promise of marriage, succeded in effecting her ruin. A child was born about five weeks ago. Truesdale kept renewing his promises that as soon as she was strong enough, etc., they would be married, till the day before her death, when on that day he was married to another in the city of Belleville. On the following day Miss Steen became acquainted with the news and after partaking of her supper in her usual health retired for the night, but in approaching her bedroom in company with her sister, staggered and fell, when the vital spark fled in a few seconds without even a struggle. Her remains were interred at the west burying ground on Sunday last, and were followed by a large number of relatives and friends. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved parents in this, their sad affliction.

After Twenty Years.

A. Lough of Alpena, Michigan, was afflicted for twenty years with dyspepsia and general debility. All treatment failed until he tried Burdock Blood Bitters, which gave him speedy and permanent relief. 47-2t

A Cure For Cuts, Sores, Etc.

The Finest healing compound under the sun is McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. There is no sore but will succumb to its wonderful healing properties. It is an invaluable dressing for scalds, festers etc. Price twenty-five cents at J. McKee's Drug Store. 49-2t.

He Speaks From Experience.

R. N. Wheeler, of Evertan, some six years ago was attacked with a severe form of inflammation of the lungs, leaving him with a severe cough. He speaks highly of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which cured him, the complaint not having troubled him since. 49-2t

An Afflicted Clergyman.

The Rev. Wm. Stout, an English clergyman, of Wiarton, was for 23 years a terrible sufferer with Scrofulous Abscess, which the best medical skill failed to cure. The internal and external use of Burdock Blood Bitters cured him, and for nearly three years he remained hale and hearty. 49-2t

Very Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. Geo. V. Willing, of Manchester, Mich., writes; "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two Bottles of Electric Bitters and is so much improved, that she is able now to do her own work."

Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only fifty-cents a bottle at Taylor & McDonald.

An Editor's Tribute.

Theron P. Keator, Editor of Ft., Wayne, Ind., "Gazette," writes:" For the past five years have always used Dr. Kings New Discovery, for coughs of most severe character, as well as for those of a milder type. It never fails to effect a speedy cure. My friends to whom I have recommended it speak of it in the same high terms. Having been cured by it of every cough I have had for five years, I consider it the only reliable and sure cure for Coughs, Colds, etc." Call at Taylor & McDonald's Drug Store and get a Free Trial Bottle. Large size $1.00.

A Blessing in Disguise.

No one would suppose that the introduction into a family of a bottle of PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR would be the means of restoring peace and prosperity. Corns are painful, and the constant consciousness of this upon even the best natured produces nervous depression, ill-temper, recklessness leading to a desire to spend their time away from the bosom of their family. In order to avoid the evils above mentioned always keep a bottle of Putnam's Corn Extractor on hand. Sold everywhere. N. C. POLSON & CO., Kingston Proprietors.

Vital Questions.

Ask the most eminent physician

Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you unhesitatingly "Some form of Hops!"

CHAPTER II.

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians

What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as kidney troubles, diabetes, retention or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—

"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu."

Ask the same physicians

"What is the most reliable and surest remedy for all fever, ague or dyspepsia; constipation, piles, biliousness, malarial fever, ague, &c.," and they will tell you:

"Mandrake! or Dandelion!"

Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable

And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed which is so varied in its operations that no disease or ill health can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is Harmless for the most frail woman, weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

NORWOOD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

DEER HUNTING.

Our local hunters, strange to say, this year have had but indifferent success on the hunting field. A week ago our worthy chief hunter, accompanied by his aide-de-camp, and several rifle experts of famous renown, with a large retinue of hounds, scoured the woods for a week, though the deer were as numerous as blackberries in August, without adding any laurels to their fame. One noble buck, recognizing the Nimrods who were in quest of his ample quarters, actually allowed the aid-de-camp to fire five shots at him while gently reposing on the ground, and then quietly got up and stoically stood while three more shots were aimed at him from the same rifle; then the animal indignantly turned away. One of the hounds, too, finding that the party couldn't hit anything, also left in disgust, and returned home. Another party last week, headed by Mr. James Cummings, a veteran hunter, succeeded in bagging one deer, rather an unusual number for him, as he is generally very successful in hunting venison. Mr. A. Dulmage, of this village, at another time, alone brought down no less than four deer in two and a half days, killing two of them at one shot. There are other hunters in our village who would like to kill one deer with two shots.

BUILDING OPERATIONS.

The brick building now under construction by Mr. Roxburgh has reached such dimensions as to show its handsome appearance, and its remarkable height and size. It even now attracts the admiring attention of our villagers, and much praise is bestowed upon the substantial quality of the structure, as well as upon its architectural beauty. The building will be a fine set-off to the corner of Colborne and Peterborough streets, and decidedly a credit to the architect, the builders and the enterprising proprietor.

Our new school building is also making rapid strides of progress in the hands of Mr. John Alford, the contractor. He has a very large number of hands engaged in its construction, and both in the material of the building as well as the quality of the work is giving the utmost satisfaction. These new school premises will certainly be very handsome and attractive, and will beautifully adorn that portion of our town in which they are located.

Yes, Sir.

One can't expect to succeed in business or in pleasure either, for that matter, unless one feels all right in health and spirits. This is the first consideration. Now, its a small matter when this remedy, ZO-PE-SA, is recommended so highly, even guaranteed to renew one's energy and spirits by invigorating the Liver and aiding Digestion, by clearing the Brain, opening the pores of the skin, regulating the Bowels and system, to go to the drug store and get a single bottle of Zopesa as a trial. It is a duty every one owes to himself. Try a bottle then. 41-4t

A Card.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a recipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. Rest and Comfort to the Suffering.

"BROWN'S HOUSEHOLD PANACEA" has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures Pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and Heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixir or Liniment in the world, should be in every family, handy for use when wanted, "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 6-1y

Mothers! Mothers!! Mothers!!!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere. 25 cents a bottle.

Failing!

That is what a great many people are doing. They don't just know what is the matter, but they have a combination of aches and pains, and each month they grow worse.

The only sure remedy yet found is SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS, and this by rapid and thorough assimilation with the blood purifies and enriches it, and rich, strong blood flowing to every part of the system repairs the wasted tissues, drives out disease and gives health and strength.

This is why SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS will cure kidney and liver diseases, consumption, rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, biliousness, intermittent fevers &c.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 6, 1883.

Tory Patriotism.

The Tories arrogate to themselves all the loyalty to British institutions worth mentioning. They worked themselves into a fever of rage over the humiliating fact that a member of the Ontario Government was disloyal and traitorous enough to own 160 acres of land in Dakota. They argued that his interest in that extensive tract of land would lead him to attempt to divert the stream of immigration from Ontario. In the face of such super-loyal protestations it may not be amiss to remind the public that the Tory Government at Ottawa have actually granted $156,800 to build and equip a railway lying in the United States. Of course the Tory journals will deny this, but the facts are, that the International Railway, commonly known as "Pope's Road," Hon. J. H. Pope being its chief promoter, is completed from Sherbrook to a point on the American Boundary in the county of Compton. The Government does not pretend that it made a grant to a road already completed and equipped, yet we find on the Statute Book, 45 Vic., cap xxv., the authority of a grant of $156,800 to the International Railway "in connection with the extension of the road through Maine (a State of the United States) to connect with New Brunswick at or near Vanceboro', or south of that point." The grant is $3,200 per mile, ostensibly on the 49 miles of completed railway, but in reality the money was voted to build the extension through Yankee territory. If this is not so the Government is guilty of a "job" in granting $156,800 to a road already built. And Hon. Mr. Pope, a member of her Majesty's Privy Council, to sit on the floor of the House of Commons and vote away $156,800 of the people's money on a Yankee railway in which he has the chief interest! There's loyalty and national sentiment for you!

Broken Pledges.

Farmers in all parts of the Dominion have good reason for complaining that while the National Policy has advanced the prices of almost everything they buy, it has not advanced the price for their produce. They need not have expected that it should do so, although politicians told them it would. Prices of produce have been regulated as before by prices in foreign markets. Nor has the "policy" been instrumental, as its advocates said it would be, in preventing failures. Instead of that, under its reign bankruptcies have been greatly increased, and there was not the temptation to dishonest traders to precipitate a failure in their own interest, as was too frequently, painfully apparent under the law, because there has been no bankruptcy law. We were positively assured that the National Policy would render the country proof against commercial failures and depression, and that the farmer would get better prices for his produce. These were mere election-times assurances, but the mass of the people believed them, and on the strength of that belief the taxation policy became the policy of the country. The "old leaders" that warned the people against the vagaries of the political sharpers, who told the people they should become rich by taxing themselves, are beginning to see their warnings justified, and the people are waking up to the fact that they have been badly duped. Lennox has taken the lead in expressing the opinion that high taxation is not the royal road to wealth. The blindest partizan must begin to have his eyes opened to the fact that the promises made in the name of the N.P. in 1878 have not been fulfilled.

House of Industry.

Ontario county is moving actively in the matter of providing a House of Refuge, as a means of cheaply and efficiently providing for its pauper population. The cost of the proposed building is estimated at $14,000, and the cost of the site and the necessary furniture and fittings, $9,000. This seems a large sum to expend for such a purpose, but the committee entrusted with the task of securing information on the subject, shows that it will pay. The cost of maintaining the pauper population per year, under the slipshod system hitherto prevailing, is $6,000. Whereas it is shown that a house of refuge at the figures quoted, would provide for—feed, clothe and warm—fifty inmates a year, for the sum of $3720, thus leaving a balance in favor of the proposed system of $2,280. This is a considerable saving, and since, with varying considerations the same proportionate figures would apply to this county, the matter is thus presented in a more feasible light to the committee of our own Council, which is considering the matter. The system of establishing Industrial Homes or Houses of Refuge is becoming common in the counties of this Province, and certainly Peterborough county does not wish to be the last to adopt so apparent and desirable an improvement in the solution of the problem of caring for the poor whom we "have with us always."

The way of the transgressor threatens to be hard. Mr. Roe, Tory M.P.P. of Lennox has got into serious trouble in regard to his bribery campaign in Sir John's contest. It is true that the court refused to issue summons against Mr. Roe in respect of the corrupt practices which caused Sir John A. to be unseated. The summons were refused on a technical point, although the judge said it was clear that the charges were substantiated in the election petition. But Mr. Roe has been served with a writ for $3,400, for seventeen cases in which he is charged with bribing voters to secure the return of Sir John Macdonald for Lennox in 1882. He is liable to a penalty of $200 for each case of bribery, and there is hardly any doubt that he will have to pay the amount of fines, that is if he has the money, for the judge on Friday last asserted that the charges had been substantiated in the election petition. So palpable a conspiracy as was unearthed in the election court, to debauch the electorate of Lennox, richly deserves the punishment its chief executor is likely to receive.

The Conservatives are terribly cut up over the result of the recent Dominion election in Lennox, and they talk of money spent in the Liberal interest, and and such like rubbish. But the fact seems to be that the Conservative party in that riding has determined to cease to be the slaves of Ottawa dictation and Roe "boss-ism." This is the opinion of the Carleton Place Central Canadian, a most pronounced Tory journal, the Toryism of whose editor was born and educated into him in Lennox:

"The defeat of Mr. Pruyn last Monday in the Lennox election by fifteen votes was really the defeat of a Conservative by Conservatives. When the leaders of the party refused to cleanse themselves from the stains brought to light so clearly in the case of Roe against Snider it was time that the real power of the party should make itself manifest at the polls, and we cannot but rejoice in this strong evidence that the Conservatives have still the will to correct the abuses in the party, and to sacrifice themselves if need be."

Hon. Mr. Blake on Tuesday evening addressed a mass meeting of the electors of West Middlesex at Glencoe. The political excitement in the riding is exceedingly intense, because the elections for both the Local and Dominion Houses take place on the same date. The Dominion Government performed the chivalrous act of naming the same days for the Commons election, hoping thereby to force Dominion issues in the local contest, and thus secure the defeat of Mr. Ross. The Ottawa bribery brigade, Roddy Pringle, Big Push, McIntosh, of Ottawa, et alii, are on hand, and the most desperate and unscrupulous efforts will be made to debauch the riding in the Tory interests. But the reaction that, in Lennox reduced a Tory majority of 205 to a victory of five, will probably find a fitting complement in a dual Reform majority in West Middlesex.

Dr. Robinson, of Claude, has received the unanimous nomination in Cardwell, in the Liberal interest, for the seat in the Local Legislature, made vacant by the unseating, for wholesale bribery, of the member-elect, Mr. Hammil.

Accident.

Mr. Cornelius Wall, while working in the river, below Rogers' dam, near where the late lamented George C. Rogers met his death, fell into the water, but was rescued by the prompt exertions of his fellow laborers. On Wednesday afternoon.

CHANCERY SALE OF VALUABLE FARM PROPERTY

DORIS vs. DORIS.

Pursuant to a judgment of the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, made in the above Cause, on the 10th day of November last, there will be sold, with the approbation of C. A. Weller, Esq., Master of the said Court at Peterborough, at his Chambers, in the TOWN OF PETERBOROUGH on Wednesday, the 9th day of January, A.D. 1884.

at the hour of 2 o'clock, p.m., Lot Number 17, in the 10th Concession of the Township of Otonabee, in the County of Peterborough, containing 200 acres.

The property will be sold subject to a reserved bid, and will be first offered in one block, when if no sufficient sum be bid therefor, it will be withdrawn, and then offered in two parcels, each consisting of 100 acres, and being composed of the north and south halves of said lot respectively.

The soil is a good clay loam, well adapted for agricultural purposes. Each parcel contains about 18 acres of good wood, pumps of hard water convenient to house and stables, two frame barns, size 30x50, stable and shed. The land is well fenced throughout, excepting about 25 acres on the south half. About 25 acres of each parcel is seeded down with clover and timothy.

In addition to the foregoing the north half of said lot has situate thereon a GOOD BRICK COTTAGE, size 26x33, consisting of 4 rooms, cellar and cellar kitchen. There is also a very large quantity of manure on said parcel, which will become the property of the purchaser.

On the south half of the said lot there is also situate a GOOD FRAME HOUSE, 1½ stories high, size 20x30 consisting of 3 rooms and summer kitchen.

The purchaser will be entitled to possession on the first day of March next.

The conditions of sale are as follows:

The purchaser will pay ten per cent of the purchase money at the time of sale, and the balance in 30 days, without interest.

The purchaser may, however, at his option, if the land be sold in block, leave the sum of $4,000 part of the purchase money, unpaid, to be secured by mortgage upon said lands, for a term not exceeding 5 years, with interest payable yearly at 7 per cent. per annum. If the land be sold in two parcels the purchaser of each parcel may leave the sum of $3,000 unpaid, to be secured by mortgage as aforesaid.

The purchaser must elect at the time of sale which mode of payment he will adopt.

The other conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of the said Court.

Further information may be obtained on application to R. H. Dennistoun, Esq., Solicitor, Peterborough, or to the undersigned.

C. A. WELLER.
Master at Peterborough,
JOHN O'MEARA,
Vendor's Solicitor.

Cutting off the Forests.

The lumber manufacturers of the North-west have decided that the work of cutting off the valuable timber of the North-western States must be retarded, for two reasons—first, because the forests will soon disappear if the present rate of cutting is maintained, and second, because the markets are overstocked. Probably the first of these reasons was not the one that led the manufacturers to make this decision, although it is the one that demands the especial attention of persons not engaged in the lumber trade. Over-production was undoubtedly the more powerful of the two reasons, and the other may be an after-thought, for lumbermen heretofore have not been greatly moved by protests against the destruction of forests. The decision itself, however, whatever may have been the reasons that caused it to be made, is one that will give satisfaction to those who have done what they could to point out the disastrous effect of cutting off the forests around the sources of our streams.

The supply of certain kinds of timber in some of the States has become so small that it will be exhausted in a few years. The commissioner of agriculture declares that in Maine the pine will last but four years and the spruce but fifteen, while at the present rate of cutting the pine forests of Michigan and Minnesota will be exhausted in ten years, and those of Wisconsin in twenty. These forests ought to be protected and renewed, and it is worse than folly to cut them off so rapidly as to glut the lumber markets. The people of the Southern States will soon find it expedient to protect their forests, for as the white pine of the North becomes scarce and costly, the lumbermen will set their axes and saws at work in the heavily timbered regions that have thus far escaped. The South Atlantic and Gulf States abound in pine. Commissioner Loring shows that while the percentage of woodland in farm acreage has fallen from 21 to 15 in Minnesota since 1870, it is 55 per cent. in the South Atlantic States and 58 per cent. in the Gulf States. In the Middle States the percentage is 25. The extension of railway lines has already exposed the pine in parts of the South to the axe, but it has been estimated that at the present rate of cutting the pine forests of Georgia will last for 80 years, those of the Carolinas for 50 years, those of the Mississippi for 150 years, and those of Arkansas for 360 years. So far as Arkansas is concerned, however, this is probably an inaccurate estimate, for the timber lands and the forests of that State are rapidly passing into the hands of lumbermen who, in the words of Governor Berry, "are pouring into the State every day from Michigan and Wisconsin." The number of saw mills in the State has more than quadrupled since 1880. They have been created along all the railway lines and navigable streams, and the production of lumber is twenty times as great now as it was only seven years ago.

Those who are at work in these Southern forests, like those who have almost exhausted the forests of the lake region, care only for the lumber and the money that is paid for it. The inevitable effect of their work upon the climate, the streams and the soil is something in which they take no interest, but it is a matter of great importance to the permanent inhabitants of these regions, and especially to the farmers, and the experience of other States and of foreign countries prove that those who shear from the land its most valuable crop ought to do their work under careful supervision.

An Enormous Telescope.

About four years ago, M. Otto Struve, on behalf of the Russian government, made a contract with the firm of Alvan Clark & Sons of Cambridgeport for the construction of an enormous telescope for the observatory at Pulkowa, Russia. On the first day of last January the firm sent word to M. Struve that the instrument had been completed, and in April that gentleman arrived at Cambridgeport to test this enormous reflector. The telescope is, as yet, the largest in existence, and was constructed at a cost of $35,000. The instrument has a clear aperture of 30 inches, a 45 feet focus, and weighs in the iron cell 4.6 pounds. M. Struve stopped at Cambridgeport for ten days, and tested the telescope and expressed himself as highly pleased with the glass. The glass was shipped to Russia and arrived on June 20. One of the workmen of the firm, Lundin by name, accompanied the instrument and placed it in position at Pulkowa. The glass has a magnifying power of from 150 to 2000 diameters, and is four inches larger in diameter than the Washington telescope and seven inches larger in diameter than the instrument at Princeton observatory.

The Profession.

A lawyer returned to his house one evening to find that a tramp had forced his way into the house and appropriated property of considerable value. He rushed for the police, and by some unfortunate accident the thief was overhauled and conducted to the cooler:

"Ah! you rascal, you shall suffer for this!" growled the lawyer.

"I desire to engage your legal services to defend me," was the sheet-iron rejoinder. "I will give you half the stolen property to clear me of the charge."

"Wretch! How dare you?"

"Oh, if you don't close with me some other lawyer will take all," was the steady reply.

The lawyer reflected for a moment, and then decided to plead the man's case, and tearfully call the attention of the jury to the fact that his client had no intention of stealing anything, but that in leaving the house in a hurry the property got tangled in his bootlegs.

[NOTE.—Verdict of acquittal, and another triumph for right and honesty.]

The map of Northern Europe, which Baron Nordenskjold discovered some time ago in the possession of an old resident of Iceland, and which he thought might prove to be a work of extreme antiquity and great value, turns out to be nothing more than a Dutch sea map of the seventeenth century, which is worthless. Such, at all events, is the conclusion of the Swedish Geographical Society. When Baron Nordenskjold found it he was on his way to Greenland where he is now engaged in important explorations, and he had little time to look carefully into the character of the map.

B. LAURANCE'S SPECTACLES.

MR. B. LAURANCE, of the above mentioned establishments, has the honor to announce to the Citizens of Peterborough and surrounding country that he will locate his Office at

The Medical Hall, (Taylor & Macdonald)

Corner of George and Hunter Streets, Peterborough.

For a few days only commencing THURSDAY, DECEMBER 6th, with a complete assortment of the above Lenses. Laurance's Spectacles, so well known and appreciated in the United Kingdom, will be offered by him to spectacle wearers at the same prices they are sold at in England. Ground on scientific principles, from either the clearest and purest pebble, or from optical glass, especially manufactured for the purpose, they are without exception best adapted to restore the ravages of age and to retain perfect vision. For these reasons they are especially recommended by the most eminent men of the faculty.

MR. B. LAURANCE, will adapt Lenses without extra charge, and his invaluable services will be placed at the disposal of Messrs. Taylor & Macdonald's customers for a few days only, commencing on the above date. Each eye will undergo a special examination, and the Spectacles will be fitted with the particular lens best suited to the condition of each eye, and as no better opportunity will ever be offered for persons with impaired sight to be properly suited, he trusts this opportunity will be duly appreciated. Mr. Laurance has also received testimonials from the following distinguished personages, and thousands of others:—

Lieut.-Gen. Sir Patrick Macdougall, K. C. M. G.
Chief Justice James Macdonald, N.S., late Minister of Justice.
Dr. Sullivan, President Medical Association of Canada, Professor of Principles and Practice of Surgery, Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, Kingston.
Dr. Herbert Nelles, Surgeon R. Battery, and Royal Military College, Kingston.
Dr. Phelan, Kingston.
Very Rev. James Lyster, Dean of Ontario, Kingston.
Rev. Edward J. Stobo, Pastor of the Baptist Church, Belleville.

They had been ten days tramping to and fro, living only on what they could beg and sleeping anywhere.

TO KEEP AUTUMN LEAVES BRIGHT.

Items From a Florist—Oak and Chestnut Leaves in Great Demand this Year.

Autumn leaves are very fashionable this year as parlor decorations. All the large florists are getting them in in large quantities, and, after they are prepared, sell them at 25 cents a dozen. The leaves in greatest demand are oak leaves, which, dried and varnished, are placed about picture frames and in bunches on the walls. Leaves from the chestnut tree, which are said to retain their green color, are often mixed in among the oak leaves, which are of a reddish brown.

On any clear Saturday bevies of young girls may be seen in Central Park gathering leaves. The maple leaves and sumac are greatly sought for. They are carried home and pressed. They often fail to keep their color. A florist said lately that the best way to preserve leaves was to press them between blotting paper, or some other soft paper.

"After several days," he said, "take them out and stamp the paper, lest the moisture cause the leaf to rot. Keep changing the paper at intervals until the leaves are thoroughly dry. Then they will look dull. The colors will verge toward the brown, and the collector, who has not had experience, may imagine that the color is fading. This is not so. The color has to be brought out by oil, varnish, or wax. I prefer oil. The next best thing is to varnish the leaves with a thin white varnish. I do not approve of waxing, for it makes the leaves too brittle. The leaves are rubbed over with wax and then ironed with a warm flatiron. Formerly wreaths and ornaments were made out of pressed leaves; now they are used only for pictures and to decorate walls. To my mind the handsomest leaves are the maple. They are of almost every tint. We often find the palest canary, yellow, orange, and red on the same leaf. They are also easy to press."

At the florist's at the southeast corner of Broadway and Twenty-third street, the reporter saw a large box filled with mingled oak and chestnut leaves.

"These are the only kind of leaves which we press this year," the young lady in charge said. "We press the leaves, and then varnish them."

"What kind of varnish do you use?"

"I really don't know," she replied; "we buy it at a paint store a few blocks away."

"Is there much sale for dried leaves?"

"Yes, indeed. We sell a great many. After they are prepared we charge twenty-five cents a bunch. There are about a dozen in a bunch."

A Bank Cashier Agreeably Surprised.

The other morning, as the cashier of the Frog Hollow Savings Bank was writing a private letter to an Eastern firm of co-operative burglars, the door opened and the entire board of directors, headed by the president, entered in a very solemn manner.

"Mr. Steele," said the president, referring to a paper he held in his hand, "I desire——"

"I know just what you would say, gentlemen," interrupted the cashier, hastily, "and you will find me willing to agree to anything reasonable. Now, the question is, what sort of a compromise can we make?"

"A what, sir?" asked the president.

"Why, a compromise, of course," repeated the cashier. "Suppose I turn over thirty per cent. and we liquidate for ten on the dollar, and——"

"Ten on the dollar?" said the entire board, looking much surprised.

"Well, then, say five cents," continued the executive officer. "That will leave more for you fellows. Then if you think it looks better, I'll stay in jail for a month or two while the depositors are moving out to the poor-house, and——"

"I don't know what you are talking about, sir," said the president. "Our business here, sir, is to compliment you on the present admirable condition of the bank under your management, and to present you with this gold-headed cane as a token of our esteem and confidence."

"Great Scott!" muttered the cashier, after the directors had congratulated him and walked out, "I thought the old duffers had been investigating the books and counting the cash."—San Francisco Post.

A Chance to Hedge.

It was just such a fall season as this a dozen years ago that Uncle Daniel Drew was one day observed scratching his back against an iron column in the post-office corridor, and looking mighty solemn. One who knew him well accosted him with:

"Well, Uncle Daniel, what's the outlook?"

"Well, I've made up my mind it's going to be a powerful good year for undertakers," was the old man's plaintive reply.

Now, there's a good deal of back-scratching around New York just at present, and the chap who has the capital and nerve to start a dozen coffin-shops in the right locality will be sure of a large crop of cadavers.—Wall Street News.

—Matrimony is said to be a lottery, but up to the hour of going to press no law has been enacted prohibiting the use of the males.

—The San Francisco Call says that a number of old Californians who have come East have seen after been struck down with severe illness, the ozone in the air being different. Our esteemed contemporary should be careful how it prints strictures upon the Oriental coast. It should not take the stories of returned travellers on trust. It should investigate. Perhaps it was not the ozone in the air, but the benzine in their liquid refreshments which struck them down. It does have that effect sometimes, even upon natives.

WEATHER NOTES.

November has been a month of rain, snow and gales. It was ushered in with the thermometer at freezing point, with little change till the morning of the 6th, when it suddenly rose to 52 degrees, when it again dropped a little till Sunday, the 11th, which was a fine day, but in the evening a sudden change occurred. Some rain from the southwest, accompanied with wind, commenced a little after dark, increasing to one of the severest gales which ever visited this continent. Although fences, buildings and forests have been blown down and tossed about, it is light in comparison to the destruction and loss of life on our inland waters and sea coasts. On Monday morning a severe snow storm had set in, which continued for two days with more or less severity, and on the 16th the thermometer was only 6 degrees above zero. During the month gale has followed gale, although of less severity than the one of the 11th and 12th. During the third week we had some fine, lovely weather, which was again superseded on the 26th by Vennor's cold dip and snow; the lowest temperature was on the morning of the 16th, standing at six degrees, and the highest on the evening of the 8th, but only reaching 54 degrees. The mean temperature of the month was 33 degrees. Snow fell on nine days to the depth of 10½ inches. Rain fell on 16 days, but only to the depth of 1 12/100 inches. In the corresponding month of '82 rain fell to the depth of 1 26/100 inches, and snow fell to the depth of 11 inches, and on the 28th the glass dropped to three degrees below zero, while this year our coldest day, namely, the 16th, was 6 degrees above zero, only in this year it was accompanied with cold, piercing winds, and in '82 it was calm and mild. Twice we had thunder during the month, but only a small quantity of rain.

Editorial Notes.

The Court has fixed Jan. 7th, 1884, as the date of the trial of the West Northumberland (Dominion) election petition.

The trial of the Bothwell Dominion election petition has been fixed to take place at Chatham on Wednesday, January 3rd, 1884. Mr. Justice Galt will preside.

The only grain of comfort the Mail has found in the recent election contest in Lennox, is that the official count resulted in reducing the majority of Mr. Allison from five to four.

The Port Hope Times, a hopelessly irredeemable Tory journal, has this to say of the Lennox election:

"Mr. Allison, the Reform candidate, has been elected for Lennox by a majority of five. This is a seat gained by the Opposition, for which they may thank Mr. Roe, M.P.P."

Last Thursday at Arthabaska, P. Q., judgment was rendered in the contested Megantic Federal election case, unseating and disqualifying Frechette, the sitting Tory member, for personal bribery. It is understood that extensive corruption by Frechette and his agent was fully proven.

Following the example of the Federal Government, it is said the Quebec machine will guarantee the stocks Mr. Senecal could not sell in Europe. Here is how it works: The C. P. R. Company owns the Dominion Government, and Senecal owns the Quebec Government, and both must have their guarantee.

The Tories of Lennox have some hope that Mr. Allison will not be allowed to take his seat, and there are dark hints that the return may be Jim-Stepens-ized. They need not build very exalted hopes on that. Mr. Sheriff Pruyn,—no connection of the defeated candidate, however,—the returning officer, has lived too long and respectable a life to crown his gray hairs with the infamy of an act like the Bothwell outrage, that elected Hawkins.

Shakespere was right. There isn't much in a name. John Bunyan, of Guelph, appears to be quite a different man from John Bunyan, of "Pilgrim's Progress" fame. The former, a publican and sinner, has been committed for trial for destroying the bond which thirteen tavern-keepers of the "royal" city signed, agreeing to pay $650 towards the expenses of the Provincial exhibition, and now he has entered into a bond which he will not be able to destroy.

The N.P. was to be all powerful in fostering our "infant and struggling" industries. This is how it has done so. The St. Croix, New Brunswick, cotton mill recently became financially embarrassed and suspended operations. One of the debts it could not pay and which helped to close its career, was one of $30,000 due to the Government for duties on machinery. A nice kind of fostering, that.

Mr. Meredith, leader (under Sir John's dictation) of the Ontario Opposition, is a dangerous retrograde politician. He pronounces in favor of the abolition of responsible government. He wants the Ministry of Education abolished and the matters concerned to be dealt with by a bureau not responsible to the people. If it is better to abolish one department of Government and deprive the people of a voice in its management, why not all the departments? Irresponsible government would just suit the tyrannical genius of the Tory party.

The following facts collected by an exchange point out unmistakably the fact of depression resulting from over-production in the woollen industries:

"The operatives, numbering 250, in Mr. Willet's woollen mill at Chambly, Que., notified that the factory will be closed on the 1st of December next owing to the accumulation of stock for which there are no ready sales. The Patton Woollen Mills at Sherbrook have shut down to allow of repairs to machinery, but a director is reported as saying that the mill will be closed. The Chambly cotton factory have the past week reduced workmen ten per cent. The iron-workers, many of whom were discharged from Montreal foundries last week, have called a mass meeting to consider the best means of protecting themselves and promoting their interests."

The United States Bureau of Education has published a circular of information, containing the results of an inquiry of co-educating the sexes in 340 cities and large towns. Of these, 321 practise co-education throughout the public course, 17 co-educate for part of the course, and 2 separate the sexes entirely. The reasons adduced are: Co-education of the sexes is preferred because it is (1) natural, following the usual structure of the family and society; (2) customary, or in harmony with the habits and sentiments of every-day life and law; (3) impartial, affording both sexes equal opportunities for culture; (4) economical, using school funds to the best advantage; (5) convenient, both to the superintendent and teachers in assigning, grading, instruction, and dicipline; and (6) beneficial to the minds, moral habits, and development of pupils.

Mr. Meredith is a negative politician. His contention is that Ontario does not want one foot of territory that does not belong to her. Mr. Mowat's contention is the same, but with the addition that he takes the bold stand that she shall have all that belongs to her. To illustrate: A farmer has part of his farm claimed by a neighbor. If he employs Mr. Meredith as his lawyer, Mr. Meredith contents himself with meekly saying, "We don't want a foot of land that is not our own," and does nothing further. Mr. Mowat, as his his lawyer, would say, "We want every inch of land that is our own, and what is more, we're bound to have it," and he would make it exceedingly hot for the other side. "We don't want," is the sum of Mr. Meredith's milk and water policy in relation to the boundary matter, while Mr. Mowat's is, "We demand and will have our rights."

A deputation consisting of Mayor Boswell, of Toronto, and several charitable ladies and gentlemen, waited on Mr. Mowat, to submit to him the cases of the destitute Irish immigrants in Toronto. Mr. Mowat assured the deputation that the Ontario Government did not assist emigrants and had not done so for the past year. Rev. Mr. Macdonnell denounced the practice of leading poor people to immigrate late in the season, as if they could farm in December. Where the deputation made a mistake was not going at once to the Dominion Government. This Government by extravagant representations by its agents and money assistance, has enticed these poor people into the country and is subjecting them to want and misery. The Dominion Government is guilty of the sufferings of the unfortunate emigrants, and should undo its folly and heartlessness as much as possible by relieving the distress created by them. Instead of taking care of these poor strangers in a strange land till they get employment and houses, they are cast off with the most heartless indifference by the government who brought them to the country.

PERSONAL.

Mr. H. Calcutt returned to town from Winnipeg on Monday.

Mr. Wm. King, has returned home from Souris, Manitoba, to spend the winter in Peterborough.

Rev. I. Campbell, of Richmond Hill, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Presbyterian church at Listowell.

We regret to learn that Mr. Thomas Green, a former resident, and father-in-law of Mr. W. J. Green, merchant, died at Medicine Hat, N.W.T., on Sunday last.

Rev. S. A. Dyke, of Toronto, occupied the pulpit of the Baptist Church on Sunday last. In the evening a very interesting address to the young people was delivered.

THE SERVANT GIRL QUESTION.

"Yes," said Mrs. Brownsmith, "I want a good girl, and possibly you might do; but have you had any experience?" "Ixparience, is it?" replied the dameel, resting her hands on her hips and tossing her head in the air, "Ixparience is it? Faith, and haven't Oi been in no less than twinty families during the last month."

LORD LORNE ON CANADA.

OUR DOMINION MUST BE KNOWN TO BE APPRECIATED.

At the great cattle show held at Birmingham on Monday last Lord Lorne, in replying to an address, paid a high tribute to the Dominion of Canada. He said it was only necessary for Englishmen to know Canada to feel for her that love, sympathy, and friendship which, inherent in all true Britons, binds the Empire into one indivisible brotherhood.

"Is there anything wrong in kissing?" he asked her, as they stood together at the gate. "Certainly there is," she replied, "or there wouldn't be any fun in it."

THE MAYORALTY.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—

As Mr. H. H. Smith, our present Mayor, some time ago, signified his intention of not seeking re-election to the office of Mayor of the Town of Peterborough, at the earnest request and solicitation of a very large number of the representative ratepayers, I now offer myself as a candidate for that office.

For many years, I, as Councillor, have represented you, and have always striven diligently and faithfully to perform my duty towards my constituents and the public at large, and I now confidently refer you to and rely upon my labors and honest exertions in your behalf.

If elected, it will ever be my pleasure and honor to do my utmost to preserve and advance the interests of your town, and by strict integrity, economy and attention to your affairs, to merit the good will and esteem of my fellow citizens.

I do not intend, nor will I be able to make a personal canvass, but take this means of asking the votes of each of the independent electorate of this town, remaining

Naught but Death Divorces;

OR,

LADY AUDREY'S SACRIFICE.

CHAPTER X.

Lady Villiers was standing in the crush-room of the Royal Italian Opera. She had been the observed of all observers during the night. She had worn the famous Villiers diamonds, with a superb dress of pale blue; her brown hair, her dark eyes, her pure, beautiful face, with its sweet expression, had attracted more observation than anything on the stage.

Once, on looking round the house, she saw Lady Glenarvon [illegible], her brother-in-law; she was on the opposite side, talking very lively in a most [illegible] costume of black and silver. Several gentlemen were in the box with her, and it was evident that Lady Glenarvon was amusing them greatly by some anecdote she was telling.

More than once their eyes met, and Lady Villiers flushed with annoyance; she was merciful always in her judgments, but to her pure and innocent mind there was something revolting in the idea that a woman over whom such a shadow hung should set herself up in high places to receive the homage and admiration of men. As she stood in the crush-room Sir Roche looked at the fair face of his young wife. He mistook the sadness for fatigue.

"You are tired, my darling," he said. "If you do not mind my leaving you for a few moments, I will try to get the carriage at once."

She liked afterward to remember that she had looked with a loving smile into his kindly eyes—that as he released her hand he had held it lovingly in his grasp—for after that hour the world was never the same to her again.

As she stood there a group of people passed her.

She had a confused notion of white silk, of black and silver, of pearl-gray brocade, brushing past her as a slip of folded paper was thrust into her hand, she could not tell by whom.

"You threw down the gauntlet!" a silvery voice hissed in her ear; but when she turned round no one was near her—the group of ladies had passed.

She looked at the paper.

"Read this when you are quite alone," was written in large letters across it.

In a moment it occurred to her that it was some begging-letter from one who wanted help—she had many such; she placed it in the pocket of her dress, and resolved to read it when she reached home.

Sir Roche had promised to spend an hour at his club with a famous traveller who had just returned from a long exploring tour in Africa. When he saw the pale, tired look on his wife's face, he said:

"Audrey, I shall not go to the club; I will go home with you."

But she would not hear of it.

"I heard you promise Mr. Miles," she said, "and you must go."

He drove with her as far as the club, and sat with her hand in his. He kissed her face and said that he must take more care of her, that she must not go out so much. And, when the carriage stopped at the club, he kissed her lips and said laughingly that he would a thousand times rather go home with her than hear of Miles' exploits.

Some instinct made her bend forward and say:

"Kiss me again, Roche."

He kissed her again, little dreaming that it was for the last time.

He ascended the broad flight of steps, thinking of the sweet face, the tender lips, the dear voice, and almost wishing Miles still in Africa, while Lady Villiers drove home. She did not open the note until her maid had left her and she was quite alone. Then she unfolded the paper and read the cruel words that stabbed her gentle heart:

"The writer of this advises Lady Villiers not to say anything more on the subject of divorces, as she is making herself and her husband a jest at which all London laughs. The writer can hardly imagine Lady Villiers to be quite in ignorance of the circumstances under which she was married; but, if it should be so, Lady Villiers had better get a copy of the Times for Thursday, the 17th of April, 18—, and amongst the reports of the divorce cases she will find one that will not only surprise her, but will close her lips for the future on all such subjects."

Audrey read the the note with a contemptuous smile; no faint glimmering of the truth came to her—no suspicion.

"How could a divorce case affect me?" she asked herself. "I do not know any one who has been through the Divorce Court. The lines are written only to frighten me."

Still the words touched her. She could not sleep for thinking of them. She repeated them over and over again to herself. Her husband and herself a jest at which all London laughed—what could it mean? Surely it had no reference to Roche. She sprang up with a cry of horror on her lips. Her husband! Dear Heaven, it surely could have nothing to do with him!

Her heart beat wildly, her brain burned, her blood ran like fire through her veins, and then froze like ice. Her husband—the one man she had loved with the love of her life—could the reference affect him? They had never spoken on such a subject as divorce, but she felt quite sure that he would share her opinions.

Still a horrible fear seized her which made her heart stand still; her lips grew cold and trembled; there was something wrong, or how a stranger dare to write such words to her?

It seemed long before the sun shone through the windows—she rose at once when she saw the first beams. She had but one thought in her mind, and that was to get a copy of the Times of April 17, 18—, as soon as possible.

Hope came back with the daylight. Why need she have suffered such pain and fright? All would be well; her husband stood apart from other men. She knew by the purity and stainless honor of his life that there was no need to fear for him.

Yet why did her heart beat fast, why did every nerve thrill, why was her face so white, why did the breath come in thick hot gasps from her lips, what was this awful sense of foreboding? She opened her window, and the sweet western wind blew in; the sky was beautiful in its first rosy flush of dawn.

It was too early yet to carry out her purpose. She sat by the window waiting and praying. Though she had the simplicity and innocence of a child, she was not without the quick common sense which always points out the readiest way to accomplish much. She had wondered what she was to do in order to get the Times of the desired date, and reason told her that the quickest plan would be to go to the Times office and see if they could let her have what she wanted; it was only five years back—surely there would be no difficulty.

Her maid looked surprised on finding her beautiful young mistress up and dressed.

"Rose," said Lady Villiers, "I am going out. I want a cab—I will not take the carriage—order a cab, and dress yourself to go with me."

It was unusual, but Audrey's servants loved her and willingly obeyed her. In a few minutes' time Lady Villiers and her maid were on their way to the city.

Her purpose was not so easily accomplished as she had imagined—there were many delays—she had driven from one place to another; but at last she succeeded, and held in her hand a copy of the Times for Thursday, the 17th of April, five years before. She looked at the paper as she held it folded in her hands—what did it contain?

"I have found what I wanted, Rose," she said to her maid; "we will hurry back home." She would not open the folded sheets; whatever they contained, she must be alone when she read them.

In another half-hour she and her maid were at home. It was nearly noon then, and Sir Roche, after leaving a little note for his wife, had gone out—he would return to luncheon at two.

Audrey read the note. "How dearly he loves me!" was the thought that passed through her mind as she went once more to the solitude of her own room.

She controlled her impatience while Rose took off the plain walking-dress and brought her her pretty dressing-gown. The maid brushed out the long, bright hair, and left it lying like a glittering veil on her mistress' shoulders; then she drew the easy chair near to the open widow, and left lady Villiers to rest, little dreaming how impatiently she wished her gone.

The door was closed, and she was alone at last, with the newspaper in her hands. She saw the case at once; it was the second on the list.

"VILLIERS v. DIGHTON."

"The last hearing of this celebrated case took place to-day. Sir Roche Villiers was examined. Witnesses proved that Elodie, Lady Villiers, left London on the evening of February 21st with the co-respondent, Capt. Archer Dighton. There was no defense. The divorce was granted. Captain Archer Dighton was condemned to pay five thousand pounds damages and costs."

Lower down in the same column was a paragraph which read as follows:

"ROMANCE IN HIGH LIFE.—None of our readers will be surprised to hear that Sir Roche Villiers has succeeded in obtaining a divorce from his wife. The unfortunate lady, whose name has lately become so notorious, was young, beautiful, and had been one of the leaders of fashion. Captain Archer Dighton has been compelled to pay five thousand pounds damages. This unhappy affair has created a great sensation in London. Sir Roche Villiers had not long succeeded to the Barony of King's Wynne and the Rowan estate. When will dawn a brighter day for the manners and morals of Old England?"

As she read the words it seemed to her that all the life was dying slowly from her. She felt the light depart from her eyes, the strength from her limbs; the paper fell from her trembling hands on the floor; she sank back with a low cry as from the lips of a dying woman.

She lay quite motionless and silent, the sun shining on her face, the wind breathing over it, while she was unconscious of everything.

How long she remained so she never knew. When she recovered consciousness, one by one, like the sharp cuts of a sword, there came to her the trival events which at the time they had happened had seemed nothing.

Was what she had read the cause of the Letsoms avoiding her, of Lady Moreton's speaking of some of her neighbors as religious people, of her never having been to Court?

A hundred little circumstances, all confirming what she had read, came back to her—the closed rooms at Rowan, the song with the name of Elodie upon it which her husband had destroyed so fiercely, the words he had said to her, when when he first wooed her, about the treachery of one whom he had trusted. She fell upon her knees with a bitter cry. The report must be true—everything corroborated it.

Then she heard Sir Roche's step in the hall. He was singing softly to himself the refrain of some love-song. He went into the library, and as he closed the door the sound of his voice ceased.

"I must go to him," she said to herself; "I must ask him about it; I must know the truth."

She took the newspaper in her hands. As she moved across the room she caught a glimpse of her face in the mirror—a white, wild face, out of which wild eyes gleamed with a strange fire. She did not know herself.

"I must go at once," she said, "or I shall go mad."

She went to the library and opened the door. Sir Roche was writing. He looked up with a smile as she entered, but the smile disappeared when he saw the unutterable woe in the dark eyes, the trembling lips on which all sound seemed to die away. He rose and went to her.

"Audrey, my darling," he said, "what is the matter?"

She placed the newspaper in his hands.

"Read this," she said, "and tell me if it be true."

Her voice was so changed and hollow that it startled him. He looked at the newspaper. Ah, there was no need to ask again if it were true or not, no need for words! He read the first few lines, and his face grew as white as her own.

"Is it true?" she asked.

He was silent for a minute, looking with wistful eyes into her own; then he spoke calmly, clearly.

"Yes, it is quite true," he answered; "but why need it trouble you?"

"Is it true that five years ago you had a young wife whom you called Elodie?"

"It is quite true, my darling, but——"

She held up her hand with a gesture for silence—an imperious, graceful gesture which he could not resist. He was silent.

"Did you really marry her as you married me? Was it a lawful, legal, honorable marriage before God and man?"

"It was," he replied.

"She was your wife. She loved you, you loved her. Your marriage was legal, honorable—you admit all this?"

"Yes; but listen, Audrey——"

"Let me speak first. If this be true—oh, Heaven, Roche!—tell me what am I?"

"You are my dear and honored wife," he cried.

"Nay, that is impossible. A man cannot have two wives, and you had a wife living when you married me."

"I deny it. I had no wife. I was as free to marry as you yourself."

"Who then was Elodie?" she asked.

"She was my wife, but the law had freed me from her—the law had freed me, freed her."

"What law?" she asked, slowly.

"The law of the land—the law that steps in to save men and women from being driven mad."

"It could not, Roche," she said, with the calmness of despair. "There is no vow so solemn as the marriage vow. It is taken before Heaven, and death can only give relief. No man, no human power can step in and put asunder those whom God hath joined together."

She stopped, for the words died on her lips. He looked at her with infinite pity and kindness.

"You are mistaken, Audrey," he said. "The human law does step in and free those who have been joined by a solemn vow."

"It cannot—at least, that is my belief. The words of the marriage service are, 'until death do us part.' Death has not parted you from Elodie, the woman you married." She looked up at him with a strange expression. "Is she still living, Roche?" she asked, suddenly.

"Yes, she is still living," he replied, slowly.

She uttered a low cry of bitter agony.

"Oh, Heaven, Roche," she said, "if that be true, what am I?"

"Audrey, you must listen to reason. You are, in the eyes of the law, in the eyes of all men, my lawful, honored, most beloved wife."

"What am I in the eyes of Heaven?" she asked.

"The same," he replied.

"Nay, that cannot be. It is the same heaven you called to witness the fact that you took Elodie as your wife until death should part you. Death has not parted you; therefore, before Heaven, you are not free, and she still is your wife."

"My dearest Audrey, you must listen to reason," he began.

"That is reason," she answered, "the highest, wisest, best."

"You have been so quietly and so strictly brought up, Audrey," he said, "you are hardly qualified to judge."

She wrung her hands with a little cry that touched his heart.

"My bringing-up makes but little difference; there is but one rule for right or wrong. No false arguments, no sophistries, can alter my opinion; and, fixed and unalterable, it is this—that no human power can free you from an oath taken before God—that no law can either supersede or set aside the law of God."

CONFIDENTIAL.

Thousands of young Men and Women—married and single—through the effects of vicious youthful habits, or excessive indulgence in later years, have so undermined their general systems as to induce almost every other disease, and the real cause of these troubles being scarcely ever suspected, they are drugged and doctored for everything but the right one. The ordinary modes of treating troubles of this nature do no good. The JERUBEBIN COMBINATOIN REMEDY is offered as A Speedy and Certain Cure, as hundreds afflicted with every form of disease have been restored to complete health by its use, after all other remedies failed. This remedy is adapted to every condition of nervous debility and weakness in either sex, but especially in cases arising from imprudence. Its recuperative powers are truly astonishing, and its continued use for a short time changes the languid, debilitated condition, to one of renewed life and vigor.

Forwarded to any address, on receipt of Price, $2 per package—sufficient for one month's treatment.

THE OLDEST CHRISTIAN HYMN.

In Book III of Clement of Alexandria, (Greek) is the most ancient hymn of the Primitive Church. It is there (one hundred and fifty years after the Apostles) stated to be of much earlier origin, and may have been sung by the "beloved disciple" before he ascended to his reward. The following version will give some imperfect idea of its spirit:

Shepherd of tender youth,
Guiding in love and truth,
Through devious ways;
Christ, our triumphant King!
We come Thy name to sing.
And here our children bring
To shout thy praise.

Thou art our holy Lord!
The all-subduing word,
Healer of strife!
Thou didst Thyself abase,
That from sin's deep disgrace
Thou mightest save our race,
And give us life.

Thou art wisdom's High Priest!
Thou has prepared the feast
Of holy love!
And in our mortal pain
None call on Thee in vain;
Help Thou dost not disdain,
Help from above.

Ever be Thou our guide,
Our shepherd and our pride,
Our staff and song!
Jesus! Thou Christ of God!
By the perennial word,
Lead us where thou hast trod,
Make our faith strong.

So now, and till we die,
Sound we Thy praise on high,
And joyful sing,
Infants and the glad throng,
Who to Thy church belong,
Unite and swell the song
To Christ our King!

The Princess Louise is glad to get back to English country life. She is described as having the busy German wife strongly developed in her, and while at her country place of Dorndend to have bustled about all day, looked after all the domestic arrangements, carved at meals, and made herself generally useful. After dinner she went round to the stable and kitchen garden and joined in a game of billiards.

A Good Return.

Children are not often tortured now-a-days with bitter Aloes, Brimstone, and Treacle, and the many nauseous remedies of the olden times. Freeman's Worm Powders are pleasant to take, contain their own purgative, and safely and effectually remove all ordinary species of worms afflicting children or adults. 49-2t

"I hev allus noticed," observes Aunt Tabitha, "that the boy who lets his mother bring in all the kindlin' wood and build the kitchen fire is the mourner that bellers loudest at her funeral." And then she added thoughtfully, "Mebbe as not it is because he misses her the most."

A Difficulty Overcome.

It is often very difficult to get children to take medicine, and especially Worm Remedies, which they often require. Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup is not only agreeable to take, but a safe and certain cure for all varieties of worms, including tape worms, that produce serious disturbance with children and adults. 49-2t

"Oh, yes," said the eldest Miss Culture at table d'hote, the other evening. "I breakfasted yesterday with Miss Branwait and we enjoyed a delicious repast—excellent coffee, superior bread, and piscatorial globes done admirably." "What?" asked her friend. "Piscatorial globes," repeated the Boston miss. "And what under the sun are they?" "I believe," said Miss Culture, drawing herself up stiffly, "I believe uncultured people call them fish balls."

DERBY, N. B., Jan. 6, 1883.

I caught a cold last fall on the stage coach going to Chatham, which settled in a very severe cough, and finally I was confined to my room. I feared it would very soon terminate in consumption as I was growing weaker every day. I got very much alarmed; could not sleep for want of breath, when my doctor advised me to try Dr. Wilson's Pulmonary Cherry Balsam. I felt sceptical at first, but after using one bottle found I was recovering, and on finishing my third bottle was a new man, cough all gone and completely cured. It is well named the great remedy.

PROTECTION AND FARMERS.

The Rural New Yorker, thus regards the demand of the Canadian Millers for reduction of the duty on wheat;—When the protective system was inaugurated in Canada in 1879, a sop was given to farmers in the shape of a duty of 15 cents per bushel on wheat, just as our own protective Government flatters the farmers of this country with a duty of 20 cents per bushel on the same cereal. As there has always been a surplus of wheat in the Dominion since the above date this duty has hitherto been inoperative, just as the duty always will be in this country owing to a like cause. On account of the poor crops across the border this year, however, there is a considerable deficiency of wheat for home requirements, and the Dominion Millers' Association has just sent a deputation of its best men to Ottawa to urge upon the Government a reduction of the duty on wheat from 15c. to 7½c. per bushel. Manitoba wheat, instead of going to Lower Canada, now goes to Minneapolis, as our Government allows the Minnesota millers to "grind in bond," so that the Canadian millers are left out, and they say that if the duty is not reduced, wheat will be ground in this country and imported as flower; whereas if the duty is reduced the Canadian millers will have a chance to live while the farmers will get the benefit of lower duty. If the duty is kept up they say the millers must quit the business until next season, and the farmers' wheat must go to Europe and take its chance with all competitors because it cannot be ground at home! Some of the mills may shut down, however, but enough are sure to keep open to grind all obtainable wheat. The protective system has hitherto been an unmitigated curse to Canadian farmers, so that the settlers in Manitoba threaten to secede from the Dominion on account of its hardships in the Far North-west, and now that the duty on wheat is likely to prove a benefit to the agricultural community, it appears a piece of intolerable impertinence to ask them to forego the advantage.

EARLY BEEF.

The most extensive cattle-feeder of Illinois, Mr. Gillett, says it takes an immense capital to carry steers until three years old, before being properly fitted for the shambles: and for one, he has now done with it, He will dispose of his present three-year-olds this fall, and never rear another lot this age. Hereafter he intends to keep his calves fat as they grow up. He will induce them to eat oats and grass before weaning, so that they cannot fall away in flesh when taken from suckling the cows. He will continue the oats and hay in winter until they can digest well, and then give them plenty of that. By this system of feeding he can bring his high grade Shorthorn steers up to 1,500 pounds at twenty to twenty-eight months old. Young cattle take no flesh and fatten much faster previous to attaining the age of two years than at any subsequent period. In consequence of this there is considerable profit in pushing them up with plenty of feed thus far, rather than allow less feeding, and keep them on till 3 years old. Beeves of 1,200 to 1,500 pounds weight are not preferred, both in the American and English markets, to those older, for their meat is found to be more tender, juicy and savory, than that of older and heavier cattle.

DOMESTIC RECIPES.

LOAF CAKE.

One cup of butter, one cup of sugar, four eggs, two cups of flour, one teaspoonful of cream-of-tartar, and one-half teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one-third cup of cold sweet milk. Sift the cream-of-tartar with the flour. Flavor with lemon. Currants or raisins may be added if liked.

DRIED-APPLE CAKE.

Two teacupfuls of dried apples, soaked over night and chopped fine; stew them in two cupfuls of molasses (or syrup) until well cooked. Then take two eggs, one cup of butter, one cut of sugar, one of sour cream, a little salt, two teaspoonfuls of soda, three cups of flour; stir the flour with the fruit before mixing with the rest; spices to suit the taste; the more the better. This makes an excellent cake.

SILVER CAKE.

Beat one-half cup of butter and one-and-one-half cups of powdered sugar together; one teaspoonful of baking-powder sifted in two cups of flour; three-fourths cup of sweet milk; the whites of four eggs beaten to the cream; flavor with lemon; bake in an evenly heated oven.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED.

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price in a sealed envelope, on 6c. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

1883. CHRISTMAS. 1883.

R. W. MUNCASTER'S JEWELLERY STORE

Cluxton's Block, George Street, Peterborough.

It is now the season of the year when people begin to think what they will select for Xmas and New Year's Presents, and again where they will purchase them. The first consideration of course, is important, but the second is, to those who have not as yet dealt with me, by far the more difficult to determine upon, as there are so many long-winded Advertisements presented to the public, which do not realize in effect what the customer has been led to expect from reading descriptions of the quality and size of some stocks which are not substantiated by facts. The verdict passed by everyone who have satisfied themselves of the reliability of my statements regarding the Quality, Cheapness and Quantity of my Stock, I am happy to say, has been without any exception, favorable. My constituents have found that when I advertised that I had the Best, the Newest, the Cheapest, and in every respect the Largest Stock of Jewellery in Peterborough, I have even exceeded my representations by showing the nicest display in the whole Midland District, and by their dealings with me, have discovered that my style of doing business has given them confidence that no article will be misrepresented, which confidence in purchasing such an article as Jewellery the buyer must have. All I want is every person in Town to come in and examine my stock and I think I can satisfy them that I have what I advertise. Also that I cannot be undersold by any dealer in Town—not one.

My present Stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewellery and Silver Ware, is the largest and best I have ever had, and for Price, Novelty and Reliability is unsurpassed. Among the immense stock will be found a full line of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES at all Prices and makes. GOLD JEWELLERY, in Necklets and Lockets, Watch Chains, Guards and Alberts, Breast Pins and Scarf Pins, Charms, Bracelets, &c. Brooches and Ear-rings set with Diamonds, Garnets, Aqua Marines, Turquoise and Pearls. GOLD RINGS. Ladies Gold Rings mounted with Real Stones, in every conceivable Design. WEDDING RINGS, in all sizes and Prices at a high standard of Quality. Gold Keeper Rings, in Chased, Engraved and Chased, and Engraved. SILVER JEWELLERY in all styles of Brooches, Earrings, Lockets, Chains, Necklets, &c.

SILVERWARE! -:- SILVERWARE!

The above line of Goods are being cut so much upon of late that the Quality has become quite a secondary matter with some dealers. Their whole aim is centred in presenting a showy and trashy article, which will catch the eye and which will not wear much longer than a good quality of Pewter. Such a quality as that I do not keep at all. I have nothing but the Best Quadruple Plate, made by the leading American Manufacturers, whose reputation is the result of supplying a first class article to the public for the last fifty years. The stock of Plated Ware consists of all the Latest Designs in Cruets, Butter Dishes, Card Receivers, Cake Baskets, Pickle Stands, Knives and Forks, Spoons in Tea, Table and Dessert, and Fancy Articles, suitable for Christmas and New Year Presents.

WATCH REPAIRING

This Department is one which is sadly neglected in the average Jewellery Store. The object sought to be attained is to make as much money as possible out of Customers by charging exhorbitant prices and procuring cheap workmen. My reputation for work has been achieved by always doing GOOD, RELIABLE WORK, and charging a moderate figure for it, so that people leaving Watches with me for Repairs, know that they can rely on all Work leaving my hands. Do not fail to inspect my immense stock before deciding on your purchases. DO NOT FAIL TO REMEMBER THAT supply of Mantles is pronounced to be the finest in the town. All sizes and styles for ladies and children. Mantle Cloths sold by the yard very cheap. Sole agents for Butterick's patterns. 42

Furs! Furs!

W. Fairweather & Co. have the finest stock of Furs ever shown by them. Astrachan and Dogskin Jackets and Mantles. Ladies' Silk, Satin and Brocade Circulars, Fur Lined, are elegant, and are selling fast. Their prices are right. 42

Turnbull has just placed on his counters a large consignment of bankrupt stock which he is offering in many instances at less than Manufacturers' prices, consisting of goods every family wants, such as Blankets, Flannels, Winceys, Ginghams, Tweedling, Carpets, Hosiery, etc. Call early; these goods are sure to sell quickly at the prices offering.

Y. M. C. A.

Mr. T. S. Cole, Travelling Secretary, will address the young men's meeting on Saturday night, and the Gospel meeting on Sunday night, at the Y.M.C.A. rooms. He will also speak at the railway men's meeting on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the Midland Railway station.

Y. M. C. A. Lecture.

Rev. Hugh Johnston, B.D., of the Metropolitan church, Toronto, will lecture in the George Street Methodist Church on Thursday evening, December thirteenth. Subject, "London to Jerusalem." A great literary treat is in store for those who attend this lecture. Admission 25 cents.

Rather Thin.

A young man from town went out all the distance to Warsaw to indulge in a rabbit hunt. He tramped all day—about twenty miles—and secured four rabbits. He hung them on a farm fence while he went in to get something to eat. When he came out the game had disappeared, at least that is the explanation he made for returning home empty handed.

Prodigious Porkers.

Last Saturday Mr. John Fairbairn, of Smith, sold on the market to Mr. Saunders, of Lakefield, three giant porkers which weighed respectively 465, 466, and 446 lbs. The price was $6 per hundred pounds. These are the largest and heaviest animals that have registered on the Peterborough market to date.

Milliners, Attention!

Mrs. Brown, George street, by advertisement in another column, announces the sale of her millinery business, she having decided to retire from business on Jan. 1st. The stock must be disposed of, and bargains may be obtained. A splendid chance for any one wishing to go into the business—a first-class stand and premises.

Acknowledgement.

The Peterborough Protestant Home committee acknowledges with thanks the receipt of the following donations during the month of November:—A friend, a bag of apples and a jar of pickled pears; Mrs. Alexander, a bag of apples; Mrs. McKibbin, pair of chickens; Mrs. M., parcel of clothing; Miss Nichols, parcel of clothing; union thanksgiving services, Presbyterian and Methodist churches at Keene, $11.32; Mr. Walton, 2 bags of carrots.

Ontario and Quebec R.R.

Work on the home section of this line is progressing rapidly. The track has been laid west of the town as far as Pontypool, over twenty miles. The stone work of the new bridge will be completed in a week, and the Hamilton Iron bridge company, which has the contract for the iron work, has begun to deliver the material here, and will push on the work rapidly. The bridge is said to be the strongest in the world. Messrs. McDermid Hendrie, contractors for the section between Norwood and Bethany, state that the road will be running regular trains by Christmas.

Dr. Ryerson,

Specialist in diseases of the eye, ear and throat, will be at the Oriental Hotel on Saturday, Dec. fifteenth.

Sale of Useful Articles.

The Ladies' Aid Society in connection with St. Andrew's church will hold a sale of useful and fancy articles in the School Room adjoining the Church on Thursday evening, 20th December. Further particulars next week.

Photography.

Mrs. Harriet Esterbrook announces that she will carry on the photographic business of her late husband, and having placed the studio in competent hands, can guarantee first-class work. Pictures by the instantaneous process. A fine stock of beautiful frames, etc., at low prices.

Clergyman Left.

The Rev. E. C. Wilson, who recently resigned the mission of Otonabee, has, we understand, somewhat suddenly left for England. No successor has been appointed as yet, but two of the services will be kept up by the Incumbent of Ashburnham.

Suspended.

We greatly regret to learn that the hardware firm of Messrs. Walton & Bird, of Emerson, Manitoba, both well known here, have been compelled by the collapse of the boom, to call a meeting of their creditors. We hope the embarrassment is only temporary.

Nonsuch! Washing Compound

Is unlike any of the ordinary crystal preparations in its composition and action. It is the only compound, we believe, that will without any injurious effect thoroughly cleanse all fabrics. Its use dispenses with the great labour and fatigue incident to washing in the ordinary way. It never fails to satisfy. For sale by all grocers. 49-52t

Complimentary.

The Lindsay Post, speaking of the new Midland time sheet makes the following well deserved complimentary remarks:—"As Mr. W. B. Ferguson and his staff received many blessings here for the old time-table it is only fair to state that W. B. now receives the most cordial praise for his skill in laying out and engineering the new time-table. If W. B. should come to Lindsay he could be elected mayor or any other office he might wish. He is a first-rate fellow, anyway."

Explanatory.

This issue of THE EXAMINER testifies to the high estimation in which the paper is held as an advertising medium. In spite of the relief to our advertising space, afforded by our Christmas issue, we are this week compelled on account of a rush of advertisements, to print a ten-page sheet, and even with that, we have to condense local news to more mention and to hold over a great deal besides.

Ashburnham Council.

The Ashburnham Council met on Monday evening, J. Burnham, Esq., Reeve, in the chair. A by-law was passed appointing polling places and returning officers, as follows:—North division, deputy returning officer, A. H. Peck; south division, Jonathan Stephenson, deputy returning officer. The road overseer, Mr. Craig, was instructed to lay down a crossing over the culvert opposite Mr. Wall's premises.

Accident in Smith.

A few days ago Mr. Wm. Graham, of Smith, fourth line, met with a painful accident. While under-brushing he accidentally drove the blade of the axe into his leg, midway between the knee and ankle, making a wound nearly an inch deep, and about one and a third inch in length. No important blood-vessels were cut, and Mr. Graham is improving rapidly.

Marvel of Cheapness.

Great excitement in the Dry Goods trade. The store of W. Fairweather & Co. is thronged from morning to night. The Cheap Dress Goods, New Mantles and Jackets are the attraction. The Black and Coloured Dress Silks, at 50c., 75c. and $1.00 are marvels of cheapness, at W. Fairweather & Co's.

Conductor Stanton's Score.

The Ottawa Free Press contains the following:—"Mr. Stanton, conductor of the Grand Junction Railway, and Mrs. Stanton and Miss Stanton, of Belleville, who have been visiting here for some time past, the guests of Mr. J. S. Casselman, returned home on Wednesday last. The evening before their departure Mr. Stanton shot a magnificent buck, which he took with him to his western home. Mr. J. S. Casselman has succeeded in killing eight deer this season. Among them were several which tipped the beam at two hundred and fifty pounds. On Tuesday last he shot a splendid specimen of the golden crested eagle, which he will have preserved and mounted. Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Casselman intend spending the winter months in South California."

Spectacles.

Testimonial from Edward J. Stobo, Pastor of the Baptist Church, Belleville:

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Nov. 24th, 1883.

Mr. B. Laurance has succeeded admirably in suiting Mrs. Stobo and myself with spectacles adapted to the state of the visual organs, and we have every reason to believe him a skillful optician and worthy of public patronage.

EDWARD J. STOBO.

Testimonial from M. Sullivan, M.D., President Medical Association of Canada, and Professor of Practice and Principles of Surgery, Royal College Physicians and Surgeons, Kingston, Ont.:

KINGSTON, Oct. 19th, 1883.

The visit to Kingston of a practical, skilful, experienced optician, such as Mr. Laurance will in my opinion prove, is an event of great advantage to those suffering from impaired vision. From conversations with him and examination of his accurate and highly finished glasses, together with observation of cases benefited, I have pleasure in strongly recommending him as a gentleman worthy of entire confidence.

(Signed,) M. SULLVAN, M.D.

Testimonial from J. Mackenzie, F.R.C.S., Eng., (Retired Surgeon Major Her Majesty's Indian Army) and late Senior Surgeon Janisctsee Hospital, Bombay:

KINGSTON, Ont., October 31, 1883.

Mr. Laurance requested me to express an opinion on the spectacles advertised for sale at Mr. J. Geo. King's. They appear to be carefully constructed, of good defining power, with the glasses in each frame of equal focal length. Mr. Laurance is prepared to furnish glasses for cases, where there is an unequal refractive state of the two eyes and for other abnormal conditions of vision assisted by spectacle glasses.

THE LATE ROBT. NICHOLLS' WILL.

His Wife Sole Heiress and Executrix.

The last will and testament of the late Robert Nicholls was admitted to probate on the 26th of November. The following is a copy of it word for word and letter for letter. The penmanship of the instrument was in the late Mr. Nicholl's own hand:—

This is the Last Will and Testament of me, Robert Nicholls, of the Town of Peterborough, County of Peterborough, Province of Ontario and Dominion of Canada, Merchant, made and published at the said Town of Peterborough this Fifth day of September in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight.

I hereby revoke all former last Wills and Testaments and in the nature thereof, by me at any time heretofore made, and I appoint my wife, Charlotte Jane Nicholls, sole executrix of this my Will.

I give, devise, and bequeath to my said wife, Charlotte Jane Nicholls, all my estate both Real and Personal, whatsoever and wheresoever of which I may die seized of, possessed of, or entitled to, or which I may hereafter become entitled to, of what nature or kind whatsoever, to have and to hold to her, her Heirs and assigns for ever.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand the day and year first above written.

(Signed), R. NICHOLLS.

The witnesses are Robert. Innes, Merchant, Peterborough; Richard Hall, Merchant, Peterborough.

The fees of His Honor Judge Dennistoun, in connection with the proof of the above will, were $494.50, and the amount of stamps was $247.25. This shows that the amount of personal estate was $493,717.53, the fees being $1.00 on every thousand of personal property only.

B. LAURANCE'S SPECTACLES.

MR. B. LAURANCE, of the above mentioned establishments, has the honor to announce to the Citizens of Peterborough and surrounding country that he will locate his Office at

The Medical Hall, (Taylor & Macdonald)

Corner of George and Hunter Streets, Peterborough.

For a short time, remaining a few days after THURSDAY, 13th, with a complete assortment of the above Lenses. Laurance's Spectacles, so well known and appreciated in the United Kingdom, will be offered by him to spectacle wearers at the same prices they are sold at in England. Ground on scientific principles, from either the clearest and purest pebble, or from optical glass, especially manufactured for the purpose, they are without exception best adapted to restore the ravages of age and to retain perfect vision. For these reasons they are especially recommended by the most eminent men of the faculty.

MR. B. LAURANCE, will adapt Lenses without extra charge, and his invaluable services will be placed at the disposal of Messrs. Taylor & Macdonald's customers for a few days only, commencing on the above date. Each eye will undergo a special examination, and the Spectacles will be fitted with the particular lens best suited to the condition of each eye, and as no better opportunity will ever be offered for persons with impaired sight to be properly suited, he trusts this opportunity will be duly appreciated. COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE INQUIRY

No Result Arrived at.

In accordance with Mr. Rutherford's resolution passed at the last meeting; the Board, met in Committee of the Whole on Tuesday night, Mr. Wrighton in the chair, all the members present.

Mr. Rutherford inquired as to a resolution on the minutes appointing the present principal.

The secretary stated that the first engagement was for six months, afterwards extended to a year, at a salary of $1200 per annum.

Mr. Rutherford, as the mover of the resolution calling the committee of the whole together, stated that the meeting of the Committee on Appointments had modified the situation. Mr. James, modern language master, had applied for another situation, and had an offer at $100 advance on his present salary. He had told the committee that he had songht another situation because he had been led to believe that his services would be dispensed with, as there were more teachers than were required, but he would stay if his salary was increased by $100. The committee came to no decision, thinking that the Board should deal with the matter. It transpired that Mr. James was teaching branches belonging to other masters, and he said he had taken these branches to fill up the time. It also transpired that Mr. James could take classics as well as modern languages, and that by a re-arrangement one teacher could be dispensed with. He (Mr. R.) thought that even more radical changes than that could be made. The staff was not doing what was expected of it, and some of the teachers were not showing a good example. The principal was not up to the expectation of the Board—he lacked energy. Complaints had been made against Mr. Campbell, not that he lacked ability, but he had not enough pupils to teach. One of the other teachers was a good teacher but was otherwise objectionable. There was a great need of a lady teacher. On account of her absence many young ladies were leaving town for their education. If the Institute was to prosper there must be a competent lady teacher.

Mr. Dumble said the meeting of the committee had been an emergency one. Mr. James had, for reasons sufficient to himself, applied and got an offer of another situation at a higher salary. It had been rumored that some of the teachers had been teaching classes that had been made for them, and he had asked Mr. James, who had replied that he was teaching four classes in French, but could do with fewer classes in this branch. He was also teaching other classes to fill in his time. He (Mr. D.) was glad this meeting had been called. He was an old member of the Board, and he had thought out a course the Board ought to take. He argued that it paid better to take a liberal, than an apparently economical view of the matter. He boldly took the position that a successful school was the cheapest, and to secure this there must be an efficient staff of teachers which would command public respect. This respect being secured the school's success was easy. In the past from false economy the Board had dispensed with a lady teacher, and he had since felt that a great mistake had been made. It was a singular fact that in this town of 10,000 inhabitants there was no ladies' school, therefore it was absolutely necessary to have in the institute a lady teacher with culture and refinement which could be transmitted to lady pupils. The better class of young ladies went out of town for their culture, and other girls lost the opportunity of enjoying the refinement of association that they would enjoy if the school were provided with a lady teacher competent to command the confidence and secure the attendance of the former class of girls. To these there could be added pupils that fell off on account of fees and other matters. The cheapest school was not always the best. Economy says that we can do with four teachers, but this would degrade the standing of the school and lose for it that respect essential to its success. If the Institute were reduced to a public school itself, the expense for heating, lighting, insurance, stationery, etc., would remain. Counting these expenses as permanent in any case, the actual cost of the Institute proper would be reduced to $1350. The school with a first class principal would cost less than it does to-day. Our ideas of economy had placed us in the present position, where we were forced to equire what we must do to help the school. It was not best to diminish the teachers, but to make them more efficient. It was no credit to Peterborough to have an inferior high school. To increase its efficiency it was evident that we must have a new principal. The present one had not come up to expectation. If we got a new principal he must be one who was able to arrange the classes and conduct the school to its best advantage We must have a classical master because the law required classics, for law, medicine, drugs, etc., and if we had to teach classics let us do it well. The classical master must be kept. The present one had been highly complimented on the success of his teaching. He insisted that we must have a new principal who would bring about a stop to other objectionable features. The teachers must be made to do their own work and mind their own business. Some teachers had gone beyond that and interfered and made trouble both inside and outside the school. Provision should be made for new teachers and the arrangement of classes should be left to an efficient principal.

Mr. Cox said he would endorse what Mr. Dumble had said, and his views were in full accord with his on the subject.

Mr. Kendry did not approve of the course taken by Mr. James, it appeared like dictating to the committee. As to a proposal to have Mr. James teach other branches it would be only an experiment. Mr. James, as the speaker had understood, had not maintained the best of control over his own classes.

Mr. McClelland fully endorsed every word that Mr. Dumble had said. The committee had simply referred Mr. James to the Board; it had made no recommendation but had told Mr. James that he could safely leave his case with the Board. In respect to cheese-paring, when Mr. Dixon was appointed he was made responsible for the school. He (Mr. McClelland) felt that a grave mistake had been made in dismissing the lady teacher. He would vote for the appointment of a refined and cultured lady teacher who would transmit these qualities to her pupils.

Mr. Deane said it would be a mistake to do away with the Collegiate Institute but it needed improvement. Teachers may have done wrong, but the mistake was in pushing pupils on from lower grades to find something for teachers to do. He was understood to denounce the use of such language as "by Jove," etc., by the head master of the lower school.

Messrs. Kendry, Sawers and Sproule also gave instances in which objectionable slang language had been used in the public school.

Mr. Dumble said he had always heard the principal of the public school well spoken of, but coming from a boy's school perhaps accounted for his occasional use of a slang word.

Mr. Sproule thought the non-competing relations of the three public schools gave rise to a good deal of the bad feeling with the Institute.

Mr. Cox said we required for the Institute a first class principal who would be responsible for the school and have full control of it. It was a bad system to have too many managers. Have one good responsible man, consult him in all appointments and only keep him while he does well.

Mr. Kendry agreed with Mr. Cox in having a responsible principal—the teachers responsible to him and him to the board.

Mr. Weir did not profess to know anything of the qualifications of teachers. The question was, could we dispense with the classical master. Mr. Campbell had increased the efficiency of the school, and we had no right to find fault with him if he had no more pupils to teach. The Board had only to see that he did his work well. It should consider well before dismissing such a man. As Mr. Cox had said, let there be a responsible man to decide respecting the dismissal of teachers. He felt that he was not—and many members of the Board were like him—capable of deciding as to the qualifications of teachers. He endorsed what Mr. Dumble had said. Peterborough should have a good Collegiate Institute, and to secure it an expense of $50 or $100 should not be thought of. He would not grumble because he had to pay a little towards a High School to educate the son of the rich man, because the latter paid a much larger sum to support the Public School. Raise the dignity and position of the Institute and it would have more pupils.

A RESOLUTION.

Mr. Dumble moved, seconded by Mr. McClelland, that the Secretary be required to notify the Principal that at the end of the current year of his engagement the relationship now existing between him and this Board will cease.

Mr. Stevenson, in respect to the matter of expense, said the experience of the Board had been that if one teacher were dispensed with the others would get an increase of salary more than the amount of the saving. When the lady teacher had been dismissed the other teachers got an increase that absorbed the saving made. On principle he had regretted the dismissal of the lady teacher. There had been a time when every young lady in town had attended this school. But now they didn't come; private schools could be supported and why not the Institute? We wanted a first-class man at the head of affairs. He agreed with Mr. Dumble in taking pride in keeping up the standing of the school. There was something wrong; if it was the fees, reduce them. Something must be done, but he did not think Mr. Dumble's resolution went far enough.

Mr. Kendry said a responsible head-master would tend to have authority to prevent teachers from being at loggerheads.

Mr. Sawers said that the resolution was not giving Mr. O'Connor justice and fair play.

Mr. Sproule thought Mr. O'Connor should be heard by the Board.

Mr. Dumble said the Board had an impression in reference to Mr. O'Connor, and what he could say would not influence it.

Mr. Rutherford said Mr. O'Connor had not proved as efficient as was expected.

Mr. McClellund said an experience of eleven months showed that Mr. O'Connor was not what we wanted. The teachers under him had controlled him. We wanted a principal with firmness, that would prevent the bickerings among teachers.

On motion of Mr. Sawers, seconded by Mr. Sproule, Mr. O'Connor was heard, and stated that his understanding of his contract with the Board was that he was engaged for one year from the midsummer vacation. He claimed that he had been teaching fifteen years and knew what he was about in the school; he had managed it efficiently. He wished to know if the Board intended to carry out its agreement with him. He was prepared to prove before any three men his efficiency. The motion tended to take away the reputation he had acquired in fifteen years experience. It was a libel, perhaps a legal libel, to say that he was inefficient. He said the difficulties had been in the school for years. In reply to Mr. Rutherford as to difficulties, Mr. O'Connor complained that the Board never gave him a chance to explain, and had not considered his report when made.

A good deal of discussion took place over the terms of Mr. O'Connor's engagement, himself and others asserting that the understanding was that it was for a year after the first period of six months, and others holding that the engagement was only for a year, the mover and seconder of the resolution engaging him being of the latter opinion.

Mr. Stratton said he seconded the resolution, and his understanding was that Mr. O'Connor's engagement was for a year including the the first six months.

Mr. O'Connor said there had been no proof that he was inefficient. He had done his duty in every way.

Mr. Stevenson suggested that to avoid injuring Mr. O'Connor's reputation as a teacher, he might resign.

Mr. Dumble said that Mr. O'Connor was only engaged for a year. If he would resign he would withdraw his resolution. He had been placed in a position where he must pronounce Mr. O'Connor an inefficient man. The Board must get a live, vigorous principal, who would not allow subordinate teachers to boast that they are principals of the school. He (Mr. D.) was acting on his best judgment.

A vote taken on the motion resulted, by the vote of the chairman, in a tie, and it was therefore declared lost.

In answer to Mr. Deane, Mr. O'Connor attributed the unsatisfactory condition of the Institute to the failure to secure the co-operation of the town and county, and the too great prominence given to classics. He asserted that classics and modern languages were of no use in the public interest. In answer to Mr. Dumble he said we could not be a Collegiate Institute and drop these branches. He advised the charging of a higher fee for those taking classics.

Another matter was taken up and discussed, but action was deferred till the meeting of the Board on next Tuesday night.

"The City Pharmacy."

Peterborough is justly renowned for the beauty of her shops, and there is a healthy rivalry among our merchants for pre-eminence. Mr. J. D. Tully, of the "City Pharmacy, is determined not to be outdone in his line. He has celebrated the thirteenth anniversary of his entering into business by enlarging and beautifying his drug store. An addition of fifty feet has been made to the rear, two stories in height. This makes the full length of his premises 100 feet, on two floors. The furnishings of his shop are now complete. They comprise forty feet of shelving on one side, and forty feet of drawers, containing 190 separate drawers, the largest to be found in any town drug store, and twenty-eight feet of nickel-plated show cases. On the opposite side there are twenty feet of handsome cases, containing shelving. A new and beautiful feature in the addition on this side of twelve feet of walnut casing, fitted with plate glass doors and containing shelving above and cabinets below; these are devoted principally to perfumery and fine toilet goods. These new cases are ten feet in height, of solid black walnut, in the highest style of the cabinet-maker's art; the are of Eastlake design, and were produced in the establishment of Mr. D. Bellegbem. The ceilings of the shop have been covered with delicate olive green paper, picked out in gold. This is divided into three panels, with ornate centre and corner pieces; from the central one descends a handsome cut-glass lustre pendent gasoleer. In the rear of the shop is a new office, enclosed by a screen of frosted glass; opposite this is the prescription department, fitted up with every convenience. A passage between these two leads to the laboratory in the rear, a large convenient room. The room corresponding in the second story is used as a store room for surplus stock. The cellar affords ample storage for oils, paints, heavy goods, etc. The recent improvements have made Mr. Tully's "City Pharmacy" one of the handsomest drug stores to be found out of the large cities, and he has reason to feel proud of the dimensions to which his business has grown, and the handsome quarters it occupies on the thirteenth anniversary of its establishment.

Anniversary Services.

The celebration of the 47th anniversary of the George Street Sunday School was on held Sunday, and Monday night. On Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Manning preached an excellent sermon, and in the evening Rev. Dr. Sutherland, of Toronto, gave an address to parents, which was full of the wisdom gathered by years of experience, and a powerful appeal for securing interest and co-operation in this grand work. On Monday evening a mass meeting was also addressed by Rev. Dr. Sutherland. Led by Mr. Miller, the efficient choir leader, the Sunday school pupils sang, in stirring style, several beautiful Sunday school hymns. Mr. A. Clegg, secretary, read the annual report, which showed that the average attendance of pupils was 254, of teachers 29. The average collections were $3.06 per Sunday, making a total of $184.62. The credit balance of funds amounted to $59.14. Rev. Mr. Shaw, chairman, introduced Rev. Dr. Sutherland, who said the present gathering was one that could only be seen in a Christian land. He said that the Sunday School held an intermediate place between the home and the church, and was essentially a part of the church's work. He vigorously denounced the idea of separating education and religious training. The Sunday school belonged to the church and as such should be encouraged and supported by the church. It was most important to teach and how to teach, and so instruct children in the truths of the Bible that there could be no mistake. Rev. Mr. Manning closed the meeting with the benediction.

"Anglo Israel."

There was a very intelligent and attentive, if not large, audience to listen to the lecture delivered by Rev. James Cleland, of Port Hope in St. Andrew's church on Thursday evening last on the above subject. The pastor, Rev. Alex Bell occupied the chair. The reverend gentleman sketched the history of the Jews and advanced cleverly-put arguments to show that the ten tribes were never lost, and that the existing Jews in the world represented Israel, and as such would be finally restored. The lecture was interesting and and original and was listened to with close attention. At the conclusion Mr. George Edmison, seconded by M. Alex Brodie, moved a vote of thanks to the speaker.

The crop of candidates for seats at the Council board promises to be a heavy one this year, for, besides most of the present members, several new candidates are expected to take the field.

NORWOOD.

The fourth and last story is being added to Roxburgh's new block. The brickwork was completed last week.

The Norwood High and Public School Board after due consideration adopted Gage's Reader as athe best adopted for use in the schools. The change will be made here after, the Xmas vacation.

Messrs. Thos and Jas. Wilde, Havelock; Gillespie, Campbellford; Scriver, Norwood; and W. Ellis, of Blairton, went back to Deer Lake the other week for their customary fall hunt, and succeeded in bagging twelve deer during the short time they were out—only six days.

The O. & Q. Bridge over Crow River is completed and trains, of any weight may cross at any speed. The Bridge consists of two spans 130 feet long separated by an island 300 feet in width. The superstructure is of iron resting on abutments and piers of solid masonry.

EMILY.

It is rumoured that Mr, T. H. McQuade will run for the Reeveship of Emily at the approaching election.

One day last week a young man named George Johnson, met with a very painful accident while assisting at a threshing on the farm of Mr. Thos. Graham, Emily. It seems that when he was in the act of stepping upon the horse power he slipped and his left foot getting caught between the cog wheels was so badly smashed from the ball of the big toe that it was found necessary to amputate the toe a few days after the accident.

Mr. Isaiah Wilson, who lives on the 7th Con. of Emily, about two and a half miles from Omemee, suffered great loss by fire on Saturday night last, having had his two barns, stable, all the season's crop of grain, hay, straw, implements and one calf destroyed. The work was no doubt that of an incendiary as there had not been a light of any kind used in the barn or stable that night. There was a slight insurance.

CAMPBELLFORD.

Mr. H. H. Little has leased the skating rink, and will control it this winter.

Rev. Mr. Dunkley, Bible Christian minister, has recovered from his late illness.

Mr. W. H. Upton has returned home from Manitoba.

Mr. W. Whitton shipped one thousand head of poultry on Monday last. Four hundred geese were driven to the station in one flock.

Barley continues low, notwithstanding there is a steady demand. Many farmers have not yet marketed a bushel,—holding their crop for better prices.

A western paper says that the Smith Purifier Co., of Stratford, have closed a contract with Vanstone Bros., Brussels, and Chas. Smith, Campbellford, for the erection of strictly new process mills, reducing their wheat and middlings wholly by chilled iron rolls, and manufacturing flour by centrifugal reels. These mills are the first of the kind in Canada.

ADVICE TO ELECTORS.

To the Ratepayers of the Town of Peterborough:

The water works question is looming up in the near distance and has got to be met and decided. And the sooner you do this the better it will be for all concerned. In a few years from this time, if not controlled, it will have become a burning question, involving taxation upon the town to many thousands of dollars. If certain councillors, in league with the water company, could have had their way at the very outset of this company, you to-day would have been paying many thousands of dollars for hydrants, for their intention was to force the Council to contract for some eighty-four hydrants, at the rate of fifty dollars each. And no one for a moment doubts that this number in a short time would have largely increased. And I do not doubt that if this present state of matters is allowed to go on unheeded and unchecked, in five years your taxes, for the water works, will not be less than eight or ten thousand dollars a year. I am in favor of water works, but water works constructed and controlled by the town, and at a cost which will ensure us a cheap supply, the ratepayers having the benefit of any profit derivable therefrom. It is beyond contradiction that an efficient system of water works, with headquarters at Hazlitt's dam, can be constructed for less than twenty thousand dollars, and that a very much larger portion of the town can be served, and at a comparatively trifling expense to the people. We pay now to the present company, simply for the use of water over a hundred and fourteen feet on each side of George street, six hundred dollars a year, and the company have given notice that all water required outside of this limit must be paid for or else it cannot be used. Now, if the town can build these works for twenty thousand dollars, and pay for them, as it can do, by debentures, bearing five per cent. interest, the whole yearly expense to the town will not exceed one thousand dollars, and then the town will own the property and the people will be served at probably one-fourth of the cost to them through the present company. And more than this, the people will have the benefit of any profit derived from the works. There is no doubt at all, in my mind, that certain interested parties are determined so to manipulate the approaching elections as to secure a majority of the councillors favorable to the present company, and when this is done you will find such men as Mr. Rutherford and, I fear, Mr. Cahill working together to fasten upon you an extension of the present works, at a large additional outlay to the town, and you will then be unable to prevent it. The time to prevent it is now, now, before the coming on of the elections, by the selection of only such councillors as you know you can depend on, pledging them to do nothing more without first submitting it to a vote of the ratepayers. If you can only manage to effect this you will have saved yourself much future trouble and expense. Last election, I believe, Mr. Rutherford gave such a pledge; but, how did he keep it? The matter is in your own hands now, and if you do not deal with it properly and surely you will have no one to blame but yourselves and you will richly deserve all the loss and all the trouble which you will be certain to receive.

Another most important matter requiring your constant watching is the scheme to establish a hospital in the town and to join the county in building and maintaining a poorhouse. You will always find, in every community, persons whose imagination runs away with their common sense, and whose sole study is how to get the people committed to the wildest undertakings, knowing full well that their dupes and not themselves will be the sufferers. Hundreds of years ago, when a few men were the lords and owners of the soil, and the people were their serfs and slaves, living in poverty and misery, the government in England built poor houses in order to keep the people from starving and to keep them in subjection and bondage. That system has continued ever since, and it has grown to be a part of their laws and municipal government. Many of you who have come to this country know the evil effects of these poor houses, and how much they influence the public character, and keep alive a tendency on the part of many of the people to rely upon this species of public charity, and what a demoralizing effect it has had upon this country. You know how ready human nature is to live upon charity, and how ready it is to sacrifice all ambition and independence to live upon the support of others, and to lead a lazy and vicious life. Now let me ask if you desire to establish such demoralizing institutions among the people of this new country of Ontario, and if you are willing to tax yourselves heavily in order to maintain in idleness and food a lot of lazy, worthless men and women among you? Let me ask if it would not be better to make such seek for work when they can get it so easily, and to settle upon our wild lands and to make homes for themselves and their families, rather than teach them habits of idleness and dissipation and to throw off all attempts to become industrious and worthy citizens which they can so easily accomplish? I am sorry to say that a number of our councillors favor the establishment of a poor-house and a hospital, and that they will, if again elected, do their best to force them upon you. Many of you, no doubt, have read of a visit to the Council by some few ladies of the town for the purpose of getting the town to enter upon those undertakings, and the wonderful effect that their presence had upon some of our councillors, whose heads appeared to be completely turned upon that occasion, and whose gallantry could not deny any request which these ladies suggested. Mr. Rutherford appeared to have forgotten himself altogether, and Messrs. Cahill, Paterson and Yelland, and one or two others whose names I do not now remember, were not far behind. It would be unsafe to give these gentlemen another opportunity to be appealed to in a similar way, because I am afraid that the consequence would be a serious blow to your prosperity, and that the finances of the town would greatly suffer. The first outlay in buying the ground and erecting suitable buildings, with the necessary furniture, would not be less than thirty thousand dollars, of which this town would have to pay one half, and the annual cost of working the same would not be less than eight thousand a year, of which the town would pay one half. The cost of providing a hospital and ground and furnishing it for the town of Peterborough, would be at least twelve thousand dollars, and the yearly cost of maintaining the same no less than four thousand dollars more. You would thus have to provide at least twenty-seven thousand dollars for buildings and lands and fittings, and at least eight thousand dollars a year to keep the same going. Now, let me ask you if you are willing to do this? If you are not, then see to it that you elect no councillors who are not pledged to vote against all such appropriations, and only such as you know will keep their pledges. The interest on your outlay for buildings, etc., will be about eighteen hundred dollars a year, thus making an additional yearly taxation of about ten thousand dollars in addition to all your other taxes. Add to this the prospective cost of the waterworks and your position will be pleasant indeed. You and your families might have to pinch yourselves, and do without many little comforts and necessaries, but you and they would have to work to pay the taxes to support a lot of lazy, idle people in comfort in the poor-house and hospital, though you and your children might starve.

You will hear from me again.

A. B.

THE WARNING BELL.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR EDITOR,—The sudden jump of taxation this year must amaze every honest ratepayer, and every councillor may blush who opposed Mr. Sawers' reasonable request, in a business manner, to properly look into the financial business of this town. What are we getting for the enormous advance of taxation? In the middle of last summer a load of slabs for me sticks in front of my gate and has to be left on the middle of the street. My taxes last year were thirty-one dollars and seven cents; this year they are forty-three dollars and eighty-three cents, an increase of over 41 per cent., without a shade of improvement on any of my premises. Now, Sir, it is evident there is a screw loose somewhere, and it is evident to me that the screw has been loose before this year. It will be remembered that the assessors told the ratepayers this year that their orders from their great fathers were to raise the valuation of all property in town; the result would be the same and the rate would appear lower. It appears to me that some of our most prominent, wisest and sleekest fathers knew all about this loose screw before they gave these orders to the assessors; if so they are guilty and not fit to represent this town, for they stick together in darkness like brothers. O, what shameful meetings they have held! Circumstances require a change, and I think the town might be better served with less councillors, say one for each ward. Let us have men known to be honest, say for No. 1 Ward, Henry Best; No. 2 Ward, C. W. Sawers; No. 3, W. A. Morrow; No. 4, Richard Hall, and J. J. Lundy, Mayor.

Yours truly,

JOHN BELL.

Peterborough, Dec. 6th, 1883.

BASE BURNING COAL STOVES.

HOW TO HANDLE THEM.

A great many narrow escapes from death by suffocation have occurred lately in households where the inmates were ignorant of the way to properly manage their coal stoves especially the base burners. A few words of explanation just here may prevent a repetition of similar, if not more serious, accidents from this cause. It is a common practice for people to shake up and fill their stoves just before going to bed, at the same time closing all the dampers. For an hour or so after fresh coal is put on the fire, a large quantity of gas is generated from it. If the draught is shut off during that time, the gas is forced to find an outlet somewhere, and it escapes through every crack and crevice in the stove filling the room with its deadly odour. Thus it will be seen that people should shake up their stoves at least an hour before retiring, leaving the dampers wholly or partially open, to allow the gas to escape, and the fire to burn clear before shutting off the draught. With stoves that have a direct draught the gas will escape much quicker than with a base burner.

The Flames vs. Fitzgerald & Stanger

VERDICT FOR DEFENDANTS.

FITZGERALD & STANGER

Beg to announce that the fire of last September, which destroyed their Carriage Works Premises was ONLY A BLESSING IN DISGUISE.

As a result of it they felt that the public depended on them to supply

THE BEST CARRIAGE WORK

in the district, and they at once had their premises rebuilt, which are now being completed in a much better form than before, with vastly increased facilities, in room, machinery, etc., for performing every class of work in this line. With a large staff of first-class workmen, they are in better shape than ever before. They have now completed or under construction, a large and fine stock of

CUTTERS, SLEIGHS, ETC.,

Of all Styles, which for Material, Workmanship, Style, Fashion, and Finish cannot be beaten anywhere.

REPAIRING.—Now is the time for the public to call at FITZGERALD & STANGER'S for the necessary repairs to Sleighs, Cutters, etc., for the Winter. Repairs as well as General Blacksmithing, well and promptly done.

SPECIAL ATTENTION is called to the fact that Fitzgerald & Stanger will build during the winter a superb stock of the following makes of Buggies:—Rice Coil Spring, Brewster Side Bar, White Side Bar, Timkin Side Bar, Dexter Queen (Square Box and Phaeton) and the celebrated Herbrand Gear, St. Julien Side Bar, etc. Thanking the public for liberal appreciation of our work in the past, which we can double discount with our new facilities, we remain, etc.,

FITZGERALD & STANGER,

Corner of Brock and Water Streets, near the Post Office.

Vital Questions.

Ask the most eminent physician
Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?
And they will tell you unhesitatingly
"Some form of Hops!"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians:
"What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—
"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu."
Ask the same physicians
"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia; constipation, indigestion, billiousness, malarial fever, ague, &c.," and they will tell you:
"Mandrake! or Dandelion!"
Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable
And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed which is so varied in its operations that no disease or ill health can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is Harmless for the most frail woman, weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II.

"Patients
"Almost dead or nearly dying"
For years, and given up by physicians of Bright's and other kidney diseases, liver complaints, severe coughs called consumption, have been cured.
Women gone nearly crazy!
From agony of neuralgia, nervousness, wakefulness and various diseases peculiar to women.
People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of Rheumatism.
Inflammatory and chronic, or suffering from scrofula!
Erysipelas!
Salt rheum, blood poisoning, dyspepsia, indigestion, and in fact nearly all diseases frail
Nature is heir to
Have been cured by Hop Bitters, proof of Which can be found in every neighborhood in the known world. 48-4t

FALSE PROPHECY

During the campaign of 1880 workingmen were assured that the then prosperous condition of the country was due to our protective tariff. The workingmen were told that a high tariff insured high wages and constant employment, and thousands of them believed it. They seemed to forget that the severest and most protracted commercial depression in our history occured between the years in 1873 and 1879, although we had an extremely high tariff during all those terrible years, when the country was filled with tramps and paupers. After a short season of activity, business is again depressed, mills mines and factories are closing everywhere and throwing thousands of men out of employment, and many of those who are fortunate enough to retain their places have to submit to a reduction of their wages. With the aid of the workingmen's votes the Protectionists elected the President and a majority of the House in 1880, and they still have a majority in the Senate. The Protectionists still have control of the legislation of the country, and, instead of the constant employment and high wages the workingmen were to have as a reward for retaining the Protectionists in power, thousands of them have neither work nor wages, and the number of the unemployed is becoming larger every day. Falsehood can never endure the test of time, and it has taken a very short time to disprove the Protectionist falsehood that a protective tariff insures high wages and constant employment to workingmen.—American Exchange.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 13, 1883.

The Mayoralty.

It is with great pleasure that we announce, that on Wednesday signatures were obtained to a numerously signed petition, inviting Geo. A. Cox, Esq., to become a candidate in the contest for the Mayoralty of Peterborough. The requisition embraces the names of our foremost citizens, and we have reason to believe that Mr. Cox will not decline the evident duty of so influential and valuable a citizen again identifying himself with the interests of the town, which, from his relations thereto, are so closely involved with his own, that the promotion of the interests of the one involves the advancement of the other.

Since the above was in type, we learn that Mr. Cox has accepted the candidature, and that Mr. Paterson, as announced by card in another column, resigns in his favour. Mr. Paterson by his act of abnegation, shows that in resigning a certainty of having a long and honorable career, crowned by the highest office in the gift of the town he has served so well, he had no selfish motives. In retiring from public municipal life, full of honor and respect, he could do so no more gracefully than by giving place to the largest property holder and most public-spirited citizen in the town.

South Monaghan.

Again and again the attention of our readers, and of the municipal authorities of the Town and County of Peterborough has been invited to the question of terms for a union of the Township of South Monaghan to this county for all municipal purposes. Already it is part of the West Riding for legislative elections, and this has been drawing the people closer together, so that, if a fair and equitable basis of union could be agreed on between the council of South Monaghan and the County of Peterborough, that township might find it to the interest of its ratepayers to cast in their lot with Peterborough. The town of Peterborough is fast becoming the great market centre for all the produce of the whole district embracing Cavan and South Monaghan especially, and Emily of the County of Victoria, and when the railways now in course of construction are completed, and that will be early next spring, this town will be the great distributing centre of this large and prosperous section of country, as the means of approach and distribution will surpass that of any town in central and eastern Canada. The town, too, must very soon become a city, and its ever increasing population insures a ready market and good prices for all the produce of the surrounding townships. But with all these prospects of prosperity would it not be wise to secure the complete union to the county and town of all the territory available, and willing to cast in their lot with us? While the Town Council has been bickering over personalities and seeking personal honors and favors, money has slipped through their fingers in two years sufficient to erect a bridge at Ross's, and in connection with the council of Otonabee to make a first class road from Ross's here. That would shorten the distance from the principal portion of South Monaghan to town some six or seven miles, and bring Peterborough, so to speak, as near to Bailliieboro as Port Hope is, and as our town is more progressive, and likely to continue so to be, than Port Hope, as we have a better market for fruit, poultry, butter, eggs, cheese and other products from the farm, very soon the entire business of the people of South Monaghan would be done in Peterborough to the mutual advantage of all concerned. If the people of this town would, now, when they have an opportunity, see to it that the council for the coming year are fully impressed with the importance of this matter, very soon a meeting of parties in favor of such a union could be obtained and necessary preliminaries undertaken, which in a short time might issue in a so much desired union. If the Town Council will not take the initiative, perhaps Messrs. Cox, Dumble, Stevenson, P. Hamilton, Wm. Cluxton and some of the merchants could be induced to take the lead and bring about a meeting to discuss the matter and see if union is possible.

University Endowment.

As many of our readers are aware, at the time of the division of the Clergy Reserves, certain lands thereout were set apart for the endowment of Old King's College, now the University of Toronto and University College. For many years these funds were sufficient to meet the advancing requirements of the institute, and by degrees, the weak, ill-equipped college of the past, developed into the most splendid and popular university of the Dominion. It is easy to comprehend that with its progression and educational prosperity, the expenses of maintaining the University and College have vastly increased. Formerly there were only slight demands on its energies. There were but few undergraduates and fewer graduates. King's College stood alone, with few or no colleges in affiliation. Now there are clustered around Toronto University a large number of colleges of all denominations, depending on her for the Arts education of their students. Knox College, a Presbyterian Institute; McMaster Hall, a Baptist College; Wycliffe Hall, an Episcopal college; St. Michael's College, a Roman Catholic Institute; the Woodstock Institute, another Baptist Institute; are all in affiliation, each of these colleges, with wise forethought, retaining only a theological faculty, devoting its resources and energies upon a thorough theological education which an advanced age demands, and leaving to Toronto University the Arts training of its students, instead of crippling their resources by inadequately maintaining at great expense separate faculties for that purpose. In addition to the above colleges there are several medical schools in affiliation, which help to tax the resources of the parent college.

The friends of the University, perceiving the great changes in its character, and the increased duties which have been thrown upon her, are considering the advisability of applying to the Provincial Legislature on behalf of Toronto University and University College, for an increased endowment. We are of opinion that any reasonable demands should be granted. It is too true that the teaching faculty is not sufficient for the work. The accommodation is contracted. The library wants renewal. A chair of political economy and jurisprudence requires endowment.

The University of Toronto is under the control of the Government. It is a part and parcel of our high school system which we do not wish to see degenerate. It is strictly undenominational—non-sectarian. It is a provincial college, and is entitled to provincial support in order that it may be efficiently developed, and that it may preserve the present high standard of education, and that Canada may boast that she possesses at least one university which compares favorably with the best European models.

We are pleased to see the graduates of the University throughout the Province massing together for united action, since there is strength in solid unanimity.

The Mayoralty.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough:—

GENTLEMEN:—

At the request of many of the ratepayers of the Town, who are opposed to the present management of our Municipal affairs, I appear as a candidate for the Mayoralty for 1884, and beg respectfully to solicit your votes and influence therefor.

My course as Councillor during the present year has been severely criticised, but I can only say that every act of mine in the Council was prompted by my conviction of what was just and right to the ratepayers. I entered the Council without personal interest of any kind to serve, determined to advance the interests of the ratepayers to the best of my ability, and, so far as my single effort could do so, to conduct the business of the Town on the same sound business principles that every one of you applies to the conduct of your own private affairs.

This course, opposed as it was to the loose and extravagant manner in which the majority in the Council have been accustomed to carry on your business, naturally called down upon me a storm of abuse, which, however, the courage of my convictions has enabled me to bear without difficulty.

Many important matters have been before the present Council, and, as my opponent, Councillor Paterson, holds views on them different from my own, I shall here state a few of them, hoping to have the opportunity of discussing the merits of our opposite opinions before you with him.

FIRE PROTECTION.

I am opposed to paying by a general tax for hydrants taken by the Town for fire protection, believing it to be unjust to ask ratepayers living outside the fire limits to pay for the protection of the centre of the town.

Mr. Paterson's views on this subject are directly opposed to mine.

HOUSE OF REFUGE.

As chairman of the Charity Committee this year, I have had excellent opportunities of judging of the necessity for such an institution, and am forced to conclude that at the present time is not required. No doubt some few cases could be found in our midst which it would be extremely convenient to send to such an institution if we had it, but the immense cost of building and maintaining a Refuge would be out of all proportion to the benefit to be derived from it. In the future this may not be so. You may therefore rest assured that, if I have the honor to be elected by you to the Mayoralty, I will use my influence to prevent this burden being added to your already heavy taxes.

Mr. Paterson's views on this subject also are, I believe, opposed to mine.

CIVIC SALARY.

I am not in favor of attaching a salary to the office of either Mayor or Councillor, believing that the opportunity which you thus afford them of proving themselves faithful servants, and worthy of your confidence, ought to be a sufficient recompense for their time and trouble.

I understand Mr. Paterson's views on this point also are at variance with mine.

CLERK AND TREASURER.

I am opposed to allowing one person to hold the two offices of Clerk and Treasurer. On this point also Mr. Paterson differs from me.

BANK OF TORONTO BUILDINGS.

As the paying for these buildings this year has caused a considerable increase in the amount of taxation, and a good deal of dissatisfaction has been expressed in consequence, a few words form me on this subject will not be out of place. Early in the year there was a general unanimity in the Council as to the desirability of purchasing these buildings on the terms offered by Mr. Stevenson, namely;—$4,500, payable in debentures bearing interest at 5 per cent, running over either 10 or 20 years, but when this matter came up in discussing the estimates, to my surprise, the whole amount (less about $400 received from the Town Trust Commissioners) was asked for this year. I was opposed to this, but was voted down by Councillor McNaughton alone supporting me. Mr. Paterson, whose duty it was as Chairman of the Finance Committee to compile the estimates, can perhaps give some satisfactory explanation to the ratepayers for putting this heavy tax upon them. The title to these buildings has not yet, I believe, been perfected. Is it possible that the purchase may yet fall through?

There are many other points on which I might touch, but as this address is already too long, I shall only say that I am opposed to all jobbery and ringe, and to the transacting of the town's affairs in secret conclaves and not in either open Council or Committee.

I am in favor of progress and municipal reform, and where any saving can be effected in the management of our municipal affairs, I am also strongly in favor of such saving.

If elected, I shall use my best effort to obain a dollar's worth of your money for every dollar expended.

I am now in your hands, and it is for you to say by your votes whether my conduct during the year and my position on the foregoing important matters are worthy of your support and confidence.

I remain,
Your obedient servant,
C. W. SAWERS

HAIL TO THE IRON HORSE.

Norwood's Warm Welcome.

Norwood Receives the First G. J. G. Train With Open Arms—An Official Civic Reception—Flags and Bunting Flung to the Breeze—Elaborate Banquet in the Town Hall—A Bright Future Anticipated—Norwood to be a Big Grain Market—Sites for Storehouses Being Sought.

(From our own Correspondent.)

THE FIRST TRAIN.

Friday last was a very important epoch in the history of the flourishing village of Norwood, when the "first train," with pomp and splendour, arrived within its precincts, and when a demonstration, worthy of the interesting event, was accorded to the long-looked for and welcome "Iron Horse." All in this village will well remember when the people of our neighboring village, rejoicing over the fact that they had "ouchered," this place out of railway privileges, that since we have had every reason to rejoice had given us the go-by, turned out en masse, with the village magnate at their head, fully and officially robed, to honor the arrival of the first train; but, lo! the train came not. Such was not the case however, on Friday last. The Ontario and Quebec Railway train duly arrived in our village as announced, heavily freighted, gloriously

INAUGURATING THE BRIGHT FUTURE,

and plainly indicating to the people of Norwood that its advent would be the means of largely adding to the wealth, happiness and prosperity of the village and its surrounding country. The train was ushered in by the ringing of church bells, the loud pealing of our Union School bell, the prolonged and loud whistling of the steam whistles at Mr. Finlay's factory, at the woollen mills and the various grist mills here, an enthusiastic welcome that was distinctly and cordially replied to by the whistle of th approaching train. About one o'clock of our villagers and farming community was formed, headed by the flag that "for a thousand years has braved the battle and the breeze," and also by the Norwood Band, and Reeve and Councillors, which marched to meet the train, and, on behalf of our village, to invite all in connection with the train to an "oyster dinner." About 70 railway employees responded to the invitation, who, being formed in military array, were escorted by the Band, Reeve, Councillors and many citizens to the Town Hall, to partake of the viands provided by our people in honor of the arrival of the "first train" into the village of Norwood. A short address of welcome was given by Mr. Reeve Fraser, and after thanks had been returned by the railway representative for the cordial and enthusiastic reception, the procession was reformed, and the employees were escorted back to their train. The festivities ended not here; but all our people, realizing both eastward and westward, duly honored the occasion by the hoisting of flags and red, white and blue bunting, or otherwise giving due observance of the auspicious event. All agree that this line of railway will be a great benefit to the country at large, and will particularly benefit Norwood, as this place will become in time an extensive grain market, and an important railway station. There is no illusion about this statement, as already a number of sites have been taken up on which to build grain elevators, and the company have stated it is their intention to construct divisional buildings here. A good time is coming for Norwood.

A PROCESSION

THE IMPORTANCE OF RAILWAY CONNECTION,

NORWOOD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

TOO LONG.

On laying the long railway bridge near the Grist mill it was found that the iron stringers—the iron work which spans the space between the two stone abutments—was about twelve inches too long, thus necessitating the stone work to be considerably cut up to allow the stringers to be placed in position.

A COAT CASE.

Edward Garry and John Tresell, O. & Q. employees, at the instance of Mr. M. McGregor, hotel-keeper, were arraigned before Hugh Drain and Thos. Fraser, J. P.'s, for appropriating a coat from the hotel, which did not belong to them. The defendants alleged that they took the coat in a mistake. Several witnesses were called for the prosecution, alleging that the coat was seen in the hands of the prisoners. The magistrates dismissed the case, the plaintiff to pay costs.

ON A BRUNK.

Edward Garry and John Tresell were arraigned before the above named magistrates, charged with being drunk and disorderly. The case was clearly proven against defendants, and they were fined each $1.00, and costs $1.00 each.

BAND CONCERT.

The Norwood brass band will give a grand concert in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening, Dec. 19th. The programme the boys have been practising, will be supplemented by vocal selections by the best home talent amongst our young ladies.

It is rumored that another band concert will take place soon. Only in this case there will be a plain gold band, manipulated by a minister, and a well-known young lady will assist, and a wedding march will be part of the programme.

HONOR ROLL.

The honor roll of S. S. No. 4, Smith, for November, Beccie Fair, teacher, is as follows: Fourth Class.—1st, Nina Davidson; 2nd, Robert Hicks; 3rd, Louisa Fitzgerald. Peterborough Markets.

[Supplied by W. H. Wrighton, Grain and Produce Dealer, and General Grocer, George Street.]

PETERBOROUGH, Dec. 12 1883.

There is very little change in the grain market. The local receipts are light. The barley market outside is slightly weaker. Spring and fall wheat are in fair demand at quotations: fall [illegible] to $1.06, and spring $1.06 to $1.10. Barley calls for 56c. to 65c., peas 72c. to 77c., and rye 56c. to 57c. On the market dressed hogs show a slight advance, bringing $5.50 to $6.00. The receipts this season have been light. Keg butter brings 18c. to 20c., the latter the top figure; rolls and prints are worth 18c. to 22c. Eggs are scarce at 20c. to 22c.

1883. CHRISTMAS. 1883.

R. W. MUNCASTER'S JEWELLERY STORE

Cluxton's Block, George Street, Peterborough.

It is now the season of the year when people begin to think what they will select for Xmas and New Year's Presents, and again where they will purchase them. The first consideration of course, is important, but the second is, to those who have not as yet dealt with me, by far the more difficult to determine upon, as there are so many long-winded Advertisements presented to the public, which do not realize in effect what the customer has been led to expect from reading descriptions of the quality and size of some stocks which are not substantiated by facts. The verdict passed by everyone who have satisfied themselves of the reliability of my statements regarding the Quality, Cheapness and Quantity of my Stock, I am happy to say, has been without any exception, favorable. My constituents have found that when I advertised that I had the Best, the Newest, the Cheapest, and in every respect the Largest Stock of Jewellery in Peterborough, I have even exceeded my representations by showing the nicest display in the whole Midland District, and by their dealings with me, have discovered that my style of doing business has given them confidence that no article will be misrepresented, which confidence in purchasing such an article as Jewellery the buyer must have. All I want is every person in Town to come in and examine my stock and I think I can satisfy them that I have what I advertise. Also, that I cannot be undersold by any dealer in Town—not one.

My present Stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewellery and Silver Ware, is the largest and best I have ever had, and for Price, Novelty and Reliability is unsurpassed. Among the immense stock will be found a full line of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES at all Prices and makes. GOLD JEWELLERY, in Necklets and Lockets, Watch Chains, Guards and Alberts, Breast Pins and Scarf Pins, Charms, Bracelets, &c. Brooches and Ear-rings set with Diamonds, Garnets, Aqua Marines, Turquoise and Pearls. GOLD RINGS. Ladies Gold Rings mounted with Real Stones, in every conceivable Design. WEDDING RINGS, in all sizes and Prices, at a high standard of Quality. Gold Keeper Rings, in Chased, Engraved and Chased, and Engraved. SILVER JEWELLERY in all styles of Brooches, Earrings, Lockets, Chains, Necklets, &c.

SILVERWARE! -:- SILVERWARE!

The above line of Goods are being cut so much upon of late that the Quality has become quite a secondary matter with some dealers. Their whole aim is centred in presenting a showy and trashy article, which will catch the eye and which will not wear much longer than a good quality of Pewter. Such a quality as that I do not keep at all. I have nothing but the Best Quadruple Plate, made by the leading American Manufacturers, whose reputation is the result of supplying a first-class article to the public for the last fifty years. The stock of Plated Ware consists of all the Latest Designs in Cruets, Butter Dishes, Card Receivers, Cake Baskets Pickle Stands, Knives and Forks, Spoons in Tea, Table and Dessert, and Fancy Articles, suitable for Christmas and New Year Presents.

WATCH REPAIRING

This Department is one which is sadly neglected in the average Jewellery Store. The object sought to be attained is to make as much money as possible out of Customers by chargingexhorbitant prices and procuring cheap workmen. My reputation for work has been achieved by always doing GOOD, RELIABLE WORK, and charging a moderate figure for it, so that people leaving Watches with me for Repairs, know that they can rely on all Work leaving my hands. Do not fail to inspect my immense stock before deciding on your purchases. DO NOT FAIL TO REMEMBER THAT

Muncaster's Jewellery Store is in Cluxton's Block, George Street, Peterborough

HOW THE N. P. HELPS COBOURG.

The following news item shows how the ham of prosperity is thrilling the tight little Tory town of Cobourg. "The labour market here is in a state of utter stagnation; work can scarcely be obtained at any price. Scores of the unemployed are either loitering the streets or leaving their homes to seek work elsewhere. Many of these are skilled mechanics, heads of families. Several instances are reported of English emigrants, who came here a year ago, returning to the Mother Country, where they declare they can do better. Notwithstanding the remarkable mildness of the season building operations are foolishly suspended, an unprecedented state of affairs for Cobourg. A short time ago the Victor Valley Woollen Mills went into insolvency, and the employees not only lost their employment, but a very large percentage of their hard earned wages. These mills are still shut down. About a month ago the Royal Woollen factory, owned by Rankin & Batty of Montreal, ceased operations. The Routhe Matting factory now employs only two or three hands. But the biggest hole in the bottom of the labor market here is caused by the dismissal of two-thirds of the workingmen employed in the Car Works, which is the principal industry of the place. In the freight car, moulding, and smithing departments scarcely a sound breaks the silence, while the passenger car department has only a small contract to fill. On the whole the winter outlook for labourers, mechanics, and artizans here is the most dismal which Cobourg has presented for many years. Indeed, the opinion of the leading citizens is, that the prospect was never so hopeless as now.—Globe.

VILLIERS.

Rice Lake was frozen over on the night of the 1st and persons trying the strength of the ice have gotten a cold dip.

The ground has frozen and some snow fallen, which makes it very convenient for stumping bees. Mr. Thos. Blezard, M. P.P. has taken off a very large amount of stumps. Mr. William Walker, in one of the largest bees known to be held in this vicinity took off a large number of these obstacles also. It was quite a novel sight to see five or six teams drawing a large stump out of the way, it reminding the farmers of a circus.

Farmers are thrashing out their grain as much as possible just now, which makes it lively for those owning mills.

TOO QUICK FOR HIM.

She laid her head upon his shoulder as he held her close to his bosom. Her eyes beamed love, etc., into his.

"Do you love me, Alphonso?"

"Yes, sweetest."

"Then why delay naming the day?"

"I will not delay, love. It will be some pretty day in the next springtime when the flowers are bedding forth in beauty and delightful fragrance."

"Oh, pshaw! Why, Will Jones said he'd marry me next week. But if you can beat that time, dearest, I'm yours, for I love you so much."

Alphonso took his hat and retired from the race.

Remember, at R. Stenson & Son's is the only place you can buy Rock Island Hand-made Boots and Shoes, the best in the market for fall weather.

"Look Here Upon This picture."

The other day our newsfinder in his rambles for news, strayed into the studio of Mr. Thomas Workman, and was almost startled at seeing a living likeness of the late John Dixon, M.A., principal of the Collegiate Institute, calmly gazing from the easel, where it was receiving the finishing touches of the artist. The artist being warmly complimented on the faithfulness of the likeness, stated that all the late Mr. Dixon's most intimate friends pronounced the portrait a most striking and faithful likeness. The admiration of the excellence of the portrait was greatly increased when it was known that a cabinet photograph and a lock of the deceased gentleman's hair were all the material the skilful artist possessed to guide him in his work. It is almost incredible that so "speaking" a likeness could be produced from a mere photograph. But Mr. Workman's studio contains many other admirable specimens of his artistic skill, painted from the living subjects, and in every case he has produced, not only an admirable likeness, but in his technical treatment of the subject, a fine work of art. The excellence of his work shows that his experience of fourteen years in the art, many spent in city studios, has resulted in giving him refined artistic taste, a freedom and accuracy of drawing and command of coloring that puts his portraits on a par with the master pieces of the leading city artists. While his work is of equal merit with theirs, his figures are very much lower. Portraits in oil are always in "good form," always fashionable and the most durable kind of portrait produced. Mr. Workman's studio is on the third floor of the Bank of Toronto buildings, Simcoe street.

THE QUEEN'S BED.

It may not be generally known that the queen invariably takes her own bed with her wherever she may be traveling." People would infer from this statement that her majesty's "own bed" forms a part of the royal baggage. The queen always sleeps in beds of precisely the same pattern and made up in exactly the same way. They are all manufactured at Windsor castle, and there is one with accessories at each royal residence in this country, at the Villa Hohenlohe at Baden, at Rosenau, near Cobourg, and on board the Victoria and Albert. When the queen pays a visit or goes aboard, a bed on the usual pattern is made and despatched from Windsor in advance to be in readiness for her. One was sent last year to Mentone, and three years earlier another went to Baveno. At Dunrobin, Floors and other country houses at which the queen has been a guest her special bed has usually been left as a memento of the royal visit.

Our New Watchmaker, Mr. Hagban, comes well recommended, and we are sure any work entrusted to him will be done in good style. Office lately occupied by Elias Barnhart, Simcoe Steet. 15-tf

THE TRULY HONEST JUROR.

Some difficulty was experienced in obtaining a jury, and the court was getting tired of the tedious proceedings.

'Call the next juror, Mr. Clark,' said the solicitor for the hundreth time.

The clerk called out the man, and an old man with an honest face and a suit of jean clothes rose up in his place, and the solicitor asked the following customary questions:

'Have you,' from having seen the crime committed, or having heard any of the evidence delivered under oath, formed or expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner at the bar?'

'No, sir?'

'Is there any bias or prejudice resting on your mind for or against the prisoner at the bar?'

'None, sir.'

'Is your mind perfectly impartial between the crown and the accused?'

'It is.'

'Are you opposed to capital punishment?'

'I am not.'

All the questions had been answered and the court was congratulating itself on having another juror, when the solicitor in solemn tones said:

'Juror, look upon the prisoner—prisoner look upon the juror.'

The old man adjusted his spectacles and peeringly gazed at the prisoner for full half a minute, when he turned his eyes towards the judge, and earnestly said:

'Judge, I'll be condemned if I don't believe he's guilty.'

It is unkind to add that the court was considerably exasperated at having lost a juror, but the more humorously inclined had good laugh out of the old man's premature candor.

Spain has made a provisional treaty of commerce with England.

The Prince of Wales has been re-elected Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Freemasons.

Moody and Sankey opened their services at Stepney on Thursday. Their mission at Wandsworth was highly successful.

It is reported the woman who accompanied O'Donnell to the Cape of Good Hope sailed Thursday for New York with a well-dressed man.

The fire at Constantinople on Wednesday night destroyed 600 houses, the Greek church and four Jewish synagogues. A snow storm which was prevailing added greatly to the sufferings of the homeless people.

The Prince of Wales has been presented with a swordfish having a body 8 feet 8 inches long and a sword 3 feet 2 inches. It has been placed in His Royal Highness' museum at Sandringham.

The queen is passionately fond of baked apples. The walnut is another favorite of hers. She has a dish of these nuts constantly prepared, with the shells removed and finely bits of brown paper taken off, leaving the nut white and clean.

THE HAINES

"Upright Pianos."

A few extracts from the numerous endorsements by the leading artists of the World as to their superiority:

The pianoforte of your make used at my last concert is the most admirable instrument I have ever seen. Please send to my address in London one of your Upright Pianos. This, I think, is the best endorsement of your instrument I can give you.—CHRISTINE NILSSON.

Neither in Europe or America have I seen an Upright to equal yours.—EMILIE GERSTER GARDINI.

In all the qualities an artist can require your Upright Pianos surpass anything I have ever seen.—SOFIA SCALCHI.

It is superior in quality of tone and great ease of action to any instrument I know of.—CLARA LOUISE KELLOGG.

Having had an opportunity of using your New Concert Upright Piano at the concerts given by Her Majesty's Opera Company, we beg to compliment you upon your success. You can justly claim a superiority over any piano we have hitherto used, for concert purposes and accompanying the voice.—ITALO CAMPANINI, ANTONIO GALASSI, ANNA DE PELOUCA, EMIL AMBRA.

The successful manner in which your Upright Pianos have stood the severe test to which we have put them during the Season of Grand Opera only, fully justifies us in giving them our unqualified endorsement.—ODE BOUD, Manager, THEODORE THOMAS, ALFRED H. PEASE, Manager.

Naught but Death Divorces;

OR,

LADY AUDREY'S SACRIFICE.

"But, Audrey—nay, you must listen, dear—there are exceptions to all rules. There are cases where the law must wisely and rightly steps in and frees a man from the woman who has dishonored him."

"That may be. The law may in one sense free him—may punish her; but she is still his wife until death parts them. He may send her away, but he cannot marry another—that would make a mockery of the marriage service. An oath is taken to be kept, not broken; only death can part them—and Heaven knows best when to send death."

"Your views are tinged by your education, Audrey," he said sadly. "I ought to have told you of this before our marriage, but I was a coward, I dared not. Knowing your peculiar training, I was afraid that you would refuse me. I thought that you would never know—and I loved you madly."

"You should not have married me, Roche. You have not made me your wife; you have simply allowed me to usurp another's place."

"I prayed that you might never know it, Audrey. I sent away every old servant except two. I hoped you would never know it."

"You should have told me," she said, sadly, sadly, "It would have been so much easier to part then than now."

"Part!" he cried. "Oh, surely, my darling, you cannot mean that? We must not part—we cannot part!"

"I am not your wife," she said, simply. "I cannot remain here."

He drew nearer to her.

"You will drive me mad!" he cried. "If I lose you, I shall lose my hope of earth and Heaven."

"And if I stay I shall lose every hope of Heaven," she said.

"My darling, you cannot mean it. Why should you be so terribly hard and cruel to me, when I have done nothing but love you?"

"You have made a terrible mistake," she said faintly. "You have placed me in a false position; you have made me seem to do willingly that which I detest and abhor. If it broke my heart to go I should go. Knowing what I know, I cannot remain another hour under this roof. I am in another woman's place; I bear another woman's name; I hold the heart of another woman's husband. Oh, may Heaven pardon me, I did not know it!"

"Audrey, you must listen," he cried.

She stood before him, pale, erect, with the look that a painter would give to a martyr on her face.

"No," she said, "it is better that I should not listen. I love you very dearly—I might be tempted to believe what you said; and I must not, I will not—my own conscience tells me what is right, I know the sanctity of marriage, I know the solemnity of the marriage vow—I would rather not listen. Words are specious enough, but they can never make wrong right."

"Audrey, listen to the story of my marriage. When you hear it, I will abide by your judgment; and that will be in my favor, I am sure. Sit down, darling, and listen."

He placed her on the little couch, and and knelt before her while he told her his story.

"You will judge me less harshly when you have heard all," he said. "I met Elodie Danefield when I was twenty years old. She was young, very beautiful, gay, animated, and full of wit and talent. She was living with her aunt, Lady Danefield, who was an old friend of my mother's—that was how I came to know her. She had no fortune, and from the first moment that Lady Danefield had seen us together she had settled it in her mind that we were to marry. Elodie was very beautiful, but nothing about her was so striking as her gaiety—she was a mistress in the art of amusing others. That first drew my attention to her. Time flew when I was with her. I do not want to tire you, Audrey, with details. The plain truth of the matter is—I loved Elodie, while she cared less for me than she did for Captain Archer Dighton. She loved him best; but he was poor and I was rich. I have often thought that, left to herself, she would have married Dighton, but Lady Danefield was always impressing upon her what a grand thing it would be to be Lady Villiers.

"She gave her no peace; no rest, added to which Elodie herself was ambitious. Dighton at that time was poor and without a prospect of ever being anything else. Poor child, if she had come to me and said, 'I love Archer Dighton best, but I cannot marry him because he has no money,' I would have respected her, I would have done anything to help them; but she was not frank—she married me for my money and title, knowing well in her heart that she loved Dighton best. I had never been jealous of him before marriage, and I was not likely to be so afterward. We were very happy for a few months; it was a fool's paradise, I grant, but, as I did not know it, what did it matter? My wife——"

He noticed how Audrey shrank from the words, and he looked at her with a pleading wistfulness hard to bear.

"My wife," he resumed, "was very much liked. We came to London, and she was soon foremost amongst the leaders of fashion Society spoiled her. Her least word was considered a prodigy of wit, her repartees were repeated, her laughing beautiful face was welcomed everywhere—there was no one more popular in all London,

"It was then that Captain Dighton succeeded to a large fortune and came to town. He began to follow my wife at balls, parties, fetes; in the Park, in the Row, everywhere he was at her side. At first I thought nothing of it. It seemed absurd to be jealous of an old friend of Elodie's. I took no notice of it until I saw people smile significantly when they were together, until I found that whoever invited Elodie invited Archer Dighton also. My blood boiled when I saw those significent looks and smiles. still I was gentle with her, Audrey; she was young, and I loved her.

"At first I tried to change the state of affairs by keeping near her and declining the attentions of Captain Dighton. It was of no avail. They were much cleverer than I at ruses of all kinds. I determined at last to speak to my wife, to tell her that she was on the high road to danger; that I was annoyed by the comments I heard, and that she must be more on her guard with Archer Dighton.

"Heaven knows, Audrey, I was gentle and patient with her. I could not have been kinder. But she was furious. She would not listen. She declared that she would talk to Captain Dighton when and as she liked—that the world might laugh as it would; she did not care—she would brook no interference. I call Heaven to witness, Audrey, that I was kind and gentle.

"Things went on from bad to worse, and again I was compelled to speak to her. This time she was more indignant; and she was foolish enough to tell me that she never loved me, but had always cared for Archer Dighton. She was unwise enough to taunt me with the fact She said many things that would have been better left unsaid. After that she openly defied me. She spent more time than ever with Captain Dighton.

"Still I did not despair. I said to myself that she was so young and easily influenced I would not lose my patience. I tried to surround her with people from whom she could learn nothing but good. And at length I spoke to Captain Dighton.

"He received my remonstrances with all the cool polish of a man of the world, thanked me, and took no more notice of them. After that one or two of my friends spoke to me about my wife in a manner that slightly startled me, and I saw that by some means or another the scandal must be ended at once. if Elodie would not listen to reason, then I must take her away from London.

"One night we were engaged to a ball at the Duchess of Quorn's—a grand ball to which half the elite of London had been invited. As we drove to Quorn House, I determined to be very patient and gentle with Elodie. I knew that so many of her friends and of mine would be present that I was anxious to avoid further scandal. I kissed her, and said:

"'Elodie, you will be very good and prudent to-night, will you not?'

"She looked up at me with a bright gleam of defiance in her eyes.

"'I shall do just as I please, Roche,' she answered. 'If I decide to talk all night with Captain Dighton, I shall do so.'

"'You will do nothing that is imprudent, I hope, Elodie,' I said.

"You see I was patient and forbearing unto the very last. Elodie was certainly the loveliest woman present in the ball-room. I always enjoyed the admiration she excited; but on this evening she made a greater sensation than ever. Audrey, she would dance with no one, talk with no one but Captain Dighton. I heard the Duke of Crofton ask her to dance with him, She pleaded an engagement, and waltzed with Archer Dighton. I tried my best, Heaven knows, to cover her imprudence, but she left me with a defiant smile, and went into the conservatory with the captain.

"It was the Duchess of Quorn who put the finishing stroke to my anxiety. She came to me in her kind fashion.

"'My dear Sir Roche,' she said, 'Elodie is young, and, like many of our young matrons, very thoughtless; would it not be as well to give her a hint that it is not quite prudent to linger so long in the conservatory? We know, of course there is no blame to be attached to her, but it would be as well to give her a hint.'

"I thanked her Grace and went into the conservatory. The sight that met my eyes was not a pleasant one. My wife was seated amidst the ferns and flowers, and Captain Archer Dighton was bending over her chair; she was listening to him with a smile and a blush.

"'Elodie,' said I gently, 'you have been here so long you will take cold.'

"She looked up into her companion's face.

"'I promised you the next dance, Captain Dighton,' she said, 'and I am ready to keep my promise.'

"She vouchsafed neither look nor word to me. I knew that the scandal would be increased if she began to dance with him again. I went up to her.

"'Let me have the pleasure of taking you back into the ball-room, Elodie,' I said. 'I am quite sure that Captain Dighton will excuse me when I tell him that I have something very important to say to you.'

"He bowed and left us. In brief stern words I told my wife what people were saying about her. She looked up at me with a white set face.

"'I told you that I should please myself,' she cried. 'Let me pass!'

"I saw her in all the indolent splendor of her beauty walk through the conservatory. I caught another glimpse of her an hour later; she was waltzing with Archer Dighton. I was powerless—I could not make a 'scene' in the ball-room. Audrey, that night she fled with him. At what time they left Quorn House not one knew. She sent me a note from London Bridge Station, but it merely said:

"'I always liked Dighton best, and am now with him.'

"Another note came from the captain, saying that he was to be found at Paris. Elodie's flight was a nine days' wonder; but then every one said they had always been quite sure that it would be so. Audrey, my true, faithful, loyal, loving wife, now tell me if I did wrong to free myself from a woman so light of love, so false of heart."

She did not answer him at once. She laid her hand upon his head.

"My poor Roche," she said gently, "how you have suffered!" She forgot her own sorrows, for the time, in thinking of his.

"It is plain to you, Audrey, that I have suffered. You will not make me suffer more, will you darling? You will not leave me—you will take pity on me? Answer me, Audrey—did I do wrong to free myself from the woman who had wronged me—who had taken my true honest love and made a plaything of it—who had taken my heart and trampled on it—who took my name and—stained it—stained it, Audrey?"

She saw great drops of agony standing on his forehead; she saw his hands clinch and his lips quiver.

"Stained it," he repeated, "my sweet innocent Audrey. Do you know all that that means? Do you understand it? Do you wonder that I took her picture from the walls—it had stood next to my mother's—and burned it? I locked up the rooms where her face had shone, and said to myself that no other foot should tread them."

"I thought those were your mother's rooms," interposed Audrey.

"Yes, but they were hers too, Audrey. Tell me—did I do wrong to free myself from the woman who had been so cruel to me?"

He looked up into her sweet white face; he saw tears in the dark eyes, and he began to hope that he had prevailed.

"You were patient, Roche, but I think you might have been more patient; you were wise, but you might have been wiser; you were kind, but you might have been kinder. If you had seen your young wife in danger of death from burning, how quickly you would have snatched her from the flames! Danger for the soul is a thousand times worse than danger to the body; I cannot, therefore, hold you free from blame, even granting, Roche, that Elodie wronged you very cruelly. You might, perhaps, have been justified in living apart, but I do not see how you can excuse yourself for having married while she lived."

"The law had freed me from her," he answered, firmly.

"That is a point on which we can never agree," she said. "I have formed my opinion from the teaching of my own conscience, and I must abide by it. I grant that in certain cases husband and wife ought to part; but nothing shall ever make me believe that either of them can marry again while the other lives. I hold such a ceremony null and void. No man—no power of man—can part those whom God has joined; and the oath taken is not to be kept until one or the other does wrong, but until death."

"You seem to forget that those who do wrong break their oaths of fidelity," he remarked.

"The breaking of one oath does not justify the breaking of another," she answered. "Roche, we lose time in talking; my conviction can never be altered. I do not know how to argue about it, but I have given you my belief. If I could even allow myself to remain here, I should be wretched, because I believe it to be wrong. I cannot remain I must go away—and, what is still more, everyone must know why I go. If I have seemed to sanction that which I hold to be wrong, I must make my atonement as public as my fault."

Her eyes fell on the newspaper lying on the table. Suddenly she looked up at him.

"Damages, five thousand pounds," were the words she had seen.

"Roche," she asked, "what does this mean—'Damages, five thousand pounds?'"

"It means that Archer Dighton had to pay me five thousand pounds," he replied.

She looked at him wonderingly.

"Pay you?" she said, slowly. "I do not understand. He took your wife away; but why did he pay you this money?"

He made no answer. The horror and amazement deepened on her face.

"What was the money for, Roche? Explain—I do not understand: What did he give you the money for?"

"It was the fine that the law imposed on him," he said. His face flushed hotly as he uttered the words.

"A fine for what?" she asked.

"For having broken the law," he answered.

"I have heard of fines for poaching, for fighting, for drunkenness; but I did not know there was a fine for stealing a man's wife. Who received the money?"

"I did," he replied.

She rose slowly from her seat. She stood erect and haughty. He never forgot the lofty pride and contempt on her face.

"There are some things I cannot believe. This is one. Do you mean to tell me that you, Sir Roche Villiers, a man of honor, took knowingly five thousand pounds from the man who robbed you of your wife? "Did you do it?"

"I did, Audrey," he answered.

A low bitter cry came from her lips.

"Why did you take it? What had money to do with the case? Was that the price of your wife's love—of your own fair name? I cannot understand it. Was it given to console you? Ten hundred thousand pounds would not have consoled me. Why did you take his money? If he had to be fined, why should not the fine have gone to the poor—to some charity? Why should it have come to to you? It is like blood-money. I declare, I should have respected you more had you followed him and shot him, than I do after having taking his money."

"I never looked at it in that light," he answered.

"I would not have touched his money," she said, with superb contempt; "it would have blistered my fingers. I should have said to him, 'I will not stoop to take money; I have not sold my wife.'"

"But every one, in all such cases, does it, Audrey."

"Every one," she repeated, her eyes opening wide—"every one! You do not mean to tell me that every husband who is unfortunate enough to lose his wife in this same unhappy fashion takes money from the man who has stolen her?"

"Most do," he answered.

Her face flushed, her dark eyes flashed.

"That only shows how false and wrong the whole thing is," she cried.

"You appeal to the world—to the law. You confess to a broken heart—a ruined home and a blighted life; and they console you with the money of a man who has wronged you! Had I been in your place, Sir Roche, I would have cut off my hands rather than have touched Captain Dighton's money."

"I tell you, Audrey, it never occurred to me to look at it in that light."

"Tell me," she asked, suddenly—"Where is your wife living?"

"My wife is here," he said, touching her hand gently.

"Nay," she returned, sadly. "I know not what name I bear before Heaven and and in the sight of just men; but I am not your wife. Elodie is your lawful wife—no other. Death has not parted you. Tell me—where is she? What is she doing?"

"She lives in some little village on the sea-coast—Rookdene, in Kent, I believe."

"And where is Captain Dighton?"

"He did not stay many weeks with her; they disagreed, and he left her. I am not so hard as you think, Audrey. I allow her sufficient to live upon; but I have never seen her since, and never shall."

"'Till death do us part.'" she said gently.

"No, even in death I would not see her. Audrey, my true wife, my dear love, tell me what you mean to do."

She took both his hands in hers and held them tightly clasped.

"I will tell you," she said sadly; and remember, all argument will be quite useless—nothing can change my decision, because it is founded on what my conscience tells me is right. I shall go back home to my father this very day. I do not reproach you. Your notions of right and wrong differ from mine. Nothing could make me consider myself your wife while your true wife is living. I shall go home to my father and stay with him."

"You will not be so cruel as to leave me!" he said.

"I am not cruel enough to remain," she answered, slowly. "We will not talk of the sorrow; we must be brave and strong, and look the inevitable in the face, Roche," she pleaded, "there is one thing you must do—you must set me right with the world. If I had known the truth, I would rather have died than have married you. Most people must think that I married you while cognisant of the truth. When you can defend me you must do so. You must tell every one that, when I discovered the truth, I left you at once. Will you do me this justice?

His voice was broken with sobs as he answered her, and her face was white as death.

"Will nothing induce or persuade you to alter your decision, Audrey?" he asked.

"No, nothing," she answered.

"Kiss me once—just once, dear," he sobbed. She bent over him and kissed him. The hot tears fell from her eyes to his cheek.

"Good-by," she said gently "good-by, Roche."

Once again she touched his face with her lips, and then slowly—it seemed to him, as a vision fades—she quitted the room and left him alone.

Was he right or was she? He only knew that the pure, sweet woman he loved so well had gone from him.

CHAPTER XI.

It was a fair spring day, and the sight of the newly springing green leaves filled the rector's simple, happy mind with delight.

It was only the end of April, yet here in the old-fashioned Rectory garden—in a warm, sheltered, sunny spot—the lilies of the valley were already in blossom.

He was so delighted that he could not rest until his wife had seen them. She looked at him with a smile.

"I wonder why it is," she said, "that lilies of all kinds make me think also of Audrey—above all, the white Auratum lilies; but they are not in blossom yet.

Dr. Brooke was glancing around him with a well pleased smile; the golden sunlight on the delicate green leaves was so charming.

"There is an abundant promise of fruit and flowers," he remarked to his wife. "The garden looks well this year. I wonder if Audrey will pay her long promised visit home?"

Then Mrs. Brooke went on her round of visits, and the rector went back to his library. He could not settle to his work so easily as usual; the spring sunshine tantalized him.

"I am worse than a boy," he said. "I shall have to shut out the sunshine altogether."

The words, were still on his lips when the door opened, and, to his infinite surprise and wonder, he saw his daughter enter the room. He was too much astonished even for a word of greeting; but, when she came up to him, his surprise gave way to dismay. Her face was thrown back, and he saw that her face was deadly pale, and that her eyes were dim with tears. She held out both her hands.

"Father," she said, "I have come home to you. I am in deep trouble and sore distress."

He took the trembling hands in his and held them tightly clasped.

"My dearest child, no matter what has happened, you have done well to come home."

KARS, SEPT. 1st, 1883. Churchill & Co., Gents,—I have roubled with Catarrh for the past Your Fountain of Health mmended to me by Mr. Lindsay place. After using one and a half all symptoms of Catarrh have dis-, and my health is so much ed that I have gained several in flesh. I am yours truly, WM. ER. 49-2t

N. Maltby, of Geneva, Mo, cut 200 of cornstalks, when the ear was for use. It made one gallon of and from this he obtained 3½ of sugar. He thinks he can im-upon this next time.

Sirs,—I have been a sufferer from Sick Headache, and Loss of for many years, felt always so that life was a burden and all dark to me. I have had medical and have tried almost all the remedies, but without effect. mber of my neighbours, who had Fountain of Health, urged me it a trial three, bottles of which me feel like a new woman. MRS. 547, King street, Toronto. 49-2t

The profitableness of bee-keeping in a small way is illustrated by the experience of William Crumf, near Lake Mills, Wis. Last spring he bought a hive of bees for $5. He now has six hives. He has taken 44 pounds of honey from two hives and has quite a stock in the others.

James Brayley, Hamilton, says;—"I read the testimonials for McGregor's Speedy Cure and found that I had not to go to New York, Philadelphia, Louisiana, or Texas to find living witnesses of its value, we had plenty of persons right here to prove its merits. I got a bottle and it helped me right away, I was as bad with Billions Fever and Indigestion as I think any one could be, I have taken three bottles and am nearly well and can eat any kind of food without it hurting me. I may say I am better than I ever expected to be." Free Trial bottles at J. McKee's Drug Store. 49-2t

If your wife is cross at meal time, take an observation of the wood pile. The woman who can go out in a storm of sleet and dig soggy wood out of the snow to cook her husband's dinner, and still wear a cheerful countenance and speak honeyed words, is more than human.

Mr. G. Kenney of Boston, Ont, caught a severe cold. In a few days the symptons became so like those of consumption that he and his friends became alarmed of the ultimate result. His physician, who thought more of his patient's welfare than of the "etiquette of his profession," recomended Dr. Wilson's Pulmonary Cherry Balsam as the very best remedy known to human skill, and Mr. Kenney on taking it was in a very short time restored to health. It is a genuine pleasure to refer to such wonderful cures as this in these days of quackery and of "professional etiquette."

It is the usual practice to serve potatoes in a porcelain dish with a close-fitting cover. In ten minutes the best potatoes, however carefully cooked, are thus utterly destroyed. A culinary authority recommends that they should be placed in a wooden dish or served in a porcelain dish with towels above and below to absorb the moisture.

If you have a cough with raising of phlegm in the morning, night sweats, and irregularity of the bowels, loss of appetite, and general debility, take DR. WHEELER'S COMPOUND ELIXIR OF PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA. A host of those who have used it throughout the Dominion will attest its great efficacy in arresting the decline of the Consumptive. It begins at the root of the evil, the stomach, and perfects Digestion, Assimulation of Food, and the formation of Healthy Blood, rapidly invigorating the Constitution and restoring energy to all the Vital Organs. It is agreeable to take and permanent in its effect with no liability of relapse. Sold by all druggists at $1.00.

Fowls that have plenty of buttermilk or skimmed milk, will be likely to lay well. Poultry World says: Should you be keeping a large flock of hens, and the choice lies between feeding the milk to a pig and giving it to the hens, decide in favor of the hens every time. The extra production for one year by the milk feed will buy all the pork your family may need, and make your occupation much pleasanter all round.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them a name of their own, and not try to sell them on the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back. 2-tf

A Cure For Sore Throat.

Mrs. Wm. Allen, of Acton, speaks highly of Hagyard's Yellow Oil as a household remedy for colds, sore throat stiff neck, croup, etc., as well as for burns, scalds, and other injuries of common occurrence in every family. 49-2t

The Toulouse and Bremen geese are highly favored by standard rules. Forty points are given to size and weight, and these are considered their chief merits.

A Good Reform.

Children are not often tortured now-a-days with bitter Aloes, Brimstone, and Treacle, and the many nauseous remedies of the oldea times. Freeman's Worm Powders are pleasant to take, contain their own purgative, and safely and effectually remove all ordinary species of worms afflicting children or adults. 49-2t

Conductor Swift, the second victim in the street car tragedy at Cincinnati, died on Saturday night. Henry Shafer, the murderer, has been admitted to bail in $12,000 owing to the illness of his mother.

A Difficulty Overcome.

It is often very difficult to get children to take medicine, and especially Worm Remedies, which they often require. Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup is not only agreeable to take, but a safe and certain cure for all varieties of worms, including tape worms, that produce serious disturbance with children and adults. 49-2t

The process of depopulation still continues in Ireland. The deaths and emigrations out-number the births. The decrease for the year 1882, according to the report of the Registrar General, was 54, 933.

The best fire escape is when your wife gets up in the morning and makes it. The best disease escape is take Crowfoot Bitters.

No Goverment in the world was ever so lavishly generous toward its defenders as the United States. During the last ten years $476,294,477 have been paid to Union soldiers of the late war in pensions.

Yes, Sir.

One can't expect to succeed in business or in pleasure either, for that matter, unless one feels all right in health and spirits. This is the first consideration. Now, its a small matter when this remedy, ZO-PE-SA, is recommended so highly, even guaranteed to renew one's energy and spirits by invigorating the Liver and aiding Digestion, by clearing the Brain, opening the pores of the skin, regulating the Bowels and system, to go to the drug store and get a single bottle of Zopesa as a trial. It is a duty every one owes to himself. Try a bottle then. 41-4t

The first annual fat stock show in connection with the Agricultural and Arts Association, will be held in Toronto on 14th and 15th prox, when an excellent list of prizes will be offered for competition. A list of the premiums can be had on application to Henry Wade, Esq., Toronto.

Thousands Say So.

Mr. T. W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." Electric Bitters are the purest and best medicine known and will positively cure Kidney and Liver complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be without them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills every year. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Taylor & McDonald.

Mr. Fenton, crown attorney, Toronto, is making it hot for lottery men of all kinds E. King Dodds and P. C. Allan were brought up before the police magistrate in Toronto the other day at his instigation for conducting a bean lottery. A bottle was filled with beans, and guesses sold at 10 cents each, the party coming nearest to the correct number getting a $20 gold piece. The matter has not yet been disposed of.

The Source of Much Ill-Temper.

When your husband comes home in bad humor, jerks off his boots and appears to be generally miserable, do not attribute it to business cares or hard times, but to its real cause—those terrible corns which are constantly annoying him. A word to the wise will be sufficient—buy a bottle of PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR. His corns will be quickly and painlessly removed, and his gratitude will be unbounded. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor sold everywhere. N. C. POLSON & CO., Kingston, Proprietors.

On Tuesday last a small box was found under the verandah of the building in which the custom house and telegraph are located at the International Bridge, Fort Erie. A wire was attached to the box. On examination the box was found to contain fourteen cartridges supposed to be dynamite, the centre one being connected with the wire above mentioned. This wire needed only to be hooked on one of the telegraph wires to explode the machine and blow the building to atoms, that is if the machine were loaded. The box was packed in ice and sent to Ottawa to be investigated by the authorities.

CONFIDENTIAL.

Thousands of young Men and Women—married and single—through the effects of vicious youthful habits, or excessive indulgence in later years, have so undermined their general systems as to induce almost every other disease, and the real cause of these troubles being scarcely ever suspected, they are drugged and doctored for everything but the right one. The ordinary modes of treating troubles of this nature do no good. The JERUBEBIN COMBINATOIN REMEDY is offered as A Speedy and Certain Cure, as hundreds afflicted with every form of disease have been restored to complete health by its use, after all other remedies failed. This remedy is adapted to every condition of nervous debility and weakness in either sex, but especially in cases arising from imprudence. Its recuperative powers are truly astonishing, and its continued use for a short time changes the languid, debilitated condition to one of renewed life and vigor.

Forwarded to any address, on receipt of Price, $3 per package—sufficient for one month's treatment.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price in a sealed envelope, only 6c. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Nesmith's Washing Compound

Is unlike any of the ordinary crystal preparations in its composition and action. It is the only compound, we believe, that will without any injurious effect thoroughly cleanse all fabrics. Its use dispenses with the great labour and fatigue incident to washing in the ordinary way. It never fails to satisfy. For sale by all grocers. 49-52t

Gymnastic and Athletic.

Ashburnham members of No. 3 Company, Peterborough Rangers, have formed themselves into a gymnastic and athletic association. There are about thirty members. Messrs. E. Pinch is president, Thos. Graham, secretary, and Joseph Crowe, treasurer. The use of the Drill Shed has been secured, and the apparatus furnished by the munificence of the late Capt. Geo. C. Rogers will be used. Prof. Bain has been engaged to give instructions in boxing, wrestling, club swinging, etc. The boys of No. 3 are determined to be prepared for any event; if they lose their arms they will be ready to fight with their fists. No association more suitable for physically developing volunteers could be organized.

A Rattling Runaway.

On Saturday at noon, Mr. Wm. Tucker, of Douro, seated on top of a load of grain, was driving across the railway track to "Green's storehouse." The horses took fright at an engine and, making a sudden plunge, threw Mr. Tucker off the load and he was struck on the thigh by the front wheel and the reins jerked from his grasp; the team started west on a wild gallop and by the time they had reached Rubidge street had gained a great speed. They turned the corner to go south, striking a big boulder, which was hurled into the middle of the street. The wagon was completely overturned, and the grain bags were strewn about like leaves in the wind. The horses were pluckily caught at Mr. D. Sullivan's grocery by Master Dick Young. Not a single bag was broken, nor any part of the wagon or harness, and the horses were without a scratch. Mr. Tucker received a severe bruise on the left thigh and was covered with mud, but fortunately no bones were broken.

Turnbull has been literally overcrowding his counters with fresh goods believing that there always will be a steady demand for reliable goods at reasonable prices. Farmers waiting for the first snow to go and buy a big parcel, will be convinced of the good value they can get if they allow the goods to speak for themselves.

Traffic Returns.

The traffic of the Midland Railway of Canada for the week ending Dec. 1st, 1883, was as follows:—Passengers and mails, $6,510.09; freight, $17,996.61; total, $24,506.70, as compared with $16,877.35 for the corresponding week of 1882, being an increase of $7,629.35; and the aggregate traffic to date is $1,045,383.21, being an increase of $45,642.23 over 1882.

Not a Bad Idea.

A by-law has been introduced in the Guelph council to provide public scales for the weighing of coal, to be in charge of an inspector. All coal sold in the city must be weighed on these scales and a ticket given to be presented to the buyer as a certificate when delivered. Now that the use of coal is becoming so general this ought to be done everywhere.

Personal.

We clip from the Prince Edward Island Patriot, the following in reference to the death of Mr. R. A. Haviland, son of Lieut-Governor Haviland, teller in the Bank at Charlottetown, and cousin of Mr. R. W. Grubbe teller of the Bank of Toronto, Peterborough:—The sympathy of our citizens for the parents and friends of the late R. A. Haviland, was fully shown by the vast concourse of people that attended the funeral obsequies Sunday evening. At 3 o'clock the procession left Government House for St. Peter's Church, where the solemn office for the dead was performed by the Rev. G. W. Hodgson, after which the procession reformed and accompanied the remains of the deceased to the cemetery, St. Peter's Road. The funeral was one of the largest witnessed here for many years."

In Memoriam.

We clip the following from the Winnipeg Free Press, in relation to the manner in which the late Rev. E. Morrow, M.A., brother of W. A. Morrow, Esq., Secretary of the School Board, has been honored:—"The executors of the late Rev. E. Morrow, M.A., John W. Sifton, S. C. Briggs and W. A. Morrow, have just erected a splendid monument over his grave. It is of red Scotch Granite and of a very fine design. The foundation is of stone, set in cement, on which are placed two fine stones, cut by F. J. Bowles from his quarry, and on the latter is raised the monument, standing eighteen feet high. The lot is enclosed with an iron fence, with stone posts. The cost of the monument approaches $700.00, and it is probably the finest in the Province. Mr. Sifton and Mr. Morrow selected the design and ordered the work over a year ago, but it has only been completed this fall, just before the setting in of the frost.

Charlotte Street Church Bazaar.

The bazaar held at the residence of Geo. A. Cox, Esq., on Friday afternoon and evening last was a very fine success. The beautiful and useful articles provided by the ladies found a ready sale and realized a handsome sum. The musical entertainment was most enjoyable; in spite of the bad weather the elegant drawing rooms were crowded. The choir of the church rendered several splendid selections in fine style. Mr. and Mrs Heathfield gave instrumental duets. Mrs. Chambers and Mrs. Scobel gave the duet, "I Would My Love," with grand effect. Messrs. Porteous and Shaw, and Mrs. Chambers and Mr. Porteous rendered two duets in superior style; Mr. Porteous and Mr. Shaw also delighted the audience with well-performed solos, and the two beautiful vocal duets by the Misses Shaw were worthy of all praise. A delightful musical treat was concluded with "God Save the Queen." The financial outcome of the bazaar was very gratifying, $330 having been realized. The ladies are to be praised for their great efforts, and Mr. Cox deserves the hearty thanks of the congregation for his generous hospitality.

Spectacles.

Testimonial from the Dean of Ontario:

MURRAY HOUSE, Kingston, Oct. 19, 1883.

Mr. B. Laurance:

DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in telling you the great comfort and relief I found in the spectacles I purchased from you. Very near sighted from my youth I have often passed my nearest friends.

Your obd't. serv't.
JAMES LYSTER, L.L.D.,
Dean of Ontario.

Testimonial from Rev. David Mitchell, pastor of the John Street Presbyterian Church, Belleville, Ont:

BELLEVILLE, Nov., 23rd, 1883.

A visit to Mr. Laurance satisfied me that he has made successfully a specialty of the study of the eye. His skill enables him to give one the glasses or spectacles that are adapted to the condition of the eyes. The result is, as in my own case, that I have gained a power and comfort in my study which I have not felt before.

DAVID MITCHELL.

Testimonial from Dr. Phelan, Kingston:

KINGSTON, Oct. 3, 1883.

B. Laurance, Esq.:

DEAR SIR,—I am much pleased with your spectacles, now kept by Mr. I. Geo. King, of this city They supply to those with every derangement of vision a long felt want. I can cheerfully recommend them, and have no doubt as to their unequalled efficiency. On my recent visit to England I noticed the prominent position you take there in the optical world.

I remain,
Yours truly,
D. PHELAN, M.D.

Mr. Laurance has located his office at the Messrs. Taylor & Macdonald's Medical Hall, Peterborough for a few days only, commencing Thursday, Dec. 6th.

Watches, Clocks, Jewellry, etc., carefully repaired and warranted at Hughan's. Office lately occupied by Elias Burnham, Simcoe Street. 18-tf of the Dominion and sold by D. Smart, only.

Remember.

The Baptist church Tea meeting, Smith, will be held on Monday 17th instead of Tuesday 18th as previously announced.

Gentlemen

That have lost their hair should call on Mr. Dorenwend at Phelan's Hotel on Monday and Tuesday next, and get one of his fine wigs on Torpeo.

"London to Jerusalem."

Rev. Hugh Johnston, B. D. of Toronto, will in his lecture under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. to night (Thursday) delightfully conduct his audience from "London to Jerusalem."

Furs! Furs!

W. Fairweather & Co. have the finest stock of Furs ever shown by them. Astrican and Dogskin Jackets and Mantles. Ladies' Silk, Satin and Brocade Circulars, Fur Lined, are elegant, and are selling fast. Their prices are right. 42

Presentation.

A few days ago Rev. E. Emeric de St. Dalmas, pastor of the 4th Line Baptist Church, received a literally warm evidence of the appreciation of his Lakefield congregation. He was presented with a very handsome fur overcoat.

Auction Sale.

Attention is directed to the Auction sale of Mr. Edward Foley, lot 20, in the 5th concession of Douro on Tuesday December eighteenth, when about a dozen fine colts and horses, about 25 good calves and cattle and 20 sheep will be offered for sale. A rare chance for bargains.

Baptist Tea Meeting.

The annual Tea Meeting in connection with the Line Baptist church Smith will be held on Monday, December 17th. Tea served at six. After tea, readings, music, &c., An autograph quilt will also be disposed of.

Complimentary Supper.

A complimentary supper will be given at the Little Windsor Hotel to-night (Thursday) to Mr. P. W. Sabiston by his late employees on the stonework of the O. & Q. Railway bridge, which was finished, ready for the ironwork, last Saturday night.

New Zealand Wheat.

Mr. Robert Goodfellow, of North Monaghan, has shown at our office a sample of New Zealand wheat, sent him by friends in that antipodean colony. The variety is a fall wheat called the "white velvet," and is a beautiful sample—plump and bright.

A Voice from Lakefield.

A very fine assortment of Xmas Cards and Fancy Goods in great variety suitable for Xmas and New Year presents to be seen at Bird's Drug Store, which will be sold cheap for cash. Come early and secure bargains. No trouble to show goods. Bound to make prices right. T. J. Bird. 50-3t

Graduates' Association.

At a meeting of the Peterborough Association of Graduates held on Wednesday night of last week, a resolution was adopted in favor of asking the Government to make a grant sufficient to put the national university on a good footing. Messrs. E. B. Edwards, M. A., LL. B., and J. Frith Jeffers, M. A., were appointed delegates to the meeting of the Executive Committee of convocation in Toronto. They left on Thursday morning and attended the meeting.

Obituary.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. Andrew Jackson who died at his residence, Sherbrooke street at the age of 77 years. Deceased was a native of Ayrshire Scotland; he came to Canada, over half a century ago, and settled in Otonabee at Jackson's corners, and carried on a farm with such industry and energy that in 1866, he retired with a large fortune and came to Peterboro'. Deceased left no children, only a wife to regret his death.

A Beautiful Miniature.

Mr. Arch. McDonald has built a splendid miniature of the chancel of St. John's for the bazaar. It is an exact counterpart, being built from the original plans on a scale of one inch to one foot. The organ, the altar, rector, choir in surplices, and every detail are faithfully reproduced. The stained glass windows were painted by Miss Cooper. Mr. McDonald deserves great praise for his beautiful piece of work. Though he may never reach the woolsack, yet he is a first-class chancel-er.

Fine Art Classes.

We are pleased to observe, as will the public by reading advertisement elsewhere in this issue, that Miss Clarke, daughter of the late Rev. A. Clarke, well known in Peterborough, is forming classes for instruction in drawing and painting (in oil and water colors and on china). Miss Clarke has the highest testimonials as to skill and efficiency, she having had a large experience under first class masters. She can be confidently recommended as a thoroughly competent instructress in the above branches.

Dominion Organs and Pianos.

In another column will be found the advertisement of Mr. W. W. Logan, general agent for the justly celebrated Dominion Organs and Pianos. These are the leading instruments, and have always been successful in every exhibition where they have competed. They have been awarded diplomas and medals at the Centennial, Sidney, and at Provincial and Industrial exhibitions. The town office and show rooms, in charge of Mr. J. J. Irwin are in the south half of the double store occupied by Mr. W. J. Green, nearly opposite the market square, George street.

CHANCERY SALE

OF VALUABLE

FARM PROPERTY

DORIS vs DORIS.

Pursuant to a judgment of the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, made in the above Cause, on the 10th day of November last, there will be sold, with the approbation of C. A. Weller, Esq., Master of the said Court at Peterborough, at his Chambers, in the TOWN OF PETERBOROUGH on Wednesday, the 9th day of January, A.D. 1884.

at the hour of 2 o'clock, p.m., Lot Number 17, in the 10th Concession of the Township of Otonabee, in the County of Peterborough, containing 200 acres.

The property will be sold subject to a reserved bid, and will be first offered in one block, when if no sufficient sum be bid therefor, it will be withdrawn, and then offered in two parcels each consisting of 100 acres, and being composed of the north and south halves of said lot respectively.

The soil is a good clay loam, well adapted for agricultural purposes. Each parcel contains about 18 acres of good wood, pumps of hard water convenient to house and stables, two frame barns, size 30x50, stable and shed. The land is well fenced throughout, excepting about 25 acres on the south half. About 25 acres of each parcel is seeded down with clover and timothy.

In addition to the foregoing the north half of said lot has situate thereon a GOOD BRICK COTTAGE, size 26x32, consisting of 4 rooms, cellar and cellar kitchen. There is also a very large quantity of manure on said parcel, which will become the property of the purchaser.

On the south half of the said lot there is also situate a GOOD FRAME HOUSE, 1½ stories high, size 20x26 consisting of 3 rooms and summer kitchen.

The purchaser will be entitled to possession on the first day of March next.

The conditions of sale are as follows:

The purchaser will pay ten per cent of the purchase money at the time of sale, and the balance in 30 days, without interest.

The purchaser may, however, at his option, if the land be sold in block, leave the sum of $6,000 part of the purchase money unpaid, to be secured by mortgage upon said lands, for a term not exceeding 5 years, with interest payable yearly at 7 per cent. per annum. If the land be sold in two parcels the purchaser of each parcel may leave the sum of $3,000 unpaid, to be secured by mortgage as aforesaid.

The purchaser must elect at the time of sale which mode of payment he will adopt.

The other conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of the said Court.

Further information may be obtained on application to R. H. Dennistoun, Esq., Solicitor, Peterborough, or to the undersigned.

SAWERS' EXTRAVAGANCIES EXPOSED.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—By inserting in your paper the following, addressed to the electors of Peterborough you will confer a favor.

Yours, etc.,
—. —. —.

To the Electors of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—When any man comes forward to solicit your votes for mayor or any other municipal office, he casts aside the robe which conceals his private personality and becomes a public character, however worthless, and therefore amenable to candid, though severe criticism as far as concerns his public acts.

Since Mr. C. W. Sawers has stepped so jauntily and so modestly into the public arena, and is so determined to sacrifice himself on the altar of his exalted vanity and egotism, not on behalf of himself, oh, no! but on behalf of the struggling electors of the town, I intend to shortly contrast his vaunted dexterous feats as councillor with his real efforts as evidenced by the minutes of the Council during the year.

If it is found that his protestations of economy are chimerical; that he was an instigator and supporter of the very act which he repudiates, and in which he now shamelessly betrays his fellow councillors; that he has been a prime mover in the extravagance which has characterized our municipal government; that he contrived several silly schemes, which, if they had not been defeated, would have been highly detrimental to the finances of the town, and that the rectitude and honesty of purpose which he so boastfully asserts are only the wretched imagery of an infant dreamer; everyone will conclude that there has been more cry than wool, and that the old saying is true that the deepest river runs the most noiselessly.

INCREASE OF SALARIES.

Among the first votes of Mr. Sawers are two, which are characteristic of his loudly-shouted economy, and which are a pretty fair criterion to judge his subsequent conduct by. They were votes to increase the salaries of the assessors and the auditors.

WORTHLESS EXPENDITURE.

"Where any saving can be effected," says Mr. Sawers in his address, "in the management of our municipal affairs I am strongly in favor of such saving." This is the fiction. Here is the reality. Did Mr. Sawers vote in the interest of his honorable profession or in that of economy and enmity towards extravagance and worthless expenditure when he moved to consolidate the town by-laws which would have cost over $1000. A pretty sum to throw into the gutter in order to gratify the puerile whims of a ranting "economist."

BANK OF TORONTO BUILDINGS.

Mr. Sawers and his friends are attempting to throw a false glare over this transaction. I take my extracts from the local papers.

On April 9th Mr. Sawers moved that it was desirable to buy these buildings.

On April 23rd the report of Mr. Sawers was received recommending that we should buy them at the price of $4,500, and it was moved by him that the report be adopted. On the same date it was moved by him that the Finance Committee take the necessary steps to obtain and pay the purchase money.

On May 14th, the Finance Committee reported recommending the purchase of the buildings and the payment of $1,500 of the purchase money to Jas. Stevenson on the 1st of July, and that the town take possession, and the motion to receive and adopt the report was seconded by Mr. Sawers, and on a vote the division appears thus:

Yeas,—Messrs. Cahill, Kelly, Sawers, Yelland, Douglas, Rutherford, Hartley.

Nays, — Messrs. Davidson and McNaughton.

In the face of these facts Mr Sawers in his address asks Mr. Paterson "to give some satisfactory explanation to the ratepayers for putting this heavy tax upon them." I have taken the trouble to compile this explanation for Mr. Sawers, and consider it a miserable spectacle, fit to make the gods weep, to behold an applicant for our highest municipal office, withstanding the facts, trading on the ignorance of some of the electors and prostituting the little talent granted him in the beginning.

A SLAP AT THE CHURCHES.

On July 9th, in pursuance of his childish resolve to make every motion in the Council during the year, and as many as possible, even though it brought that body into contempt and ridicule, Mr. Sawers moved that all the places of divine worship be taxed for water rates, and yet in his address he says: "I am opposed to paying a general tax for hydrants taken by the town for fire protection, believing it to be unjust to the ratepayers living outside of the fire limits to pay for the protection of the centre of the town," whilst by this motion he advocates the very principle which he so flauntingly circulated with the most egregious stupidity.

ALAS! THE INCONSISTENCY.

Again the demon of inconsistency grasps his victim. On July 30th Mr. Sawers moved that the town solicitor be instructed to prepare a by-law to complete and carry out the purchase of the Bank of Toronto buildings, and yet in his address he cunningly misinterprets his position and by wily trickery seeks to shirk responsibility.

MR. SAWERS' HURRAH FOR THE POOR MAN.

Mr. Sawers is confidently relying on what he is pleased to call the poor man, and in order to gain his influence protests the highest friendship and interest in him. But when the by-law for adding 5% to the taxes of those who had not paid up by the 14th Dec. came up for discussion he did not want an election cry—and what was his action? Did he advocate the interests of the moneyed classes or those of the less favored citizens who have no bank account or ready money at their command, when he voted against and opposed extending the time beyond the 1st Jan'y next. The position of Mr. Sawers here is his true position—opposition to the working man—anything to hear himself talk. It is unenviable.

CLERK AND TREASURER.

Mr. Sawers says: "I am opposed to allowing one person to hold the two offices of Clerk and Treasurer." Why? Oh, why? Is it better to starve two men by dividing the office of Clerk and Treasurer, into two, or is the bugbear of extravagance again pursuing Mr. Sawers and would he give handsome salaries to both officials? There are no reasons advanced by Mr. Sawers, and there are no satisfactory reasons to be advanced. There is, I hope, no other man in the town who would advocate the change. It would be nothing but a silly and stupid blunder of a blundering busybody.

CIVIC SALARY.

I believe that not one of those seeking election advocate attaching a salary to the office of either Mayor or Councillor, and when Mr. Sawers attempts to make capital by evolving a phantom out of his own head and then pursuing it with shouts, he infringes on our intelligence. He insults us and shows his stupid stolidity and want of foresight.

FIRE STATION NUISANCE.

Mr. Sawers advocated this eyesore to the town. It was a most stupid blunder, and he was its firm supporter.

RECKLESS SQUANDERING.

Mr. Sawers recommended that a wing should be built on each side of the market building. For what practical benefit to town, unless ostentatiously to behold his name at the head of a motion and to gratify his besetting sin, notoriety, even at the expense of his common sense, no man knows. Was his object economy or decrease of taxes?

A CRAZY JOKE.

Mr. Sawers also recommended building an awning over the market sidewalk, a work which Mr. Rutherford thought would cost between $3,000 and $4,000. No doubt his object was to give our farmers a new style of modern architecture and to cultivate the æsthetic tastes our cultured citizens.

Electors of Peterborough, I am no councillor, nor was I ever a councillor or municipal officer, and it is from no personal animosity I have written this letter. I simply recognise the fact that our Council last year was extravagant, and I think that the only remedy is a change. First and foremost, let us have a good Mayor. Is there in Mr. Sawers the probability or possibility of being a good Mayor? Were his actions in the Council this year prophetic of such a result. Is he naturally a commander of men? Is he not impolitic? Is he not hot-headed, without a surplus of common sense to mellow it? Has he dignity? Has he the respect of his fellow-laborers? Has he experience? Has he judgment in emergencies? Has he any knowledge of financiering?

Part of his record is above. Part is written in the newspapers of the day. Part is a matter of joke and laughter on the street corners. The walls and benches of the Council Chamber have absorbed part of the worst. His assiduity in work, his earnestness on occasion, and the strength of his convictions, I do not wish to pass by.

If Mr. Sawers really and honestly wished to advance the interests of the town and was "in favor of progress and municipal reform," he could have accomplished this much more effectively and much more easily and advantageously as a councillor. When he comes forward as a candidate for the mayorality he shows his motive—an inordinate love of notoriety.

Yours truly,
ELECTOR.

Remember, at R. Stanson & Son's is the only place you can buy Rock Island Hand-made Boots and Shoes, the best in the market for fall weather.

A CHALLENGE.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

SIR,—If the writer of "Ratepayer," in the Review, "Another Ratepayer," and "A. B.," in the EXAMINER, will take off his mask so that he can be seen, I will expose his deception and MALICE in reference to the "water works." The people would like to see him standing in a row with Councillors Cahill and Rutherford, whom he has so unjustly maligned. Let him drop the nom de plume and make his appearance, that his victims may have a chance, and not, assassin-like, fire from behind the the hedge.

While trespassing on your columns, permit me, Mr. Editor, to say that the Peterborough Water Company has never asked a single favour from the town, with the exception of the request for permission to lay water pipes in the streets, and the town has never been taxed one dollar for the benefit of the water works. On the other hand, the water company has generously and freely given water for the streets, to fill tanks, and extinguish fires, for which no charge whatever has been made. I may also be permitted to say that the water company does not interfere with the selection of candidates for municipal honors. I don't suppose the directors of the water company know who are the candidates for election for councillors. I am sure I do not. If the ratepayers were allowed to use their own judgment and not be influenced by the "advice" of such a designing person as "A. B.," they would, no doubt, select gentlemen who would faithfully discharge their duty in the council, and be a credit to this rising and prosperous town.

Yours truly,
W. CLUXTON.

MR. SAWERS' PLATFORM.

"Rattle his bones over the stones.
He's only a pauper whom nobody owns."

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Mr. Sawers says that there is no necessity for a House of Refuge for the helpless poor, who in consequence of disease or old age are unusable to work. Poverty and loss, of health are misfortunes sufficiently hard to be borne without adding insult to the already overflowing cup of affliction by treating the unfortunates as felons and sending them to jail to associate with criminals. This, is, I understand, the course at present pursued with the knowledge of, if not by the direct order of the Council. I would like to inquire of Mr. Sawers if this plan meets with his approbation, and if not, how does he propose to provide for the infirm and sick.

Yours, etc.,
HOMELESS.

THE MAYORALTY.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:—

Sir,—As I have been assured by a number of electors whose names appear on Mr. Cox's requisition that they were led to place them there by the representation that I had retired from the contest, I take this means of publicly denying that I have retired, or that I have any intention whatever of so doing; on the contrary, the assurances of hearty support which I have received from every class of citizens, but especially from the working men of the town, give me every reason to be satisfied with my canvass and to preserve re in the contest, believing that the principles which I have enunciated, and upon which I rest my cause, meet with the warm approval of the great majority of the people.

Mr. Cox's standard bearers must feel their cause weak indeed when they need to prop it up by such underhand means.

I remain your obedient servant,
C. W. SAWERS.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:—

DEAR SIR,—I have read with much interest the correspondence which has appeared in your columns, with regard to municipal matters during the past year. The first thing needed to remedy the present state of affairs is a general determination on the part of all intelligent and respectable ratepayers to elect a better class of men to represent us at the Council Board. Having determined upon this improvement, the next thing needed is precocerted action. Put first-class men in the field—men of good character and judgment, of whom there are plenty to be had. Do not allow these matters to drift along until nomination day. Follow the example set by Messrs. Hazlitt and McClelland in getting up a requisition for Mayor. Set on foot other requisitions for unimpeachable Councillors in each Ward, and with such men in the field it only remains for every good citizen to poll his vote for them. There will be a change in No. 2 Ward by Sawer's being left at home to bury himself in his merited obscurity. A change should be made in each of the other wards. Howling Councillors are of no use—we want more business and less clap-trap. Electors, now is the time to make the change. Do not permit the banner town of the Province to be disgraced any longer by even mentioning the names of Carpenter, Sawers, and such ilk.

Yours, etc.,
VOX POPULI.

A COUNCILLOR CRITICISED.

FAITHFUL ARTHUR AND A. B.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

SIR,—The strictures of A. B. in the Review of 20th Nov., seem to have disturbed the self-complacency of Mr. A. Rutherford, who, like a man awaking from a troubled dream, so occupied with his own imaginings, and haunted by the spectre his inward consciousness has worked up, endeavors to rid himself of the fate which seems to threaten the destruction of the "Castles he has been building in the air," on the very slippery foundation of water works. I do not propose to follow Mr. R. through all his devious wanderings in his criticism of A. B. You will, however, permit me to call attention to his claim for having "strictly and faithfully stuck to the by-law." When seeking election last year, he, in the most emphatic manner, avowed his willingness to meet the wishes of the ratepayers by carrying out the original contract with the Company as expressed in the by-law. Any one who has followed his abject servility in the Council to the interests of the Company, at the expense of the town, is able to appreciate the value of his services to the town, and to give him full credit for so "strictly and faithfully" sticking to the by-law. His statement is that he has been and "is now doing his utmost to purchase them," (the water works), for the town. Very benevolent and gratuitous services indeed, for which the ratepayers will, no doubt, manifest their gratitude at the polls when Mr. R. seeks the guardianship of their interests for another year. Mr. R. should have gone farther and informed the ratepayers at what price he proposed to purchase, and what commission the Company is prepared to pay for the successful floating of the scheme. These are interesting questions for the ratepayers to consider. Oh! Arthur, Arthur!! You are even more superficial than you get credit for. Ostrich-like, you bury your head in the sand, and imagine you are cleverly throwing dust in the eyes of the public; but it is all in vain. Your "iniquity has found you out." "A gift blindeth the eyes," and the glitter of the precious metal has so obscured your vision that you cannot see, and vainly think that others are as short-sighted as yourself. It is said, "He that excuses, accuses." When, therefore, Mr. R. so "emphatically" declares, "I most emphatically deny that I have ever been asked by the Company, collectively or individually, directly or indirectly, to take the works off their hands," he simply "owns the corn," and fixes upon himself the truth of a charge which hitherto had scarcely been formulated. But while the Company may never have directly offered the works to Mr. R., it may possibly occur to the minds of the ratepayers that a quid pro quo may have been suggested for his good offices on their behalf. The debates on the horse stable in the market square would indicate that Mr. R. is not above "the soft impeachment." Mr. R's explanations, I have no doubt, have so fully convinced the ratepayers of the third ward of his having "strictly and faithfully" carried out his pledges, that they will reward him by allowing him to retire from public life and to enjoy that leisure which he has so well earned by "strictly and faithfully" sticking to the by-law.

Yours, &c.,
CONSISTENCY.

PERSONAL.

Last Friday Mr. Fred Wisch returned from Manitoba.

Mr. C. J. Bloomfield, of Haliburton, is renewing old associations in town for a few days.

Mr. Geo. Webber, Park street, was requested to act as judge at the Fat Stock Show, Toronto. A wise selection of a first class judge of beef was made, but Mr. Webber's private business prevented him from acting.

Dr. Kincaid and Mr. James Howden attended the Fat Stock Show at Toronto on Friday and Saturday last. Mr. Howden acted as one of the judges, and being a most expert judge of stock, gave the best of satisfaction.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Loasley, of Harvey, left on Friday evening last for a visit to Berkshire, England. They sail from New York to day (Thursday), by the steamer Florida, of the State Line. Their tickets were purchased from Mr. C. Cameron, agent here.

The Minnedosa, Man., Tribune of the 7th Dec., says that Mr. Wallis, of the firm of Wallis, Ramsay & Co., left on Tuesday last for Peterborough, Ont., having been summoned there by a telegram announcing that his father, who has been ailing for some time, was not expected to live.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A SUCCESSFUL HUNT.

With the remainder of this community, we offer our congratulations to Mr. Reeve Fraser and his party for their success in the hunting field during the last campaign of the season, they being rewarded with four very fine deer. On the entree of the party to the village they were received with enthusiastic cheers. We have not received our share of venison yet, but expect it to come in good time.

OUR ELECTIONS.

Little or nothing is heard about our elections, in fact far more interest is being taken in two impending marriages than in who shall be our Reeve or who shall be our councillors. All our old councillors say they are sick of the municipal business, and do not want again the honor of serving on the Council Board. It is not likely that any person will oppose Mr. Fraser in the Reeveship, as whatever may be his shortcomings in hunting the deer, he certainly has no such failings as a municipal governor. As such he has been active and faithful; and, though not sparing the public purse, has expended the corporation money fairly and with as much economy as the circumstances of the expenditure would permit. All, therefore, agree that he is entitled to occupy the civic chair for another year.

REPAIRED.

Some very essential repairs have been made in our lock-up.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

Mr. E. D. Gough, the great successor to P. B. Gould, has issued a large number of Christmas and New Year's cards to his numerous friends in Norwood and surrounding country. The cards are of very handsome design, neatly and attractively printed, and very appropriately worded. They evince commendable enterprise on the part of Mr. Gough, and reflect much credit on the printing establishment of the EXAMINER office, where the cards were obtained.

PERSONAL.

Mr. H. Ryan, of the O. & Q. R.R., was in town last week and made an inspection of the progress of the line in this vicinity.

Workmen have arrived here to put up the station houses in Norwood and Belmont.

LANG.

The scarlet fever is making sad ravages in this neighborhood and several homes have been made desolate by it. James, the youngest son of Mr. John Millar, aged 22 years, is a victim. He was at church last Sunday week, was attacked on Monday, died on Thursday, and was buried on Saturday last. Truly an eventful week for him and the bereaved family.

The eldest daughter of Jas. Lang, Esq., Reeve, an amiable and well-beloved young lady, also died on Sunday last at the age of sixteen years, of the same dread disease.

Mr. Archibald Davidson's family are all ill with the epidemic, but there have been no deaths.

The families of Messrs. Esson and Fife have been prostrated, but are now out of danger.

ACCIDENT.

While James, son of James Lang, was driving to church with his sister last Sunday, the hind axle of the vehicle broke, and threw both out. Miss Lang had the great misfortune of having her thigh bone broken, while her brother was severely injured. Both are now convalescent.

Municipal matters are very quiet. Snow is needed to give life to everything.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 20, 1883.

LAST FRIDAY'S ELECTIONS.

A "COLD DAY" FOR THE CONSERVATIVES.

Reform Success -Three Out of Four Seats -G. W. Ross, Minister of Education Elected -A Reform Gain—Mowat "Stands on the Order of his Going"—Bribery Rebuked.

On Friday last four elections took place, one Dominion and three local. The elections for West Middlesex resulted as follows :—

Local House,—Hon. G. W. Ross, Minister of Education, Reform, elected by 156 majority over his opponent, Mr. Alexander Johnstone, Conservative.

Dominion House,—Mr. J. M. Cameron, Liberal, elected by 33 majority over Dr. Roome, Conservative.

WEST SIMCOE.

The result of the election for West Simcoe in the Legislature is that Mr. O. J. Phelps, Liberal, is re-elected by 39 majority over his opponent, Dr. Wylie, Conservative.

CARDWELL.

The election for the representation of Cardwell in the Legislature, resulted in the election of Mr. Hammel, Conservative, by fifty-two majority over his opponent, Dr. Robinson, Reformer.

The result is a net gain of two for Mr. Mowat, Hon. Mr. Ross replacing Mr. Johnstone, a Tory, in West Middlesex, and Mr. Phelps being elected for West Simcoe. Mr. Mowat's position is materially strengthened, and a stern rebuke has been administered to Sir John's Bribery Brigade.

PETERBOROUGH APPEAL CASES.

HEARD AT OSGOODE HALL.

The following decisions were made in the subjoined cases in Toronto last Thursday :—

"HAMILTON PROV. v. CAMPBELL.—G. H. Watson, for the defendant, moved to set aside the plaintiffs' verdict in an interpleader issue tried at Peterborough before Wilson C. J. Muir (Hamilton), showed cause. Reserved.

"HAMILTON PROV. v. DUMBLE.—Muir (Hamilton), for the plaintiffs, moved absolute an order nisi to set aside the verdict for the defendent in an interpleader issue tried at Peterborough before Wilson C. J., and a jury. G. H. Watson showed cause. Order nisi discharged with costs.

"CHALMERS v. REES.—Poussette (Peterborough), for the plaintiffs, appealed from the judgment of Proudfoot, J., dismissing the action against the defendant Rees, Hoyles for defendant Rees. The case turned on a question as to the credibility of witnesses, and court held therefore they could not disturb the finding of the learned Judge, and dismissed the appeal with costs.

"CORBETT v. HARPER. — Poussette (Peterborough), for the plaintiff, appealed from the judgment of Proudfoot, J. Hoyles for defendant. The question raised on appeal was as to the proper construction of a contract for the sale of timber, which reserved all timber eight inches in dameter. The learned Judge held that this included all timber to eight inches and upwards. The appellants contended that the reservation did not include timber exceeding eight inches Judgment reserved.

"PETERBOROUGH v. VICTORIA.—Hudspeth, Q. C., appealed on behalf of the defendants, the county of Victoria, from the judgment of Wilson, C. J., granting an injunction. Robinson, Q. C., and Osler, Q. C., for the plaintiffs, the county of Peterborough, showed cause. The injunction restrains the county of Victoria from proceeding with an arbitration to fix the amount payable by the plaintiffs as their contribution to the expenses of a bridge which is mainly within the county of Victoria. Appeal dismissed. Costs reserved.

FROM "LONDON TO JERUSALEM."

A Panorama of Brilliant Word Pictures.

There was, we regret to say, but a small audience to listen to the delightful lecture, entitled, "London to Jerusalem," by Rev. Hugh Johnston, B.D., at the George Street Methodist Church, on Thursday evening last. The lecture being under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. of Peterborough, Dr. Fife, President, occupied the chair. The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Mr. Torrance.

The lecture, while being delightfully entertaining, was one that from its nature did not admit of a synopsis being made. It was entirely descriptive, and as such denoted the admirable facility of word painting of the cultured lecturer. The hearer was first transported across the sea, taken through the rural beauties of England, graphically described, and placed in London, the starting point of the journey. The sights of London were described in elegant and graceful language, particular reference being made to London's great pulpit orators, Dean Stanely, Spurgeon and Dr. Parker. From London to Paris was, as the lecturer put it, a step from the thrift and hum of a workshop to the graceful frivolity of a drawing room. From France the hearer was transported to Italy, in railway trains without sleeping coaches, through the Mount Cenis tunnel. The audience was shown by beautiful word pictures the cities and palaces of interest of this land of song and art. A short sea voyage landed the hearer in Egypt, and he was conducted up and through the pyramids. Sailing from Port Said Palestine was reached at Joppa, which called up recollections of Jonah's momentous whaling expedition, Simon the Tanner, St. Paul's host, Tabatha, and other Scriptural associations. The speaker then passed through the different scenes in the Holy Land familiar to all readers of the Bible and sacred history, describing them with a grace and beauty of diction, aptness of metaphor and simile that invested the otherwise guide-book aspect of the subject with a kindling charm, suggesting the grand word painting of grand old John Ruskin. The journey ended at Jerusalem, whose thousand hallowed scenes and sites dear to every Christian heart, were thrillingly touched upon. The speaker concluded an eloquent peroration with the expression that he would never behold a more dear or hallowed spot than the Holy Land, till his eyes were gladdened with the glorious sight of the New Jerusalem above.

In response to an enthusiastic vote of thanks, moved by Mr. G. M. Roger and seconded by Mr. J. Frith Jeffers, the speaker passed a warm eulogium upon the work and objects of the Association, and recommended them to the sympathy, prayers and practical encouragement of all Christian people.

WHO IS "A. B."

To the Editor of the EXAMINER :

SIR,—I see in the EXAMINER this week a letter signed "A. B." addressed to the ratepayers of the town of Peterborough. I would not at all have taken notice of it, had not my name appeared so prominently in connection with my actions as councillor. Now, Mr. Editor, it seems to me that "A. B." must have been asleep for the last two or three years, or he would have known that I, as chairman of the Fire, Water and Gas Committee, strongly advocated the building of waterworks by the town. It was decided at a meeting of councillors and citizens to construct a system of waterworks, the cost of which was to be equally divided between the town and private individuals, and to this end a stock book was opened at the clerk's office to enable citizens to come forward and subscribe their half. What was the result? Mr. Editor, not one cent was subscribed or offered to be subscribed, not even by "A. B." himself, whoever he is. The matter thus lay in abeyance for some months, after which Mr. Gamble, from New York, came to the front, and offered to build a system of waterworks on certain conditions. These conditions having first been endorsed at a public meeting and afterwards ratified by a by-law of the Council, which was so stringent that it caused Mr. Gamble, on second thoughts, to decline his part of the bargain, and so the matter rested until the late D. G. Hatton and a number of our enterprising citizens accepted the same by-law and went on and built the works as we have them at the present day. Sir, the trouble appears to be with "A. B." that there is a possibility of the town buying the works from the company, and I, with others of the Council, am doing my utmost to purchase them for the town. Now, Sir, I most emphatically deny that I have ever been asked by the company, collectively or individually, directly or indirectly, to take the works off their hands, and further, I would never consent, neither could any council without having first submitted a by-law to the people for their approval. So far as my promise to the ratepayers is concerned I have strictly and faithfully stuck to the by-law.

Another matter which seems to stick in the throat of our friend [illegible], that I am in favor of a house of refuge or something of that kind. To this also I give a flat contradiction. As chairman of the joint committee with the county I have been asked to call a meeting to consider the matter, and I positively refused to call any meeting. I fail to know where the wonderful "A. B." got his impressions. If it was on the occasion of gracefully receiving a deputation of philanthropic ladies, asking the Council to assist them with some inmates of the house, then I plead guilty.

In conclusion I would request "A. B." to show himself in his true colours, and not be afraid to let the public know who he is. As there will be vacancies in all wards he has a good opportunity of showing his adaptability to a public position, from the Mayor down to the pound-keeper. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the space in your valuable paper,

I remain,
Your obedient servant,
ARTHUR RUTHERFORD.

R. W. MUNCASTER'S JEWELLERY STORE

Cluxton's Block, George Street, Peterborough.

It is now the season of the year when people begin to think what they will select for Xmas and New Year's Presents, and again where they will purchase them. The first consideration of course, is important, but the second is, to those who have not as yet dealt with me, by far the more difficult to determine upon, as there are so many long-winded Advertisements presented to the public, which do not realize in effect what the customer has been led to expect from reading descriptions of the quality and size of some stocks which are not substantiated by facts. The verdict passed by everyone who have satisfied themselves of the reliability of my statements regarding the Quality, Cheapness and Quantity of my stock, I am happy to say, has been without any exception, favorable. My constituents have found that when I advertised that I had the Best, the Newest, the Cheapest, and in every respect the Largest Stock of Jewellery in Peterborough, I have even exceeded my representations by showing the nicest display in the whole Midland District, and by their dealings with me, have discovered that my style of doing business has given them confidence that no article will be misrepresented, which confidence in purchasing such an article as Jewellery the buyer must have. All I want is every person in Town to come in and examine my stock and I think I can satisfy them that I have what I advertise. Also, that I cannot be undersold by any dealer in Town—not one.

My present Stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewellery and Silver Ware, is the largest and best I have ever had, and for Price, Novelty and Reliability is unsurpassed. Among the immense stock will be found a full line of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES at all Prices and makes. GOLD JEWELLERY, in Necklets and Lockets, Watch Chains, Guards and Alberts, Breast Pins and Scarf Pins, Charms, Bracelets, &c. Brooches and Ear-rings set with Diamonds, Garnets, Aqua Marines, Turquoise and Pearls. GOLD RINGS. Ladies Gold Rings mounted with Real Stones, in every conceivable Design. WEDDING RINGS, in all sizes and Prices, at a high standard of Quality. Gold Keeper Rings, in Chased, Engraved and Chased, and Engraved. SILVER JEWELLERY, in all styles of Brooches, Earrings, Lockets, Chains, Necklets, &c.

SILVERWARE! -:- SILVERWARE!

The above line of Goods are being cut so much upon of late that the Quality has become quite a secondary matter with some dealers. Their whole aim is centred in presenting a showy and trashy article, which will catch the eye and which will not wear much longer than a good quality of Pewter. Such a quality as that I do not keep at all. I have nothing but the Best Quadruple Plate, made by the leading American Manufacturers, whose reputation is the result of supplying a first-class article to the public for the last fifty years. The stock of Plated Ware consists of all the Latest Designs in Cruets, Butter Dishes, Card Receivers, Cake Baskets, Pickle Stands, Knives and Forks, Spoons in Tea, Table and Dessert, and Fancy Articles, suitable for Christmas and New Year Presents.

WATCH REPAIRING

This Department is one which is sadly neglected in the average Jewellery Store. The object sought to be attained is to make as much money as possible out of Customers by chargingexhorbitant prices and procuring cheap workmen. My reputation for work has been achieved by always doing GOOD, RELIABLE WORK, and charging a moderate figure for it, so that people leaving Watches with me for Repairs, know that they can rely on all Work leaving my hands. Do not fail to inspect my immense stock before deciding on your purchases. DO NOT FAIL TO REMEMBER THAT

Muncaster's Jewellery Store is in Cluxton's Block, George Street, Peterborough.

CAMPBELLFORD.

Mr. Wm. Nealon, Jr., of Seymour east, has a span of colts which weighed on Tuesday last, 2,320 lbs. Two and a half years old.

Mr. Alexander Anderson, president of the Crow Bay cheese factory, informs us that at his factory during the past season there were 126,565½ pounds of cheese sold and that the stockholders realised from this $12,705.66. The quantity of milk from which this was manufactured was 1,256,881 lbs., and the amount paid the stockholders per standard of 3,000 lbs., was $29.12. Herald.

While Mr. John Bailey was working at a drilling machine in Mr. Whyte's machine shop on Thursday last, he was caught by the clothes in the set-pin, and drawn upon the table, and squeezed very tightly between the drill and the post of the machine. He wore two heavy flannel shirts at the time, and both of these were torn off his head, stripping him bare to the skin, with nothing but the wristbands remaining.

A fire broke out in the warehouse and offices of H. J. Rathbun & Son, Friday evening, consuming the buildings and their contents, consisting of shanty supplies, also a large quantity of grain. The loss is about 12,000; insured in the Western for nearly $4,000.

THE RESULT OF A LOTTERY.

AN UNSEEMLY SQUABBLE AT A KINGSTON CHURCH SOCIAL.

At a bazaar in Kingston in aid of the debt on St. Paul's Church a very serious row occurred. Voting took place as to who was the favorite out of Mr. Harty, Liberal, and Dr. Sullivan, Conservative. At 10 o'clock Harty had 1917 votes and Sullivan 1827. Rev. Mr. Carey seeing the excitement beginning declared the poll closed, whereupon the Tories made a rush for the booth, overturning it and securing the ballot box. A lady was struck by one of the falling poles, and carried home in a faint. Meanwhile the Tories with the ballot box in their power, began to stuff it, and then claimed their man was leading. The Liberals were not inclined to rest easy and several attempts were made to recover the box. At one time it looked as if blows were to be the outcome. As it was, not a little profane language was used on both sides. Rev. Mr. Carey attempted to cast oil upon the troubled waters, but his words were unheeded. In the general clamor Capt. Gaskin, a hot-blooded Tory, seized the chair intended as a prize for the candidate securing the most votes, and declaring Sullivan at the head of the poll, handed it to him. Mr. Harty's friends then left the church. Saturday morning his lawyers sent a letter to Rev. Mr. Carey demanding the chair on his behalf under a pain of future legal proceedings.

THE HAINES

"Upright Pianos."

A few extracts from the numerous endorsements by the leading artists of the World as to their Superiority:—

The pianoforte of your make used at my last concert is the most admirable instrument I have ever seen. Please send to my address in London one of your Upright Pianos. This, I think, is the best endorsement of your instrument I can give you.—CHRISTINE NILSSON.

Neither in Europe or America have I seen an Upright to equal yours.—ELLEN GERSTER GARDINI.

In all the qualities an artist can require your Upright Pianos surpass anything I have ever seen.—SOFIA SCALCHI.

It is superior in quality of tone and evenness of action to any instrument I know of.—CLARA LOUISE KELLOGG.

Having had an opportunity of using your New Concert Upright Piano at the concerts given by Her Majesty's Opera Company, we beg to compliment you upon your great success. You can justly claim a superiority over any piano we have hitherto seen, for concert purposes and accompanying the voice.—ITALO CAMPANINI, ANTONIO GALASSI, ANNA DE PELOCCA, EMIL AMBRA.

The successful manner in which your Upright Piano has stood the severest tests, is such as heretofore has been applied to the Grand Piano only, and it commands our unqualified endorsement.—OLE BULL, EMMA THURSBY, ALFRED H. PEASE, MAURICE STRAKOSCH.

Peterborough Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 20, 1883.

Our Christmas Greeting.

The most blessed festival of the Christian year will soon be at hand. Ere another issue of the EXAMINER shall have reached our readers, that glad day in which all men are bidden to rejoice shall have come and gone. We hasten, therefore, to bid the wide circle of our numerous and ever-increasing friends, the compliments of the season, and trust that their rejoicing at Christmas-tide will be real and true, and that our readers everywhere will enjoy all those blessings which this festive season brings in its train.

What are the blessings of Christmas? In the time-honoured formula we are all accustomed to use, they are peace and good-will to men. Surely we need them both. Amid this world's busy cares and wearying anxieties and restless commotions, it is well that such a season comes, to bid us forego quarrelling and contention and cultivate genial feelings of love and kindness and good-will. Nothing can be better; nothing can so help to make Christmas merry and pleasant as mutual reconciliations and a hearty forgiveness of real or fancied wrongs. At such a time let these good feelings be earnestly cultivated, and, for a season at least, let political differences and private quarrels be forgotten. Enmity can embitter the sweetest cup and rob the richest and most successful of men of rest and joy. May our readers know nothing, at this joyous season of its cruel stings, but may they be at peace one with another, and so make ready to start on the coming year with a clean balance sheet and hearts filled with love and good-will to all mankind!

Christmas is emphatically a home festival. Amid life's pressing duties, especially among our business men, there is too little heed paid to the amenities of social life, and the duties pertaining to the care and government of the little ones in the households. On Tuesday next let there be an entire respite from the cares and toils of the office or the shop. Devote one day to making the children glad. And as you plan for the children's enjoyment, forget if possible your plans for making money, and those engrossing duties which too readily wrinkle your brow and shut out thought of making others happy. Make this what it ought to be, and what it is emphatically, the Children's Festival.

Christmas is the time also to put to the test Herbert's sweet lines:—

"All worldly joys go lesse
To the one joy of doing kindnesse."

It is a season for making gifts, for showing benevolence and Christian charity to those whose lot in life is less happy than ours. The past year has been to most a season of prosperity. Times are fairly good and work has been plentiful. Yet doubtedless in some homes, either through sickness or ill fortune, from the increased cost of living, or inability from advancing years, to cope with the rush and hurry of the times, or from other causes, there will be, if not positive want, at least a lack of the luxuries which grace your own festive boards. Let your sympathy be manifested practically if you know of such cases. Accompany your cheery words with some tangible offering of assistance. Act up to the spirit of that holy mandate which bids us "love one another." Let us seek from our abundance to make some poor family as happy as our own at this joyous season. Let us cultivate a spirit of tenderness and interest in all that concerns our fellow-creatures. Let us remember, even if but for a time only, that charity is but a part of godliness, and ill-feeling a fiend from the abyss.

Christianity, which has its foundation on the great truth proclaimed at this holy season, is not real, is not true, is of no service to humanity, unless it makes all that is secular in some measure religious, unless it thus hallows all life and blesses it, unless it sanctifies the dwelling and the home, the hours of social converse, and the festivities and rejoicings in which the civilized world shall heartily unite on Tuesday next.

May the day be thus observed by every reader of the EXAMINER, may they one and all enjoy the luxury of doing good, the double blessing of the truly charitable, and may they experience for themselves and friends and families "A Very Merry Christmas and a Happy, Glad New Year."

The Mayoralty.

By his announcement in another column it will be seen that Geo. A. Cox, Esq., has yielded to the request of a most influentially signed requisition, and has consented to become a candidate for the mayoralty of Peterborough. We trust that our citizens will at once recognise the superior fitness of Mr. Cox for the position of Mayor in every respect. His ability and business qualifications are undoubted. The active part he has taken in promoting the interest of the town and the success that has attended his exertions in the past, are an ample guarantee that the interests of Peterborough will be safe in his hands. At the same time his business connections, his social relations, and his large personal influence proclaim his fitness not only for the active duties of the office, but as a becoming representative in his person and position, of the dignity, business importance, progressive spirit and commercial activity of a town like Peterborough.

Another Victory.

The decision of the Privy Council of England, the highest court in the realm, that the Crooks' Act is constitutional and its enactment entirely within the province of the Local Legislature, is another triumph for provincial rights, and for Mr. Mowat who has so unflinchingly upheld them. Sir John pledged his reputation as a constitutional lawyer on the correctness of his assertion that Ontario had no constitutional power to enact liquor legislation. But the Privy Council has condemned his opinion in this as also in the Mercer Escheat case, and sustained Hon. Mr. Mowat's in this as also in the Mercer case. Thus we see Sir John, the great "constitutional" lawyer, twice in succession snubbed by the Privy Council, and his unrighteous attempts to tyrannize over Ontario defeated, while Mr. Mowat has the satisfaction of defeating the "great constitutional lawyer," and securing for this province the rights he has battled for.

The Detected Briber.

The returns of the election, published elsewhere, show that Hon. Mr. Ross, Minister of Education, is elected by a handsome majority. The result is more than we expected when it was known that the following array of bribery talent was present in the riding: Shields, "Big Push," Wilkinson, Roddy Pringle, C. H. Mackintosh, Indian Inspector Dingman, P. M. General Carling, Pig Iron Cowan. Most of these were well known to be professional bribers. The constituency was flooded with bribery funds, as was amply proved. One James Weekes, of Caradoc, while as his friends say, drunk, entered the Reform committee rooms, Strathroy, by mistake and displayed an envelope containing $100 which he had picked up among the many others that were lying suggestively handy in the Tory headquarters. He also showed a list of several names whom he was expected to bribe. These facts were proven by the sworn statement of four reliable men. The Tories persuaded Weekes to commit perjury by swearing out a denial, but he showed his guilt by fleeing the country to escape arrest on a charge of perjury; and Weekes' case was only one out of a hundred. When undeniable proof of the activity of the bribery brigade was shown, it was natural to expect Mr. Ross' defeat. But the people could not be bought. They declared for honest government and gave a stinging rebuke to all and singular of Sir John's bribery brigade. The Tory cause must be desperate, when such shameless means are used to promote its success.

The Tory journals profess to see something very humiliating in the fact of Sir Richard Cartwright seeking a seat in West Huron. They have conveniently forgotten the time when the great leaders of the Conservative party, Sir John Macdonald and Sir George Cartier, had no place for the soles of their political feet, and when one sought a seat in British Columbia, and the other in Manitoba.

Sir Leonard Tilley is a very pronounced advocate of temperance—more pronounced than consistent. He worked hard, even broke the Sabbath, to try to elect a liquor seller—Mr. Pruyn—in Lennox, and in West Middlesex he worked hand in hand with Carling, the brewer, to defeat the most pronounced, prominent and consistent temperance man in Canada, Mr. Geo. W. Ross. The election of the latter shows that Sir Leonard's practical advocacy of whiskey has done him more harm than it has done Mr. Ross.

An unconfirmed report was received at Cario stating that Hicks Pasha was alive and safe in a beleaguered town.

REQUISITION

To GEO. A. COX, Esq.:

SIR,—

The undersigned ratepayers of the Town of Peterborough, having watched with interest the marked ability with which you have managed the affairs of the Midland Railway, and the success which has attended you in every enterprise with which you have been connected, and recognizing the great benefits which have accrued to the Town through your efforts, now desire to show their appreciation of your services by conferring on you the highest position in the gift of the citizens, and respectfully and urgently request that you will allow yourself to be elected Mayor:—

REPLY.

To WALTER PATERSON, Jr., Esq.,
And 328 others.

GENTLEMEN,—

I appreciate the honor done me in being presented with a requisition, signed by such a large number of my fellow-townsmen, asking me to allow myself to be nominated as Mayor for the ensuing year.

If I consulted my own feelings I should promptly decline the honor, but I feel that we have arrived at an important crisis in the history of our town, when it is the duty, not only of the Council, but of all citizens interested in the welfare of the town, to do what they can to promote its interests and preserve its credit.

If I can be of any service in this respect, I am prepared, in response to such a large and influential requisition, to place myself at the disposal of the ratepayers. It is not my intention, however, to ask any person for his support, and if I have reason to think that even a respectable minority of the ratepayers are opposed to my election I shall withdraw from the contest.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

MRS. HARRIET ESTERBROOK.

CONFIDENTIAL.

Thousands of young Men and Women—married and single—through the effects of vicious youthful habits, or excessive indulgence in later years, have so undermined their general systems as to induce almost every other disease, and the real cause of these troubles being scarcely ever suspected, they are drugged and doctored for everything but the right one. The ordinary modes of treating troubles of this nature do no good. The JERUSEBIN COMBINATION REMEDY is offered as A Speedy and Certain Cure, as hundreds afflicted with every form of disease have been restored to complete health by its use, after all other remedies failed. This remedy is adapted to every condition of nervous debility and weakness in either sex, but especially in cases arising from imprudence. Its recuperative powers are truly astonishing, and its continued use for a short time changes the languid, debilitated condition to one of renewed life and vigor.

Forwarded to any address, on receipt of Price, $3 per package—sufficient for one month's treatment.

GREAT BONA-FIDE CHEAP SALE OF

FANCY AND STAPLE DRY GOODS

FOR ONE MONTH

At THOMAS KELLY'S,

CORNER OF SIMCOE AND GEORGE STREETS.

We respectfully direct attention to the above announcement, and have to say that in consequence of the general appearance of trade, the near approach of a seemingly dull winter, and the fact of having an enormous stock—ONE OF THE LARGEST AND BEST IN THE TOWN—we have determined to commence a Great Bona-fide Cheap Sale

ON SATURDAY NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR ONE MONTH

Surplus Stock will not be carried over, no matter what the sacrifice. The prices will tell, and the goods will move out quickly as they must be sold. In order to make this Sale a GRAND SUCCESS, we have decided to make the reductions on the whole stock. The Reductions will be general, and not confined to a few leading articles. BARGAINS IN SILKS. BARGAINS IN DRESS GOODS. BARGAINS IN HOSIERY and GLOVES. BARGAINS IN UNDERCLOTHING. BARGAINS IN BLANKETS. BARGAINS IN LINENS and SHEETINGS. BARGAINS IN COTTONS. BARGAINS IN PRINTS. BARGAINS IN TWEEDS and CLOTHS.

BARGAINS in Every Line, and ONE PRICE to All!

Other dealers have asked us to postpone our annual sale this year until after the usual holiday trade was over, so as not to spoil their profits. Profits or no profits, the sale must go on. The people must have a benefit. ☞Parties Buying by the Piece Liberally Dealt with. These Goods are not shop worn nor bankrupt stock, but this season's purchases. We have too many and must unload. The Superior Quality of our goods together with the prices at which they are sold are inducements of especial interest to every buyer.

The Mayoralty.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough:—

GENTLEMEN:—

At the request of many of the ratepayers of the Town, who are opposed to the present management of our Municipal affairs, I appear as a candidate for the Mayoralty for 1884, and beg respectfully to solicit your votes and influence therefor.

My course as Councillor during the present year has been severely criticised, but I can only say that every act of mine in the Council was prompted by my conviction of what was just and right to the ratepayers. I entered the Council without personal interest of any kind to serve, determined to advance the interests of the ratepayers to the best of my ability, and, as far as my single efforts could do so, to conduct the business of the Town on the same sound business principles that every one of you applies to the conduct of your own private affairs.

This course, opposed as it was to the loose and extravagant manner in which the majority in the Council have been accustomed to carry on your business, naturally called down upon me a storm of abuse, which, however, the courage of my convictions has enabled me to bear without difficulty.

Many important matters have been before the present Council, and, as my opponent, Councillor Paterson, holds views on them different from my own, I shall here state a few of them, hoping to have the opportunity of discussing the merits of our opposite opinions before you with him.

FIRE PROTECTION.

I am opposed to paying by a general tax for hydrants taken by the Town for fire protection, believing it to be unjust to ask ratepayers living outside the fire limits to pay for the protection of the centre of the town.

Mr. Paterson's views on this subject are directly opposed to mine.

HOUSE OF REFUGE.

As chairman of the Charity Committee this year, I have had excellent opportunities of judging of the necessity for such an institution, and am forced to conclude that at the present time is not required. No doubt some few cases could be found in our midst which it would be extremely convenient to send to such an institution, if we had it, but the immense cost of building and maintaining a Refuge would be out of all proportion to the benefit to be derived from it. In the future this may not be so. You may therefore rest assured that, if I have the honor to be elected by you to the Mayoralty, I will use my influence to prevent this burden being added to your already heavy taxes.

Mr. Paterson's views on this subject also are, I believe, opposed to mine.

CIVIC SALARY.

I am not in favor of attaching a salary to the office of either Mayor or Councillor, believing that the opportunity which you thus afford them of proving themselves faithful servants, and worthy of your confidence, ought to be a sufficient recompense for their time and trouble.

I understand Mr. Paterson's views on this point also are at variance with mine.

CLERK AND TREASURER.

I am opposed to allowing one person to hold the two offices of Clerk and Treasurer. On this point also Mr. Paterson differs from me.

BANK OF TORONTO BUILDINGS.

As the paying for these buildings this year has caused a considerable increase in the amount of taxation, and a good deal of dissatisfaction has been expressed in consequence, a few words from me on this subject will not be out of place. Early in the year there was a general unanimity in the Council as to the desirability of purchasing these buildings on the terms offered by Mr. Stevenson, namely:—$4,500, payable in debentures bearing interest at 5 per cent, running over either 10 or 20 years, but when this matter came up in discussing the estimates, to my surprise, the whole amount (less about $400 received from the Town Trust Commissioners) was asked for this year. I was opposed to this, but was voted down, Councillor McNaughton alone supporting me. Mr. Paterson, whose duty it was, as Chairman of the Finance Committee, to compile the estimates, can perhaps give some satisfactory explanation to the ratepayers for putting this heavy tax upon them. The title to these buildings has not yet, I believe, been perfected. Is it possible that the purchase may yet fall through?

There are many other points on which I might touch, but as this address is already too long, I shall only say that I am opposed to all jobbery and rings, and to the transacting of the town's affairs in secret conclaves and not in either open Council or Committee.

I am in favor of progress and municipal reform, and where any saving can be effected in the management of our municipal affairs, I am also strongly in favor of such saving.

If elected, I shall use my best efforts to obtain a dollar's worth of your money for every dollar expended.

I am now in your hands, and it is for you to say by your votes whether my conduct during the year and my position on the foregoing important matters are worthy of your support and confidence.

I remain,
Your obedient servant,
C. W. SAWERS.

ENLARGED, IMPROVED and BEAUTIFIED!

W. A. SANDERSON

In soliciting the Patronage of his Friends and the Public for the coming Holiday Season, desires to return his warmest thanks for the large and increased patronage he has enjoyed during the past year. No better proof is needed of the excellence of goods than an ever increasing demand for them. This pleasing fact has been my experience, and in the future as in the past, I shall always make it a careful study to offer only such articles as I can recommend with confidence. During the past few months I have enlarged and greatly improved my Shop in order to show to better advantage the MAMMOTH STOCK in all the Departments which I carry, and I may be pardoned of egotism if I say I have now the Largest, Handsomest, and best appointed Jewellery Establishment to be found in any Town in Canada. My Stock at present is the Largest and most varied to be seen in Peterborough, and has been selected from the productions of the best Markets, and is replete in FASHIONABLE GOODS of the Latest and most Artistic Designs. Please call and allow me the pleasure of showing you the Goods before you make your selections for Xmas and New Year. I cannot be undersold.

SPECIALLY FOR THE HOLIDAY TRADE!

I have laid in a Stock which must be seen to be appreciated. It embraces GOLD and SILVER WATCHES of every make and description, and at all Prices. The Quick Train Rockford Watch, of which we are sole Agent for this section, is having a very rapid sale. It is a Watch specially adapted for those whose calling necessitates a correct Time Keeper. To Railroad Men and others it is invaluable, and we have no hesitancy in saying it is the Best Watch for the Money in the Market.

Gold & Silver Wares! The Choicest Designs and the BEST QUALITY OF GOODS—and specially suited for Holiday Gifts. The popularity of these Goods is everywhere attested by the growing demand for them.

Silver Jewellery, Silver Plate, Jet Jewellery, Musical Goods, CLOCKS of every description, Spectacles, Eye Glasses, &c., &c. These are all Beautiful Goods, and Warranted as represented. Fine Gold Jewellery!

THE CHEESE INDUSTRY.

Result of Operations for 1883.

OTONABEE UNION FACTORY.

The following is a report of the operations of the Otonabee Union Cheese Factory for the season of 1883, commencing May 21st, and ending Oct. 20th :—

Total lbs. cheese made	34,673
do milk deliv'd	345,355
Total no of patrons	24
do cows contributing	154
Total amount for which cheese was sold	$3,449.38

From this it will be noticed that the financial yield of each cow was, for five months only of the year, the handsome sum of $22.49. This, of course, does not include the amount of milk reserved for butter and domestic use, which amount if it were known would tend to increase the yield of the cow, a fact that shows how profitable an industry cheese making is to the farmer.

CHERRY GROVE CHEESE FACTORY.

The total amount of cheese made at this factory this season was 20,199 lbs.; total of milk received was 196,679 lbs.; the number of patrons of the factory was 13; the cows contributing were 65 in number.; average price paid for cheese was 9½ cents per lb.; the amount paid for milk was 94c. per 100 lbs.; the price received for cheese was 9½c. per lb.; the total amount for which cheese sold was $1867.92; the cows averaged $28.73 each standard of three thousand lbs. of milk. The average for the season is 9 73-100 of milk for a pound of cheese. The cheese was of first quality, and realized the highest price in the market. Wm. R. Deeprose was cheese maker and Thos. E. Bell, salesman, and both gave excellent satisfaction to patrons.

MYRTLE CHEESE FACTORY.

At the meeting of the patrons of Myrtle Cheese Factory, held in the building on Thursday, the 13th inst., the following was the result of the season's operations according to returns, and vouchers, from 21st of May to the 20th day of October, inclusive: 28 patrons (although some of them only half the season) from 84 cows delivered 254,299 pounds of milk, from which was manufactured 26,411 pounds of first-class cheese, or nearly 9½ pounds of milk for 1 pound of cheese, realising $2,532.90, or nearly an average of 10c. per lb of cheese; and after paying Wm. Cribbin for manufacturing, which he has done faithfully and successfully, and other necessary expenses, there has been distributed to the patrons the sum of $2,207.08, being an average of 8 cents and 3-100 of a cent per pound of cheese. We hope to see the factory double its operations in the ensuing year of 1884.

SOUTH DOURO FACTORY.

The following embraces the main features of the operations of this factory for the past season :—

Total lbs. cheese made	52,196
do milk deliv'd	537,428
Total No. of patrons	40
do cows contributing	175
Average price paid for cheese	9 11-13c.
Total amount received for cheese	$5,157.84

It required eleven pounds of milk to produce on pound of cheese. Mr. Richard Tedford was the president of the factory.

The Clerk was instructed to notify the County Treasurer to cancel and remove from his books all arrears of taxes against lot 12, con. 5., lot 13, con. 5, and lot 30, con. 14, up to the 31st December, 1882.

Angus McMartin was instructed to purchase a stove and pipes for polling subdivision No. 3, Harvey.

A resolution was passed authorizing the Verulam road division No. 88 to share equally in the gravel pit purchased for road division No. 21, Harvey, provided the township of Verulam pays one-half of the purchase money, which will be the sum of twelve dollars and fifty cents, said sum to be expended on the Galway or boundary line road, between the two townships; also, all the gravel in the pit.

The Council adjourned to meet on call of the Reeve.

Turnbull has been literally overcrowding his counters with fresh goods believing that there always will be a steady demand for reliable goods at reasonable prices. Farmers waiting for the first snow to go and buy a big parcel, will be convinced of the good value they can get if they allow the goods to speak for themselves.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

COUNCIL MEETING.

The Council met on Monday evening. Present.—His Worship the Reeve, in the chair, and Councillors Coe, McWilliams, Nelson and Urquhart.

The minutes of last regular meeting were read and confirmed.

The following accounts were presented and ordered to be paid :—

Mr. Thos. Henderson, work on road, and charity coffin	$ 4 50
Mr. Jno. Griffin, selecting jurors	3 00
Mr. R. Chapin, charity coffin	3 00
Mr. Isaac Watson, wages	6 02
Mr. Fred. Barlee, lumber	11 25
Mr. J. Richardson, team	1 38
Dr. Armour, medicine for charity patient	1 00

Some discussion took place with regard to the desirability of procuring a park for the village, which might also be used by the Agricultural Society. The Council seemed to be in favor of such a project if suitable land at a reasonable price could be obtained. The Council then adjourned.

DOURO.

SHOOTING ACCIDENT.

On Thursday last there occurred in the township of Douro a probably fatal shooting accident. It appears a son of Mr. Thos. McMaster's, of Asphodel, aged 16 years, was visiting at his uncle's—a, Mr. Tucker in Douro, and that, accompanied by one of his cousins, on the day in question, went out hunting. After being out for some time they succeeded in raising two partridge. Each one selected a bird and followed it. Tucker after pursuing the bird for a few minutes, looked round to see where McMaster was, and observed him some distance off taking aim with his gun at a partridge. Tucker, [illegible] again when he heard the report of McMaster's gun and, of course turned around to see the result of the shot. A ghastly sight met his gaze. Instead of seeing McMaster picking up his bird as he supposed he would be, he saw him struggling around in the snow and mud, covered with blood and apparently in great agony. In a moment he was at his side and saw that he had in some way accidentally shot himself in the back of the head, the charge striking him on the scalp, ploughing along the top of his head and exposing his brain to view. Tucker at once started home for assistance. The accident occured early in the forenoon but it was four o'clock in the afternoon before he was brought home. Drs. Pettigrew and McCrea dressed the wound and expressed the opinion that it would prove fatal. At the time of writing the young fellow is still alive and doctors even hold hopes of his recovery, although it seems almost impossible that any person could survive such a dangerous wound. How he could possibly have shot himself in the back of the head while taking aim at a bird in front of him is mystery. The unfortunate fellow is perfectly conscious but cannot remember how the accident happened. His parents have the sincere sympathy of the whole neighborhood in their affliction.—Register.

The depression in the coal trade, which resulted in a suspension of work on many river mines, is extending to the railroad mines along the Pan Handle road. Several mines are reported closed, and others are reducing their forces on account of a lack of orders.

SOUTH MONAGHAN.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

THE REEVESHIP.

Mr. Wm. Rutherford, who has so faithfully served this municipality in the capacity of Reeve, has decided to retire into private life, and there are two contestants for the place thus vacated. They are Mr. John Riddel, of Bensfort, and Mr. Thomas M. Willan. The probabilities are that Mr. Riddel will be chosen. Those who know the situation and indulge in wagers, lay the latter at odds on Mr. Riddel, who will in every way make a worthy representative and a fitting successor to Mr. Rutherford.

HORSE STOLEN.

Over a week ago some thief entered the stables of Mr. Waterman, near Frazerville, and stole one of his horses. Although diligent search has been made no trace has been obtained of either horse or thief. The latter showed that he was a poor judge of horseflesh, by selecting the most inferior animal in the stalls.

HUSBAND.—Oh, that neuralgia and toothache near kills me.

WIFE.—Why don't you go to John McKee's Drug Store and get a bottle of Fluid Lightning, you know it cures all such things as toothache, neuralgia, headache, lumbago, earache, sore throat etc. It gives instant relief. 51-2t

A Remarkable Escape.

Mrs. Mary A. Dailey, of Tunkhannock, Pa, was afflicted for six years with Asthma and Bronchitis, during which time the best physicians could give no relief. Her life was despaired of, until in last October she procured a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, when immediate relief was felt, and by continuing its use for a short time she was completely cured, gaining in flesh 50 lbs in a few months. Free Trial Bottles of this certain cure of all Throat and Lung Diseases at Taylor & Macdonald's Drug Store. Large bottles $1,00. 51-2t

Lindsay's Wharf, Aug. 22nd, 1883.

Messrs. Churchhill & Co, Gents,—I have been afflicted with Salt Rheum for the past three years, and have been treated by some of the best doctors in Eastern Ontario without any lasting benefit. I was recommended by Mr. C. J. Lindsay, of Kars, to try your Fountain of Health. After using five bottles of the Fountain and two bottles of your Climax Salve, I belive I am perfectly cured. My general health is also much improved, and I now feel like a new man. Yours truly, ROBT. BURNETT, Engineer Str "Olive," Montreal and Portland Line. 51-2t

These are Solid Facts.

The best blood purifier and system regulator ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity, truly is Electric Bitters. Inactivity of the Liver, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Weak Kidneys, or any disease of the urinary organs, or whoever requires an appetizer, tonic or mild stimulant, will always find Electric Bitters the best and only certain cure known. They act surely and quickly, every bottle guarnteed to give entire satisfaction or money refunded. Sold at 50 cents a bottle by Taylor & Macdonald. 51-2t

August 29th, 1883.

Dalmeny P. O., Tp. Osgoode.

Messrs. Churchill & Co, Dear Sirs,—I have been troubled with Piles for the last five years, and during that time I have taking medicine from five doctors which failed to effect a cure. I have used only one box of your Climax Eye Salve, which I purchased from W. F. Ritchie, of Osgoode Station, and can recommend it as a safe cure to all afflicted with the same disease. I consider your Fountain of Health an excellent tonic to build up the system.

Yours truly,
51-2t ARCHIE McDIARMID.

Great excitement in the Dry Goods trade. The store of W. Fairweather & Co. is thronged from morning to night. The Cheap Dress Goods, New Mantles and Jackets are the attraction. The Black and Coloured Dress Silks, at 50c., 75c. and $1.00 are marvels of cheapness, at W. Fairweather & Co's.

The New Baptist Pastor.

From all that can be learned, the congregation of the Aylmer-street Baptist Church is to be congratulated on the fact that Rev. A. H. Munro, of Montreal, has accepted the unanimous call extended to him. His occupancy of the pulpit recently highly impressed the congregation with his eloquence, earnestness and ability.

Neauch! Washing Compound

Is unlike any of the ordinary crystal preparations in its composition and action. It is the only compound, we believe, that will without any injurious effect thoroughly cleanse all fabrics. Its use dispenses with the great labour and fatigue incident to washing in the ordinary way. It never fails to satisfy. For sale by all grocers. 49-52t

A "Hefty" Heifer.

On Tuesday morning Mr. Edward F. Sutton, of Cavan, delivered to Mr. Harry Winch, for the Christmas market, a thoroughbred pedigreed Durham heifer, weighing 1,760 lbs. The animal is a beauty, small-boned, clean-made, and is as fine a specimen of Christmas beef as ever came to town. Dr. Kincaid, who, in his capacity of amateur agriculturist, attended the fat stock fair at Toronto, says there were very few animals there to excel Mr. Sutton's heifer.

St. Luke's S. S. Festival.

The annual Christmas festival of St. [illegible] will be held in the Town Hall, Ashburnham, to-night (Thursday). The children will be supplied with tea from four o'clock. Afterwards parents and the general public will also receive refreshments. This will be followed by the distribution of prizes. Then a short programme of songs, readings, and Christmas carols by the children will be presented. Admission: to pupils of the school, free; to adults, 25 cents.

Something New in Peterborough.

Mr. D. Belleghem is bound to keep pace with the times. Having had several calls recently for a white hearse, for juvenile funerals, he has, to meet such a demand in the future, ordered a splendid white hearse for the purpose, which will be ready as soon as it can be made. This will be agreeable news to those who, when bereft of their little ones, desire to do all in their power to honor their memory by having the ceremony of interment conducted in a befitting manner.

A Fine Pair of Coach Horses.

Mr. T. Cavanagh has purchased as fine a team of coach horses as ever entered the town. They are mahogany bays with black points, five and six years old, and stand sixteen and a half hands high. They are thoroughly matched in size, color and action, and make a superb team. One was purchased from Mr. Wm. Morrison, South Monaghan, for $300, and the other of Mr. John Graham, of Manvers, for $300. Judges say that such a team offered for sale in Toronto or Montreal would bring $1,000 at sight.

For the Holidays.

D. Smart has just received a grand display of Genuine Bell Organs—just the thing for a fine Xmas present.

Not a Candidate.

Mr. Walter Paterson, Jr., wishes us to state that the rumour that he intends to be a candidate for No. 2 ward, is incorrect, as he has no intention of seeking re-election as a councillor for this ward.

Hear ye, Old Man, Young Man and Boys

A Voice from Lakefield.

A very fine assortment of Xmas Cards and Fancy Goods in great variety suitable for Xmas and New Year presents to be seen at Bird's Drug Store, which will be sold cheap for cash. Come early and secure bargains. No trouble to show goods. Bound to make prices right. T. J. Bird. 50-3t

On Saturday Night

The well known firm of W. Fairweather & Co., advertises a grand sale of Christmas and holiday goods, with a general reduction on the whole of their immense stock, in order to give purchasers at this season an opportunity of buying at low prices Christmas Presents and Holiday Goods. The store is to be grandly illuminated for the occasion, and bargains may be expected.

A Falsehood Exposed.

A Lindsay newspaper, no doubt with a laudable desire to benefit this town, copied from the Globe an item—and gave it prominence on its editorial page too—to the effect that a "virulent type of scarlet fever has been raging in Peterborough for some time." There is not a word of truth in the statement. One of the oldest physicians in Peterborough assures us that the health of town has never been better than at present. It is true that a few cases of scarlet fever have occurred in Otonabee and at Young's Point, but the disease was not epidemic, and as soon as the unfavorable sanitary conditions which produced the attacks, were removed the patients recovered almost without treatment.

An Appeal for Help.

On Sunday night Rat Portage, Ont., was destroyed by fire. Damage to the extent of $100,000 was done and hundreds are left homeless and destitute in a rigorous climate in the dead of winter. The following appeal has been sent throughout the country by the mayor of the town:—

Rat Portage, Dec. 7, 1883.

To the Mayor and Newspapers of Peterborough, and to the People of the Dominion:

Rat Portage has again been visited by fire. Owing to this dispute between Ontario and Manitoba as to provincial rights during the last few months, business men have materially suffered, now some are entirely ruined, others seriously involved. What the public has done for St. John and other fire visited places, we ask for our town. The people are hard working and deserving. We want fire protection, but owing to losses incurred are not able to purchase fire engines and other appliances. We ask you and the Mayors of Montreal, Quebec, Kingston, Belleville, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Brantford, London, Ottawa, Sarnia, Guelph, St. John (Halifax), and any others to help us.

[Signed,] Walter Oliver, Mayor.
A. T. Holmes.

Home Again.

We are glad to see home again looking strong and rugged, Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald and party, consisting of his three sons, William, John, James and R. S. F. Latimer, who have been for some time past employed in surveying townships in the Mattawa and Nipissing country close by the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Mr. F. reports having met with extensive tracts of fair arable land suitable for settlement, and mostly covered with mixed timber, and large areas of white pine of good quality. There is considerable hardwood in the northern forest, but it is not of the prevailing kind. Minerals—iron ore and mica—have been extensively met with, and some fine specimens have been brought down. Mr. F. has been lucky in the chase, having shot and killed two magnificent stag moose, which supplied his camp for a time with an abundance of delicious meat, preferable, he says, even to our best Christmas beef. He has preserved the heads and horns, one of which is very large, measuring from tip to tip six feet three inches; the smaller one five feet seven inches. He intends to have them preserved and fixed up as trophies to Nimrod.

The Institute Inquiry.

At a full adjourned meeting of the Committee of the Whole in reference to to the Collegiate Institute: the following resolution was adopted: moved by Mr. Dumble, seconded by Mr. Stratton, "That every facility should be given whereby the youth of our town may obtain at their own home, a thorough education in all those branches of learning, a knowledge of which is required to enable them to give the most valuable services to the state, and to this end it is to the interest of this town that our Collegiate Institute should be maintained in a high state of efficiency." The motion was unanimously agreed to, and after some discussion Mr. Rutherford moved, seconded by Mr. Denne, "That in order to carry out the long felt necessary reform in the Collegiate Institute, be it therefore resolved that the present staff of teachers be reduced to four." After further discussion it was moved in amendment by Mr. Stratton, seconded by Mr. McClelland, "That the question of a re-arrangement of the classes and a reduction in the teaching staff of the high school be referred to a special committee composed of Messrs. Dumble, Cox, Stevenson, Sproule, Rutherford, Burnham, Denne and the mover and seconder, to consider and report to this Board." Mr. Rutherford's motion being put was declared lost. Mr. Stratton's amendment was carried and the committee adjourned.

Watches, Clocks, Jewellry, etc., carefully repaired and warranted at Hughan's. Office lately occupied by Elias Burnham, Simcoe Street. 18-tf

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Charity Wood "Deal"—Was it an Election Dodge?—Councillor Sawers Suspiciously Sympathetic.

A special meeting of the Council was held on Monday night, at which there were present His Worship, Acting Mayor Menzies, in the chair, Messrs. Rutherford, Davidson, McNaughton, Paterson, Sawers, Douglass and Denne.

Mr. Menzies said the meeting was called to appoint a new polling place for No. 3 Ward.

A by-law was duly passed repealing the clause naming Mr. Sanderson's place, and making the shop of Mr. R. Lund, corner of Aylmer and McDonnell streets, polling place for No. 3 Ward.

HOW TOWN WOOD IS WASTED.

Mr. Denne inquired if there was any truth in the report that a load of charity wood had been delivered to one Detcher, who had at the time three or four cords in his yard?

Mr. Sawers admitted that, on Mr. McNaughton's recommendation, there had been given an order for wood to the party named.

Mr. McNaughton said the man had applied for wood, and what could he do?

Mr. Rutherford said the party giving the order should be more careful of the circumstances, and was responsible for the act of giving charity at random.

Mr. Menzies remarked that Mr. Johnson had told him that when the wood was delivered in Detcher's yard there were three cords of wood there already.

Mr. Denne said there was something peculiar in the wood being sent to the man just at election time.

The Council then adjourned.

COMPLIMENTARY SUPPERS

MR. PETER W. SABISTON.

Mr. Peter W. Sabiston, contractor for the masonry of the O. & Q. railway bridge, was entertained at a supper at the Little Windsor Hotel on Thursday evening last, by his late employees. Mr. Ed. Brown, the new proprietor, made a fine spread. Toasts and songs were given, and Mr. Sabiston's excellent treatment of his employees and the excellent job had made were highly praised. Messrs. McDermid and Hendrie, who were honored guests, were also very highly spoken of. A delightful evening was spent.

MR. W. J. ROSS.

On Monday evening the many friends, Mr. W. J. Ross, inspector of masonry on behalf of the O & Q Rrilway company, of the bridge over the river, has made during his stay in town, entertained him at a banquet at Chamberlain's. The occasion was his departure from town on the completion of the work. The toast of the "guest" brought forth many encomiums on both Mr. Ross' personal and business qualities, and showed how high he stands in the estimation of his friends here.

"My Turn Next."

Mr. W. J. Dill, advance agent for the New York Dramatic Company, was in town arranging for the presentation in superb style of Mrs. Henry Wood's ever popular drama in five acts, "East Lynne; or The Elopement," in Bradburn's Opera House on Christmas day and night. The drama will be followed by the sparkling farce, "My Turn Next." Afternoon prices, 25 and 50 cents. Evening, 25, 50 and 75 cents. Seats secured three days in advance at Menzies bookstore.

SCHOOL ELECTION.

The nomination for school trustees takes place next Wednesday in the Council Chamber. Messrs. Galvin and Wilson are the retiring ones. Should they desire re-election they probably would not be opposed. Both have given entire satisfaction so far as we are aware.

ACCIDENTS.

On Saturday last Rev. Mr. Allin's horse took fright at a load of evergreens completely upsetting his buggy. He held the horse, however, and nothing serious occurred.

On the evening of the same day while Mr. Samuel Wallace was driving home from Lakefield an axle of the buggy broke throwing him out. The horse got away and ran a distance of a mile or so, turned into its own yard where he was found. Mr. Wallace was not seriously hurt, but the horse received some injuries about the legs.

A BROKEN ARM.

While Dr. Douglas, who recently purchased Mr. Wright's premises, was attending to his horse the animal pushed him against the stall, breaking his arm near the wrist.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

Election matters are rather quiet so far though we hear that canvassing has been commenced by some of the most active. There are also rumors of a programme being matured by a clique so that they may run the machine. This will not probably meet the views of a majority of the electors, who very naturally consider they have sufficient intelligence to enable them to vote for the proper men. So far as we can learn sympathies are not with cliques and rings, which are not, as a rule, formed in the public interest, but for private and personal objects.

CHANCERY SALE

OF VALUABLE

FARM PROPERTY

DORIS vs. DORIS.

Pursuant to a Judgment of the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, made in the above Cause, on the 10th day of November last, there will be sold, with the approbation of C. A. Weller, Esq., Master of the said Court at Peterborough, at his Chambers, in the TOWN OF PETERBOROUGH on Wednesday, the 9th day of January, A.D. 1884.

at the hour of 2 o'clock, p.m., Lot Number 17, in the 10th Concession of the Township of Otonabee, in the County of Peterborough, containing 200 acres.

The property will be sold subject to a reserved bid, and will be first offered in one block, when if no sufficient sum be bid therefor, it will be withdrawn, and the same offered in two parcels, each consisting of 100 acres, and being composed of the north and south halves of said lot respectively.

The soil is a good clay loam, well adapted for agricultural purposes. Each parcel contains about 18 acres of good wood, pumps of hard water convenient to house and stable, two frame barns, size 30x50, stable and shed. The land is well fenced throughout, excepting about 25 acres on the south half. About 25 acres of each parcel is seeded down with clover and timothy.

In addition to the foregoing the north half of said lot has situate thereon a GOOD BRICK COTTAGE, size 28x22, consisting of 4 rooms, cellar and kitchen. There is also a very large quantity of manure on said parcel, which will become the property of the purchaser.

On the south half of the said lot there is also situate a GOOD FRAME HOUSE, 1½ stories high, size 20x20 consisting of 8 rooms and summer kitchen.

The purchaser will be entitled to possession on the first day of March next.

The conditions of sale are as follows:

The purchaser will pay ten per cent of the purchase money at the time of sale, and the balance in 30 days, without interest.

The purchaser may, however, at his option, if the land be sold in block, leave the sum of $3,000 part of the purchase money unpaid, to be secured by mortgage upon said lands, for a term not exceeding 5 years, with interest payable yearly at 7 per cent. per annum. If the land be sold in two parcels the purchaser of each parcel may leave the sum of $1,500 unpaid, to be secured by mortgage as aforesaid.

The purchaser must elect at the time of sale which mode of payment he will adopt.

The other conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of the said Court.

Further information may be obtained on application to R. H. Dennistoun, Esq., Solicitor, Peterborough, or to the undersigned.

The Only Original 'Snooper.'

BY FRED. G. VALENTINE.

It was a most extraordinary engagement—in fact, incomprehensible. Just imagine, Belle Remesa (her name was Isabel, but Izzy has not a pretty sound) the charming hazel-eyed, golden-haired fairy, was engaged to be married to Doctor Reginald Bander.

But this fact alone was neither incomprehensible nor extraordinary, for he was as wealthy as she; he as handsome and learned a man as she was a pretty and refined woman; no, the rare feature in the case was, that the relatives of both high contracting parties were not only satisfied, but eminently pleased with the match.

Imagine, fair reader—and unfair one, too—what would you think if your mother-in-law were openly, in your presence and out of it, to express her unqualified approval of the brilliant match her child had made? What if your sisters-in-law should agree with their mother?

Well, that was the astonishing feature in Belle's and the doctor's engagement.

They loved each other devotedly, of course; but because there was no opposition to the match they lost a great deal of the miserable joys, or joyous miseries of courtship. They felt as if they had been married for years, because their good-by kisses were not stolen, but given and received, as a matter of course, in presence of all.

The wedding was to take place Christmas eve, and grand preparations were being made, for it was to be the affair of the season.

One evening in October the doctor, after pulling his bride's younger sister's ears to his heart's content, suggested a late oyster supper, and for some reason which he would find difficult to explain carried home an oyster-shell from the repast.

On the following morning he found it in his pocket, and while resting from his professional work, amused himself by thoroughly scrubbing it. "But few of us know how beautiful an oyster shell is," said he.

"As beautiful as Belle?" asked his friend and former classmate Doctor Codine, who while lying on Bander's operating chair read the latest medical journal.

"No," said Doctor Bander, while he continued to admire the shell.

"Nor as eloquent?" again said his friend, in a teasing tone.

"Which?" asked Doctor Bander, ambiguously.

Codine continued his reading as Bander mechanically polished the shell. Suddenly an idea presented itself to him which seemed amusing, for he smiled as he glued a ribbon to the back of the shell, and upon its face he painted the word "Snooper." He ornamented its edges with a narrow rim of gold and then hung it on the wall of his office, among the paintings and articles of bric-a-brac, most of which he had collected on his travels.

When he had finished his little ornament, his friend arose, looked at it, and said:

"Regy, what is a snooper?"

Dr. Bander, without changing a feature, or manifesting the least annoyance in his tone, answered:

"An apparatus designed to make blamed fools ask questions."

For some reason both laughed, yet neither would have been able to explain their amusement, except, perhaps, by the antithesis it presented to the usual serious character of their employment.

The "snooper" was soon forgotten in the discussion of a new operation which a surgical celebrity was just then introducing, when Miss Belle entered with a message from her mother, asking whether Regy would have time to dine with her that evening.

The doctor kissed his bride, whereupon his friend, with farcical gravity, felt his pulse, and in a breath said:

"Repetitur pro re nata, five dollars is my fee," and affecting a pompous stride, took his hat and overcoat and went home.

While Doctor Bander proceeded to write, Miss Belle "set things aright," which, as a bride, was a pleasure to both, and which, as a wife, she might consider quite a task and he an insufferable bore. Such is the way with a majority of professional men — they seem to enjoy disorder in the workshop of their brains, and the wives take particular pleasure in depriving them of that enjoyment.

The elegant little dust-broom which Belle had given her future husband was whisking off the particles which had settled upon his books and ornaments as she talked to him.

Suddenly she stopped, touched the oyster-shell upon the wall, and read the word "Snooper."

"Darling," she asked, "what is a 'snooper'?"

"A 'snooper,' dear," he answered, "is an apparatus designed to make fools ask questions."

She did not laugh, but quietly laying down the duster, before he could understand her actions, she had left his office, and a moment later he heard the street door open.

"Belle, dear," he exclaimed, but his voice was full of misgiving. The door closed, and Doctor Bander understood that something had disturbed the pleasant engagement. His efforts to continue writing proved futile. Belle's silent exit spoke volumes to him. He could not convince himself that the matter would blow over as soon as he might wish.

The entrance of patients, for a while gave his thoughts other direction, but his office hours were hardly over when he determined to call on his bride and either laugh away the affair, or if he should fail in this—much as he disliked the idea, he would apologize.

He was adjusting his gloves when his eyes fell upon the "snooper," and—women would say—manlike, he tore it from the wall, and opening a window threw it out, and was sorry that it did not break on the pavement below.

Slowly he entered his cab, and was about to order the coachman to drive to Mr. Remesa's house, when a messenger handed him a package. He opened it, and found all of his presents to his bride, even to her engagement ring.

He did not observe the messenger pick up something from the street, and smile as he carried off the "snooper" with him; but returned to his rooms and gathering the pretty little ornaments his bride had given to him, made a package of them and sent them to her without a word.

The two apparently most gay people at all of the balls and parties during the entire winter were Miss Remesa and Doctor Bander, yet they avoided each other as skilfully as they did the questions of their relatives and friends. Soon all ceased to speak of the engagement, and by spring it was only remembered that at one time they had been promised to each other.

Again Christmas approached and Doctor Bander had not eaten an oyster in the interval.

He worked harder than ever at professional matters, and was appointed surgeon of the City Hospital.

A fair was to be given for the benefit of the institution, and of course he must attend.

Bander went and was victimised at grab-bags, raffles, votes for the prettiest lady, the most popular physician, at the "museum of living curiosities," which contained a mouse in a cage, a canary which drew water, and similar marvels. The fine-art gallery consisted of "Bony part crossing the rind"—a skeleton of a a chicken mounted on orange peelings, and "Egyptian Darkness"—a sort of a sentry box, which kept the beholder peering in and seeing nothing.

As his purse grew light, thoughts of going home presented themselves to him, when he noticed a large number of people in one corner of the hall, who seemed to struggle toward the centre and leave it with a small package, which each one opened when alone and laughed at the contents.

He approached the crowd, and, without being able to elicit the cause of the commotion, was pressed to a pagoda, within which stood Belle, who, with perhaps ever so slight a tremor in her voice, said:

"Good evening, Doctor Bander! How many will you take? Only twenty-five cents each."

He handed her a dollar, and she quickly returned him four little jeweler's boxes, upon which was printed "To be opened when alone." The surging crowd pushed him off, and as soon as he was free he opened one of the boxes, and drew forth a circular, which read as follows:

THE ONLY ORIGINAL SNOOPER.

Patented, Copyrighted, and Canvassed by the Inventor.

DIRECTIONS: Hang the snooper by its ribbon in a conspicuous place in your office or parlor, and all who see it will ask: "What is a snooper?" Then you must answer: "A snooper is an apparatus to make fools ask questions." This invariably produces the best of feeling among all concerned.

NOTE: If the snooper should break, you will have lost the sum invested.

P.S.—No discount to the trade.
P.P.S.—Call again.

Beneath this circular upon some fine cotton rested an oyster-shell, polished, cleaned and painted as the one he had hung in his office on the last day that Belle had been there. The hot blood rushed to his face, and his first impulse was to throw the boxes to the floor and leave the ball; yet a moment's consideration convinced him that he could take advantage of this opportunity to speak to Belle.

He attached the shell to his buttonhole, like a bouquet or a decoration, and returned to the pagoda.

"Miss Remesa, is it allowable to wear a snooper in this manner?"

She betrayed not the slightest emotion as she took a tiny golden shell from her bosom, upon which the letters R and B were entwined, and, deftly fastening it to his scarf, said: "No, Regy."

Some say that he grasped her hand and pressed it to his lips before he would release it, but that cannot be proven.

An hour later they entered the sitting-room of the Remesa mansion. Belle's parents started as if frightened when they saw them. After some moments' conversation, Mr. Remesa said: "Now, Reginald, you will kindly tell us the cause of your incomprehensible separation from Belle?"

The Doctor answered, much in the manner of a schoolboy confessing a peccadillo: "A snooper." Mrs. Remesa turned to Belle and said: "Perhaps you will explain what divorced you for a whole year previous to your marriage?"

Belle blushed, looked at the doctor, at her parents, and as she cast a glance at the floor seemed to find the answer there, for she quickly said: "A snooper," and seemed glad that she had given expression to her pent-up thoughts

"A snooper!—why, what under heaven is a snooper?" both asked. Before they could answer, in rushed Belle's younger brother, and boy-like roared: "Just think! ma and pa, Belle's made a fortune for the hospital, selling oyster-shells and calling them——" he saw the doctor. "Why, hello—Reg—what in the world brought you back?"

The doctor smiled now as he said: "A snooper."

The young brother-in-law grasped his hand and yelled, "Hurrah for the snooper!"

Mr. Remesa arose, and, with all the dignity of a well-reputed wealthy merchant, said:

"Have you all gone mad? Charles, will you have the kindness to inform me immediately what a snooper is?"

Imagine the consternation Charles's answer produced:

"According to the directions 'a snooper is an apparatus designed to make fools asks questions.'"

The old gentleman glared at his son, then at the rest of the family. Silently he left the room. He went to the club, and at the very entrance met another of "the old boys."

"Howdy, Remesa,—look at this shell. You're a connoisseur in bivalves—what do you think of this?"

The old gentleman saw the fatal word "Snooper" painted upon an oyster shell, and was about to say something severe to his interrogator, when Doctor Codine approached with a polite salutation.

"Doctor, I am glad to see you," said Mr. Remesa, "and I should like to talk to you for a few moments." Visions of a consultation from the rich Mr. Remesa crossed the doctor's mind as they went to the smoking-room. These visions were, however rapidly dispelled, and the old gentleman and the young doctor, after an hour's conversation, parted, both apparently in high glee.

It was near midnight when Doctor Bander returned to his office, and there found Codine, who greeted him with:

"Bander, do you know what you are?"

"A very ordinary mortal in your eyes I presume."

"No, you are a snooper," and for some reason they embraced, not like Spaniards, but really hugged each other. Codine found his breath first, and said:

"Bander, when is it to be?"

"Christmas. And you will be my 'best man.' Belle told me to ask you."

And Christmas it was. It seems that somehow the cause of the separation had become public, for the majority of the presents were elegant imitations in gold and silver of the snooper.

Reader, make a snooper and show it to your sister-in-law. When she asks the question, answer according to the directions, and then it would be well to remember that you have an urgent appointment some miles off.

But after all is there such a word as "snooper"?

Convince yourself by looking on page one thousand two hundred and fifty-one of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, and if you don't find it I am sorry for you, and for Webster also.

He Had Some Fun.

About 8 o'clock yesterday morning a man smoking plug tobacco in an old clay pipe, walked out of a Michigan avenue hotel with a rat in a trap. He looked neither to the right nor the left until he had reached the middle of the street. Then he placed the trap on the ground and whistled for his dog. If he had a dog the animal did not respond, but the public did. In less than two minutes 30 men were rushing to the spot.

"Hi! there! Don't let him out till I get my dog," shouted one.

"Hold on! Wait for the dogs," yelled half a dozen voices at once.

"Keep cool and form a circle!" commanded a policeman, as he took a firmer grip of his baton.

The man with the trap spread a large handkerchief over it and waited. He was not a bit excited. On the contrary, he was as placid as a chip sailing in the wash dish.

"Whar did ye ketch him?" inquired a newsboy.

The placid man did not deign to reply.

"What'll ye take fur him?" asked another, but his inquiry was treated with the same silent contempt.

Then four or five men came running up with dogs under their arms, and ten or fifteen dogs on foot followed behind. There was a fight between a bull dog and a Newfoundland, and there would have been a row between their owners had not a second policeman appeared. Order was finally restored. The dogs were arranged in a circle and held by their collars, and the placid man slowly knocked the ashes from his pipe, looked carefully around, and then raised the trap and shook the rat out. All the dogs made a rush, but in ten seconds each and every canine walked off on his ear and seemed to be hurt in his feelings. A boy stepped forward and held the rat up to view.

"It's a crockery rat!" he yelled as he whirled it around.

"Yes, it vhas a grogbery rat, and he cost me den cents!" calmly replied the placid man as he walked off with his trap.—Detroit Free Press.

The Peanut.

Virginia is away ahead in this industry, and threw 2,400,000 bushels on the market last season. The total value of the crop in the South was over $3,000,000, and several great fortunes have been made in this way. The demand increases every year and prices are steady. An excellent oil is pressed from the peanut, and in some parts of Georgia pastry is made from peanut flour. The shells are sold to livery stables for horse bedding. The cultivation of the peanut must become a great industry in the South, as the profits of an acre are about the same as cotton gives with a good yield, and peanuts are a great deal less trouble and expense. —Atlanta Constitution.

A Business Proposition.

A cowboy who had lately arrived in Austin from the Panhandle district, stepped up to the ticket window of the International Railway station, and inquired the fare to a certain place.

"Eight dollars," replied the agent.

"But can't you let me down a little easier than that," he said, "come, now, I'll give you five."

"There's no jewing down of prices here," said the agent, "do you want a ticket?"

"Well, don't get up on your ear about it," said the cowboy. "Gently, gently, be you the man that's going to run the train out of here?"

"No, it's another man."

"'Tis, eh? Well, won't you just ask him if he won't take me for less if I'll let him run slow and save expense of wear and tear on the machinery and road? I ain't in no particular hurry."

Wonderful Marksmanship.

A Texas military company went out on the range recently practicing rifle-shooting. The lieutenant in command suddenly became exasperated at the poor shooting, and, seizing a gun from one of the privates, angrily exclaimed:

"I'll show you fellows how to shoot.'

Taking a long aim, and a strong aim, and an aim altogether, he fired, and missed. Coolly turning to the private who owned the gun, he said:

"That's the way you shoot."

He again loaded the weapon and missed. Turning to the second man in the ranks, he remarked:

"That's the way you shoot."

In this manner he contrived to miss about fifty or sixty times, illustrating to each soldier his personal incapacity, and finally he accidentally hit the target.

"And that," he ejaculated, handing the gun back to the private, "is the way I shoot."

A Good Father.

A father called his son into the library the other day and said:

"Harry, you are now seventeen years old."

"Yes, father."

"I have given you money from time to time, but you have had no stipulated allowance. Begining with next week I shall allow you $6 per week."

"That will be splendid! You are one of the best fathers in the country!"

"Yes, $6 per week, and as you are now old enough to pay board, I shall charge you $5 per week! You can always depend upon the dollar coming to you each Saturday."

Coal Fields in the North-West.

The proof of the existence of coal, of various grades, in workable quantities, seems at last to be forthcoming. In quantity, the coal, in one or other of its forms, from lignite to true coal, bituminous and authracite, appears to be practically inexhaustible. It is said that Mr. George Dawson's forthcoming report on the subject, will give the following estimate of quantities underlying each square mile of surface:

	Tons.
Main seam, in vicinity of Coal Banks, Belly River, coal underlying one square mile — — —	5,000,000
Grassy Island, Bow River, continuation of Belly River main seam, underlying one square mile.	5,000,000
Horse-shoe Bend, Bow River, continuation of Belly River main seam, underlying one square mile.	4,000,000
Blackfoot Crossing, workable seam as exposed on Bow River — — —	9,000,000

The extension of the coal beds which occur on the Bow and Belly Rivers is great both to the north and north-west. Lignite is found on the North Saskatchewan. One seam is six feet thick, and there is an outcrop at Edmonton. Thirty miles higher up, there is a seam which reaches the enormous thickness of eighteen feet. The quality is good and the composition as follows:

Water	7.00
Volatile combustible matter	31.35
Fixed Carbon	54.97
Ash	6.68

Outcrops exposing large seams are met with at other points. On the North Pembina, an eight feet seam occurs, and on the Athabaska lignite beds have been traced for several miles; and it is expected that near the mountains, coal of a better quality will be found. On the Peace River only thin veins, of doubtful economic value, have so far been found; but it is possible that further explanations may give better results. Coal from a two foot seam in the canon of the mountains, where they are pierced by the Peace River, yielded on anilysis:

Water	2.10
Volatile combustible matter	21.51
Fixed carbon	71.63
Ash	4.73

Near the boundary line, coal is found much further east than on the North Saskatchewan. The coal in the Cypress Hills and at Medicine Hat is a distinctly marked lignite, which is of course not the most valuable. On the Souris River, the lignite beds are capable of yielding 7,126,864 tons the square mile. A large number of analyses of lignites found east of the 106th meridian, give the following results:

Water	15.46
Volatile combustible matter	27.97
Fixed carbon	41.21
Ash	5.36

The wide distribution of the beds of different kinds of coal is a most fortunate circumstance, reducing as it does the cost of carriage to the lowest limit, and bringing fuel, an article so much wanted in the North-west, near the homes of future settlers.

On the policy of the Government in dealing with these coal lands, much will in the future depend. The great thing to be guarded against will be the formation of rings that might carry prices to an artificial height. The profits of individuals and companies who acquire coal areas should be got out of the working, and not extracted from jobbing purchases and sales of coal lands. The regulations for the disposal of coal lands are in many respects, fair enough. After survey has been made, and this is to be done as soon as possible—the coal lands, within certain districts, will be periodically offered for sale by tender or public auction, at the option of the Government. Existing leases may be converted into freeholds on certain conditions, including payment in cash of the price placed by the Minister of the Interior on other coal lands in the district where the beds are found. Forfeiture will follow where the conditions to commence active operations within one year, and to work the mine within two years, have not been complied with. The Minister of the Interior has conferred upon him the power to sell at the upset price to persons whom he may find have spent "considerable sums of money" in exploring for coal; a latitude of discretion which will take certain lands out of the general regulations, as to sale by tender or auction.

The want of some regulation which would prevent rings being formed to make coal artificially high, will, we fear, yet be felt. What form such regulations to be effective could take, is a point on which scarcely any one has, so far, ventured an opinion. — Monetary Times.

How Wooden Spools are Made.

The birch is first sawed into sticks four or five feet long and seven-eighths of an inch to three inches square, according to the size of the spool to be produced. These sticks are thoroughly seasoned. They are sawed into short blocks, and the blocks are dried in a hot air kiln. At the time they are sawed a hole is bored through them. One whirl of the little block against sharp knives, shaped by a pattern, makes the spools at the rate of one per second. A small boy feeds the spool machine, simply placing the blocks in a spout and throwing out the knotty or defective stock. The machine is automatic, but can not do the sorting. The spools are revolved rapidly in drums and polish themselves. For some purposes they are dyed yellow, red, or black. They are made in thousands of shapes and sizes. When one sees on a spool of thread "100 yards" or "200 yards" these words do not signify that the thread has been measured, but that the spool has been gauged and is supposed to contain so much thread. When a silk or linen or a cotton firm wants a spool made it sends a pattern to the spool-maker. This pattern gives the size and shape of the barrel and of the head and bevel. These patterns determine the amount of thread that the spool will hold. Mr. Dwelley's factory turns out 100,000 gross of spools per day, and consumes 2,500 cords of birch annually. His year's spools are worth $40,000. Thirty-hands are employed in the mill. During the winter, 250 wood-choppers are sometimes employed. Mr. Dwelley is an inventor and a machinist. He invented, designed, and made every machine in his shop. It is a large brick building. Mr. Dwelley also has lathes which turn out large quantities of pill-boxes and blocking-boxes. He, too, says, "I have more orders than I can fill."

"Her" Mother-in-Law.

It is always his mother-in-law upon whom sarcasm spends its random ineffectual shots. Her mother-in-law escapes. With manly egotism editors and writers who are, invariably and headlessly masculine, remorselessly put the stale slanders in cold type and assume that their mothers are perfect mothers-in-law. "Are we not their sons?" "Could so perfect a specimen of manhood spring from any but a most perfect source?" Assuredly not. But wives are proverbially known to be imperfect; hence their mothers are more so. Who ever knew a wife that could cook like "my mother," or make a shirt that set like mother's, or darn socks so they wouldn't hurt the tender feet? "Mother used to do it, I don't see why you can't." The wife being so faulty, what can her mother be?

It is never disagreeable to him to hear his mother say that "Mary Jane dresses too much," "that Mary Jane entertains too much," "that she is extravagant in her house-keeping, careless in the management of the children," "too demonstrative," or the reverse. Oh, no, it is his mother and she must know. But let her mother but hint in the kindest manner that "George stays out too late," or that the "club is too expensive for a young man just starting in life with his own way to make," "that his cigar bill would suffice to bring many a little luxury into his home," and then will flow the vows (made to his wife with profane prefixes unfit for ears polite) that he "won't stand that old woman's tyranny any longer, that he had put up with it long enough (although it may be the first hint that she does not think him perfect), that if she keeps on in that strain she will drive him straight to the devil," etc.

But these are nothing beside the trials of a young wife taken to live with her mother-in-law. Who ever saw a mother with a darling son that could find a girl good enough or pretty enough for the splendid creature who one day is going to make Rome howl with his phenomenal cleverness and wonderful abilities? Be she ever so pretty or ever so sweet—she is not too pretty nor too sweet to incur his mother's aversion. The first battle ground (it looks like tattle ground as written—ED.) is the housekeeping of this double household—and although all the drudgery of the house-keeper may be relegated to the young wife—be sure the reins of government are still in the hands of his mother. This gives her an opportunity to criticise and admonish that is not to be gained by any other arrangement. Who has not seen in their own circle of acquaintance some sweet young girl married and taken to live with her mother-in-law? Did no one notice how, little by little, the happy light faded from her eyes, the youthful elasticity from her step, until people began to say: "How Mary Jane is fading." "She used to be so pretty." "Those delicate, bright looking girls fade so soon." Her mother has seen it if no one else has, and perhaps this is the beginning of the trouble between him and his mother-in-law, of which he writes so fervently.—N. Y. Graphic.

The One Thing in Which She Was Not Extravagant.

Mr. Topnoody lighted his cigar the other evening, after supper, just before starting down town, and Mrs. Topnoody looked at him and said:

"You smoke good cigars, don't you, Topnoody?"

"I try to, my dear."

"I heard a lady say to-day her husband told her you smoked two for-a-nickel kind."

"The scoundrel," said Mr. Topnoody, indignantly.

"I told her I knew you had better taste than that."

"Of course I have, my dear, and I'm glad you defended me. I smoke only the best and these cost twenty-five cents a piece, wholesale."

"How many do you smoke a day?"

"I smoke only about a half a dozen; but I give away enough to make it average as much as ten a day. There's nothing mean about me, my dear, in that sort of thing."

"Ten a day," said his wife, meditatively, "three hundred and sixty-five days in a year, 3,650 cigars a year, at a quarter apiece, amounts to $912.50—Topnoody, I want a $500 sealskin sacque."

"What? You shock me. Why, I can't afford it. I never wear any $500 clothes."

"All the same, I'm going to have it, and if I have to select it I'll get one for seven-fifty sure, Topnoody."

"But, my dear——"

"Don't but me, Topnoody. You may be a goat, but I'm no target."

"Good heavens, woman, you'll bankrupt me with your reckless extravagance."

"You think I'm extravagant, do you?"

"Yes, I do; you are extravagant in everything from your jaw clear around."

"Not everything, Topnoody."

"Name one thing you ain't extravagant in and I'll give you a dozen sacques, if I have to mortgage the house to do it."

"Will you? Well, I'll tell you mighty quick. I'm not extravagant in my admiration of a man named Topnoody, and I——"

Topnoody didn't remain over to hear the conclusion.—Merchant Traveler.

—Henpeck:—"My love, I'm happy to inform you I've insured my life!" Mrs. H:—"Then you ought to be ashamed of such a selfish action. Insure your own life, indeed!—It doesn't matter about mine, I suppose."

—"I thought," said the senior Baggles as he produced a suspicious looking flat bottle from his son's valise, "that there was nothing but your surgical instruments in this bag." "That's what I said, dad." "Then, sir, what do you call this?" "That? Oh, that's my eye-opener, dad; very useful instrument, very useful; indispensable, I assure you!"

—The idea of a woman demanding equal pay for equal work! She ought to be willing to do all the work for no pay at all. This comes of your higher education. Once was the time when a woman was willing to enlist in matrimony and become wife, mother, washerwoman and maid of all work, for her board and clothes, and sometimes mighty poor board and plaguey few clothes; but now—really, we have no patience with the creatures!

A Remarkable Talking Crow.

At the house of J. L. English, in the west end of the city, is a pet crow who rejoices in the name of "Grip." The bird, now about sixteen months old, shows that it is not necessary to split the tongue of a crow in order that it may speak. What seems more strange, his tones, so far from being discordant and crow-like, exactly resemble those of the human family around him. His curiosity is always aroused by the approach of a stranger. Upon seeing a person for the first time he deliberately walks around him, examining him in the keenest and most critical manner, frequently ordering him with great sternness to "go home," or "go away." Possibly, if Grip is in a pleasant frame of mind, he will greet a stranger with "Hello; hello" He imitates every noise that may be heard in the farmyard; calls like a hen when she fears danger to her brood of chickens; scolds like a setting hen; whinnies like a horse in the fields, and after an intermission will crow like the king of chanticleers, and again like a young cock just trying his feeble, cracked voice. He seems to consider himself the guardian of the premises, walking up and down the street in front of the house and driving before him cats, dogs, or any unfortunate stray chickens that have wandered beyond their limits.

At first he always buried a portion of the food given him, plucking up grass and leaves and chips to cover it; then if offered more, he would unearth the hidden store and bury in its place that last offered. But now that he finds his rations forthcoming without care on his part, he only buries that which is left after satisfying his hunger. His favorite tit-bit is a bone having a little raw meat on it, and this is often hidden for days. He never eats corn, but small grains and berries he will hold in a pouch at the root of his bill. He never talks with his mouth full, but will unload his pouch and say, "Old fellow, old fellow?" oftentimes again picking up the grains and utterly refusing to drop them again.

He never shows any desire to fraternize with the wild crows who come about him. Not long since being addressed by some of these crows with a loud "caw-caw," Grip responded by saying "bow wow wow," following this with a loud "hello," which so frightened them that they took rapid flight and did not return. He is a keen hunter of moles, and these pests have been obliged to seek other places than the smooth lawn, which Grip seems to consider his own especial property. There are numberless little things which show a great degree of intelligence in the crow, and indicate a degree of reasoning one would hardly look for in a bird usually considered a nuisance. It is sincerely hoped that no careless sportsman will shoot this wonderful Grip as he flies through the neighborhood.—Hartford Evening Post.

How the Widow Measured the Resolutions of Sympathy.

John William Blank belonged to the Ancient and Modern Highly Honorable Sons of Guns. If it wasn't that, it was some other fraternal order which meets every Monday night and pays so much to the heirs of every member who happens to die.

John William happened to die the other month, and a committee was appointed to draft resolutions and present them to his wife in person. The first part of their duties was fulfilled to the entire satisfaction of the lodge, but the committee had some little trouble in finding Mrs. Blank. They traced her from one neighbor to another, and finally found her at her sister's, hat and shawl on and ready to go out.

"Resolutions of sympathy, eh? Well, read 'em."

The chairman of the committee proceeded to read that John William was a good husband and a kind father and a citizen of unapproachable integrity, when the widow interrupted:

"Too much taffy! we used to have a fight every week, and as for his being a kind father, we never had any children. As for his integrity, he stole all the wood we burned last winter!"

The chairman gulped down something and continued to read that John William was an upright brother, a man with a heart full of sympathy for the misfortunes of others, and that charity and forgiveness were the beacon fires which guided his footsteps.

"Fudge!" sneered the widow. "I washed for the money to pay his dues to the lodge, and all the sympathy any one got out of him wouldn't buy a cent's worth of court plaster! Forgiveness! Well, some of you ought to have sat down on his hat some time! He'd have revenge if it cost him a year in State Prison. Beacon fires is purty good, considerin' that we never had a decent stove in the house!"

"Madam, your husband has been called hence."

"Exactly; I was at the funeral and ought to know."

"He was cut down like a flower."

"Well, flowers ought to let whiskey [illegible] sledge alone."

"And we trust that our loss is his gain."

"Well, if he's any better off I'm glad on't, but I guess the gain is on your side. Now that's all I want to hear. I can pick up a thousand better men than him with my eyes shut. I'm in a hurry to go down and see a woman who offers to sell a fur lined circular for $15, and if you have any more highfalutin Shakespeare to get off my sister will take it in and save it till I come back!"—San Francisco Exchange.

Not Quite Satisfied.

"You say you are from New York?" queried an old farmer in Massachusetts, who had halted at the farmhouse to ask for a drink of buttermilk.

"Yes."

"Do business there?"

"Yes; I'm in Wall street: I am a broker."

"Broker, eh? Do much breaking?"

"Well, I'll leave that to my customers to decide. I do the best I can, however."

"Well, you look if you might be respectable if you had a chance," said the old farmer; and turning the corner of the house he called out to his wife, in a voice plainly heard at the gate: "Say, Mariar, here's a fellow from New York who wants a glass of buttermilk. He looks all right, and I guess he'll pay cash down, but it won't be any harm to thin it down pretty well with spring water."

Thought but Death Divorces;

OR,

LADY AUDREY'S SACRIFICE.

Then they were silent for some minutes, the rector waiting in sorrowful dismay for his daughter to speak, Audrey trying to collect her strength.

"I am in sore distress," she repeated—"oh, father, my marriage was no marriage—the man I love is not my husband!"

"My darling child, you tremble like a leaf! Sit down, Audrey, and tell me all."

"It was no marriage, papa, although he thinks it was. He is not my husband; he has a wife living from whom he has been divorced."

The rector's face flushed angrily.

A wife living, yet he dared to marry you, Audrey! The man is a villain!"

Then she became as anxious to defend him as she had been to leave him.

"You do not understand, papa. He is not a villain; he thought it was all right because he had obtained a divorce."

"I know nothing about divorces," said the rector; "I only understand the Christianity of the matter. No man can have two wives; that is plain enough."

"He does not think so, papa; he fancies that the law has freed him from his first marriage, and that he was quite at liberty to contract another. That is the belief of many people."

"It is not mine, and it is not yours," he said quickly. "How strange, Audrey, that I had always a presentiment about this marriage of yours! I had always a fear that I did not like to express."

He walked rapidly up and down the room.

"It is strange that I have heard nothing of this," he said. "I made every inquiry about Sir Roche, and everyone gave him the highest of characters."

"He bears a high character," she rejoind quietly. "I believe this is his only fault; but then, papa, I find that everyone does not think as you and I think. There are many who honestly believe that a divorce frees from marriage ties, and leaves men and women free to marry again. Sir Roche believes it and is honest in his belief. You know better—so do I."

"Tell me about it, my darling," he said, looking at the white face from which the brilliant beauty seemed to have fled.

She told him all that had happened—of her refusal to associate with a divorcee; of Lady Glenarvon's letter—she felt quite sure that it had come from her; of her journey into the city to find the copy of the Times; of Sir Roche's dismay, and their farewell. Then she looked up at him.

"You must not think that because I tell you this quietly, papa, I have not suffered. My heart is broken; but I cannot do wrong and live. You think I am right in my decision, papa?"

"I do, my darling," he said in a sorrowful voice.

"You think right to leave him?" she asked.

"Yes, quite right, Audrey," he replied.

She drew nearer to him, and he saw how she trembled.

"Papa, tell me what you think yourself. Am I Roche's wife—his lawful wife—before God and man?"

"He groaned aloud as he answered her; still he would say nothing but the truth.

"No, my child, I do not think you are," he said.

She threw up her arms in distress.

"What am I before Heaven," she cried—"what am I?"

"Innocent and guiltless," said the rector. "You have not sinned; you have been sinned against."

"I must never go back to him," she said. "Papa, you must tell mamma—I cannot—my heart is breaking."

There was a slight sound at the door; turning, they saw Mrs. Brooke looking at them with wondering eyes.

"Audrey!" she cried; and the girl rose to go to her, and then fell helplessly to the ground.

The rector raised her and laid her on the couch, and then told his wife her story.

"If we wished her well," he said, "we should almost pray that she might never open her eyes again."

"My beautiful child!" sobbed the poor mother. "What has she done, Fabian, that she should suffer like this?"

Then came days and nights of unutterable sorrow and distress for the saddened household, for Audrey lay sick unto death, and her parents felt that she would not recover. Sir Roche came down, but the rector would not allow him to see his daughter.

"I am a Christian, sir," he said, "and so am bound to forgive you, but your deceit has slain my child. You will see her no more."

Sir Roche pleaded and prayed; he was so humble, so earnest, so persistent in declaring the honesty of his belief, that the rector was touched at last.

"Why did you not tell us?" he said. "I cannot understand why you kept your first marriage a secret."

"I was afraid," he answered. "But my fear was not because I believed you would think my union with Audrey wrong. I thought you might be prejudiced against it.

A great deal of Dr. Brooke's anger faded away after this: he could not help feeling the most profound pity for the man whose life had been so terribly blighted. They discussed the question in all its aspects, political, social, and religious, but the rector kept his convictions, whilst those of Sir Roche were somewhat shaken.

The mother, too, forgave him when she saw how very dearly he loved her child—when she saw how keenly and bitterly he suffered; but both parents were firm in one respect—they would not allow him to see Audrey.

"It will be of no use," Mrs. Brooke told him; "you will only pain her, and to no purpose. You will never change her opinions or ours; leave here in peace."

There was nothing else for him but to go away, and, though they considered that he had deeply wronged their child, they could feel no anger against him, when they saw how ill and worn he looked.

Audrey had a hard fight for her life. The Ascension lilies were in bloom before she was able to get up. She referred but little to her trouble, but at times she looked at her mother and said:

"You must not think that I do not feel the separation because I do not speak of it—little sorrows find a voice, great ones are dumb."

She did feel it when the time came that she could be taken down stairs; when once more she was able to undertake the duties of life, they saw how sadly her sorrow had changed her. The doctor advised them to take her to the seaside.

One morning the rector went into her room with an open newspaper in his hand.

"I thought it would comfort you, Audrey," he said, "to read this."

It was a well written paragraph on divorces, and, as testimony to the fact how strongly some persons were opposed to them, the writer quoted the story of Lady Villiers.

He told briefly how she had married Sir Roche without knowing the history of his previous marriage and divorce, but that as soon as she had become acquainted with it she had left him.

There was no comment upon the case; the plain story was told, and persons could think what they would about it.

"Is that what you meant—what you wished, Audrey?" asked the rector.

"Yes, papa," she answered, "that is the only amende that could be made, and I am glad that it has been made."

Then they went away to a beautiful breezy seaside spot, where the air soon brought a tinge of color to Audrey's face, and light to her eyes. When they had been there a month, Audrey said one day to her father:

"Papa, I have been thinking very much to-day about what is the best thing I can do with my life."

"Tell me what you have thought, Audrey?" he requested.

"It is spoiled," she continued, "so far as the desirable things of the world are concerned; for me there will never be husband, or home, or love. I have done no wrong, yet my fair name is tarnished. I have no position; I am neither wife nor widow. But a sweet thought has come to me—I discovered an object to which I can devote my life. I cannot give it to Sir Roche, but I may spend it for Sir Roche's wife. I must not love him—I may love her; and I am going to seek her, and try if I cannot place her by his side again."

"My dear child!" cried the rector, aghast.

"My dear father, could I do a wiser, better, kinder or more generous deed?" she asked.

"Perhaps not, but——"

She did not allow him to finish the objection—she kissed it away.

Advice and remonstrance were alike vain. Not that the rector really disapproved of his daughter's intentions; it was Quixotic—it was quite unworldly—it was even romantic—but to him it was a noble idea.

"Papa," she said, clinging to him eagerly, "of what use would it be to me to spend my whole life in vain regrets and lamentation? None. There is so little left that I can do. I cannot remain with you and return to that life; I am ashamed. I cannot tell why, but I feel ashamed, as though I had done something wrong."

"It is a morbid, foolish feeling, my dear," remarked the rector.

"I know it is; but I cannot quite help it. The position is a strange one. As the years pass on I shall grow accustomed to it, and shall not mind mixing with the world; just now I cannot. But the work I have proposed is lying ready to my hand."

"I will not object to it, Audrey; but I cannot say that I like your knowing such a person."

"I may do her good, papa; I will try. I will be kind, gentle and loving to her. It seems to me that I owe her some atonement, and if I can in any way do her good, it will make me happier. She must have suffered a great deal. I have tried to call to mind all the things that could make me happy now, and this is the only practicable step. Let me take it, papa!"

So the matter was settled. Her sorrow and her illness had changed Audrey. She was a child when she was married, now the wisdom and experience, the thoughts of noble womanhood had come to her. The rector felt no fear. She would do all that was wise, gentle and true.

"The poor creature must be miserable enough," he said. "If you can do her any good, Audrey, go."

Audrey was most careful about everything. Her mother wept bitter tears when her daughter drew her wedding ring from off her finger.

"I must not die wearing this, mamma," she said; "it is the symbol of an untruth. I should not like to be buried in it."

Mrs. Brooke took it from her with tears. She locked it away; and if Audrey thought of it, she never asked about it—the little ring in which so many hopes had centered. Another thing she was scrupulous about was her name. She would not allow any one to address her as "Lady Villiers."

"To listen to that name in silence is to own my complicity in a sin," she would say. "I am not Lady Villiers, papa. By what name I am known before Heaven I cannot tell, but it cannot be that. The world may say what it will of me—I am Miss Brooke."

There were times when the rector's eyes filled with tears as he thought of his daughter's case.

Life had this one charm left for Audrey—she would seek out Elodie, whose name and place she had so unconsciously taken, and then do her best.

She had arranged it all in her own mind. She would go to Rookdene, and there make the acquaintance of Elodie Villiers—then, when they were friends, the rest would be easy.

Neither her father nor her mother opposed her; they saw that her mind was fixed upon it.

One bright morning she started on her errand. Her first difficulty lay in the fact that she did not know the name at present borne by Elodie.

She would not be called Lady Villiers—that seemed quite certain; neither would she have resumed her maiden name. She trusted to chance to assist her.

Audrey was agreeably surprised on reaching the village of Rookdene. It was neither so small nor so obscure as she had expected; it bade fair to become a very flourishing watering-place in time.

There was a long street, some pretty outskirts, and rows of neat villas facing the sea; and there was one or two good hotels.

It was altogether above the run of ordinary coast villages, and Audrey wondered that it should be called one.

At the railway station her attention was drawn to the Rookdene Weekly Gazette which professed to publish a list of visitors.

Some impulse prompted her to purchase a copy and look through the list of names. Amongst them was "Mrs. Dighton, No. 3, Medina Villas;" and as she read the words a shame-faced kind of wonder came to her. Could it be possible that Sir Roche's wife, Elodie, called herself by that name?

She drove to Medina Villas. They were a row of pretty houses facing the sea—bright little houses, with flowers in every window, and pretty gardens. By good fortune, as it would seem to her, No. 4 had a card in the window—"Apartments to Let."

"If it is Elodie who calls herself Mrs. Dighton, and she lives at No. 3," she said to herself, "I could not do better than take rooms at No. 4."

She told the driver to stop there; and, after a pleasant interview with the good-natured landlady, she agreed to take the pretty suite of rooms for some weeks at least.

"How long do you expect to remain," asked Mrs. Dalton curiously.

Audrey answered that it was quite uncertain; it might be weeks or months. The landlady, however, raised no objection; and Audrey dismissed the driver, and sent Mrs. Dalton's servant with a request to the railway officials to forward her luggage.

CHAPTER XII.

Audrey was in her pretty drawing-room overlooking the sea. She sat near the open window, watching the waves as they rolled in, the golden sands as they glowed wet in the sun, and the children as they played, the specs in the garden as they bent their fragrant heads, the pretty sprays of mignonette. A feeling of rest as well as loneliness came to her.

It was all so calm, so peaceful, so still. Since that fatal morning when she had read her husband's story her life seemed to have hurried on.

One event had rapidly succeeded another. Still she had never been alone; her gentle mother has always been near her.

Now she was a stranger in a strange spot. It seemed to her that she had never been alone before—had never known what real solitude was until now.

She almost forgot for the moment why she was there. Looking at the clear bright sky, many thoughts came to her.

Had she really done what was wisest and best? To her pure and steadfast soul came deadly doubts and temptations.

Had she done done right to leave the man whom she loved so entirely? How he had pleaded with her! He had left his very soul, he said in her hands.

He had prayed her to remain beside him, as though she were the good angel of his life. He had told her that his very hope of Heaven went with her. Would it not perhaps have been better to remain with him, and leave matters as they were.

She looked at the blue sky, but no answer came from it; the heavens were as brass. She looked at the restless sea; no voice came from the waves. Then she roused herself.

"I know that I have done right," she said; "no one may do evil that good may come."

Many were the conjectures formed in the village as to the beautiful lady with the sorrowful face who had come to No. 4, Medina Villas. She was not married her name was Miss Brooke—and the gossips wondered amongst themselves whether she belonged to the Brookes of Devonshire or the Brookes of Forest Dean. It was such a beautiful face, but so sad, so sorrowful. Every one agreed that she must have had either a severe illness or some great trouble.

Audrey was very careful at the beginning of her inquiries. There was nothing that kindly Mrs. Daites liked better than a chat with her lodger. It was from her that Audrey heard first of the beautiful young, Mrs. Dighton. Yes, she was a widow, and she could not be more than twenty-five years of age. She had a beautiful face, but she was so restless.

"She came here first to enquire about my rooms, Miss Brooke," said the energetic little woman; "but I could not let mine for a permanency, having engaged with several families for the season. I recommended her to go next door, and she did. It would be a real charity for you to make friends with her, Miss Brooke," continued the kindly gossip, little dreaming that it was for that very purpose her lodger was there. "She knows no one; she goes nowhere; she leads a most solitary life."

"Perhaps she is not strong," said Audrey.

"No; of that I am quite sure. She is not strong. She was only in this house half an hour; but she gave me a strange impression. She was always looking at the door as though she expected some one to enter. She trembled at every sound. It seemed so sad to see her young face with a widow's cap around it—so sad. She walks in the Square every day. I see her in her long black dress and widow's cap. I always long to speak to her."

Audrey changed the subject; but she resolved none the less to seize the first opportunity of finding out whether the beautiful young widow and Elodie were the same.

Yes, Sir.

One can't expect to succeed in business or in pleasure either, for that matter, unless one feels all right in health and spirits. This is the first consideration. Now, it is a small matter when this remedy, ZO-PE-SA, is recommended so highly, even guaranteed to renew one's energy and spirits by invigorating the Liver and aiding Digestion, by clearing the Brain, opening the pores of the skin, regulating the Bowels and system, to go to the drug store and get a single bottle of Zopesa as a trial. Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them a name of their own, and not try to sell them on the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back. 2-tf

BENSFORT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

"A NEW HAND AT THE BELLOWS."

Mr. John Fletcher, who is a favorite with all the patrons of the establishment, takes charge of the blacksmith shop here at the beginning of the year. He is a capable mechanic and will doubtless carry on a most successful business.

PERSONAL.

A copy of the Ralls county (Missouri) Guide received here, says:—"Mr. W. M. Wood took four carloads of cattle to Chicago last week. Mr. Wood is one of the best farmers in the county." Mr. Wood, who is a brother of Mr. R. E. Wood, of Hatton & Wood, barristers of your town, left this neighborhood about 15 years ago, and has met with great success, which his many friends here will be pleased to learn.

WIDE OF THE MARK.

The other day a school teacher not a hundred miles from Bensfort, thought by virtue of his vacation—teaching the young idea how to shoot—he must be a good marksman, went into a farmer's barn to bring down with his gun some predatory red squirrels. He shot away all his amunition, and even assisted the squirrels in robbing the farmer's granary of peas by using them instead of shot, but in vain. The only harm the squirrels suffered was the loss of their winter's supply of peas, wasted in aimless efforts to compass their destruction. If the teacher is not a better success in teaching the young idea how to shoot than he showed himself in shooting squirrels he would do well to take lessons in intellectual gunnery.

BENSFORT HOSPITALITY.

Any traveller resting all night in this village, and fortunate enough to secure the hospitality of Mr. R. McLellan, especially if Mr. Cullon, the teacher, happens to drop in, will enjoy a rich musical treat as well as hearty hospitality. Between the skilled efforts of the two he will have a violin-t season of enjoyment.

THE NEW CHURCH.

The dedicatory services of the new Methodist church passed off on Sunday and Monday last with great success and now the people have a most beautiful church ready for worship. The church, which has already been described in your columns, has been furnished with a fine Dominion organ. Misses Hannah Wood and Margaret S. Kerr exerted themselves creditably and successfully to raise funds to carpet the pulpit platform, etc. The driving sheds have been built by the personal exertions of members of the congregation who turned out and drew materials and put them together.

TEACHER RESIGNING.

It is generally regretted that the village is to lose the services of Mr. Cullon, the popular teacher, who has accepted the charge of a school near Lindsay. He will be greatly missed here as he was well liked and his services well appreciated.

THE CHRISTMAS EXAMINER.

Everybody—for everybody got one—is delighted with the Christmas edition of the EXAMINER. It surpasses all previous efforts; its beautiful pictures, its interesting reading matter and complete advertisements are thoroughly appreciated, and the latter will draw hundreds from this neighborhood to your live town.

MUNICIPAL HONORS.

The candidates for municipal honors are now beginning to emerge from their hiding places, and we may soon expect to be in the middle of the fray.

COUNCIL MEETING.

The Council met at the call of the Reeve on Dec. 7. Present,—Wm. Rutherford, Esq., Reeve, and Councillors, Riddell, Lightfoot, Byers & Perrin. Minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The committee appointed to purchase a safe for the use of the Council, reported that of the several examined by them, they had selected the one now in the Council room, and at a cost of $85, as being the best for the amount expended. Report adopted.

Messrs. Rutherford and Riddell, the committee appointed to see after the work done under contract on Clark's hill, 3rd concession, reported the work done acording to contract, and that order on treasurer had been given for $98, contract price.—adopted.

The committee appointed for letting and inspecting the work on Wood Duck bridge, and grading the approaches, reported they had let the job to Wm. Mackenzie for th sum of $250, and that he had done the work in a satisfactory manner and payment made.—Report accepted.

Committee reported the gravelling done by Martin Henry on the 2nd concession as finished to their satisfaction.—Accepted.

Wm. Sandham, of Frazerville, applied to Council for a refund of $1.10 taxes paid by him on part of lot 1, 6th concession.

Application refused, as Sandham had failed to seek redress at the Court of Revision.

Joseph Clark, south half of lot 3 in the 3rd concession, put in a claim of $5 for damages sustained by the pulling down of his fence and the travel through a part of his lot by the public, while the work on Clark's hill was in progress.

It was moved and seconded that this council do not entertain Mr. Clark's claim—motion carried.

Mr. Perrin introduced a by-law for the providing of polling places, also a place for the nomination of candidates and for the appointment of deputy returning officers. The by-law was passed through the different stages, blanks filled in, signed, sealed and numbered By-law No. 22.

POLLING PLACES.

Sub-division No. 1, Orange Hall, Baillieboro, W.H. Walkie, deputy returning officer.

Sub-division No. 2, Council Chamber, Centreville, Edward Ball, deputy returning officer.

Mr. Lightfoot introduced a by-law to enable the constituents of this municipality to take advantage of the benefit of the Act known as the ONTARIO DRAINAGE ACT.

The by-law was passed through its several stages. The name of R. B. Rogers, Provincial Land Surveyor, Civil Engineer, etc., of the Village of Ashburnham, added, and on motion of Mr. Riddell, seconded by Mr. Perrin, the by-law was read a third time, passed signed and sealed, and numbered By-law No. 23.

On motion Mr. Lightfoot was authorised to expend the sum of $12 conjointly with the Council of Cavan, on improvements on Massey's hill—west boundary of South Monaghan.

The Clerk was instructed to bill the township of Cavan with 45 loads of gravel furnished by this Council to David Woods, overseer of highways on west boundary.

The application of David Baxter, east half lot 3 in the 5th concession, for lease of road allowance on the north end of his lot for a term of 5 years at $2 per year, was granted, and Clerk instructed to draw up a lease.

On motion the clerk was instructed to notify all overseers of highways who have not returned their road lists, that unless they be returned by the 16th they will be charged for the full amount of the same on the collector's roll.

Mr. Perrin paid to the treasurer the sum of $5 for wood sold off con. 3.

The Council adjourned to meet at the call of the Reeve.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS.—SUGGESTIONS.

Christmas is coming! with its demand for pretty fancy articles suitable for Christmas gifts; and a few suggestions as to new styles of art needlework may be acceptable to those having a number of friends to provide for. A nice present for a house-keeper is a set of half a dozen doylies or small fruit napkins. The latest fashion is to turn down one corner of the linen squares and work upon it an orange, banana, or other fruit, varying the design on each. Embroidered aprons are now very fashionable for home wear and may be made of satin, linen, pongee or muslin, and decorated with silks, wool, or crewels, as the material suggests. A very tasteful apron for a young lady is one of pure white pongee worked with dainty knots of violets, the waistband and strings being of delicate lavender ribbon. We have seen them of ecru, tied with scarlet, the front decorated with comical looking honey bees, and the motto, in outline stitch, "How doth the little busy bee improve each shining hour!" These are flattened on one side, and sowed in groups of three, a shadow being worked beneath each, and when mixed with artistically shaded leaves, are very effective. One thing always to be remembered in embroidery, as well as in painting, is to decide at first on which side of your bunch or spray the light shall fall, and work accordingly, the shades gradually melting into each other, from the deepest to those which are almost white.

Turnbull's millinery & mantle makers have been very busy all the season through, which is proof positive that his honest endeavors to secure the right goods have been appreciated. Call early if you wish to have a mantle or bonnet made up before the holidays.

HOW STUMPS ARE BLASTED OUT.

A correspondent of the Ohio Farmer gives his experience and some practical directions on this subject as follows:

"Last pring I sent to Indiana and hired a man to come and blast out stumps. I paid 42½ cent per pound for the powder and 15 cents for each stump taken out—he to furnish caps and fuse. The stumps were mostly white and burr oak, from 20 to 40 inches in diameter, and had been out from six to twelve years. Sixty-seven of the worst were taken out an expense of 68 cents per stump. There were only three or four failures in the whole lot. As they were blown into pieces, it was much less work to pile and burn them than when taken out in the ordinary way. I bought material and took out nearly 200 smaller stumps at an expense of 20 cents each. It took me about ten or fifteen minutes to prepare a blast. I used a two-inch auger on a five foot shaft for boring under the stump. A crow bar will do in soft ground; those who follow the business use a two and a half inch auger. The charge should be put as nearly under the centre of the stump as possible.

It is not very dangerous to use, as fire will not explode it. The cap is placed in the cartridge, and is connected by a fuse. You light the fuse, which in one or two minutes explodes the cap. The concussion of the cap, which is equal to 500 pounds, explodes the dynamite or Hercules powder. Eight or ten pods to a safe distance if you are facing the stump, as you can easily dodge chunks if any come towards you.

It will not pay to use it very extensively on green stumps, as it will take from three to eight pounds per stump, and will not give very good satisfaction at that.

About Us All.

Constipation makes half the people sick. You are dizzy, have bad breath and taste, can't eat, can't sleep well, head aches, nervous, irritable. Can't work it off, can't rest it off. Well your Liver must be invigorated. Your food must digest properly. Now save a doctor's bill with a bottle of ZO-PE-RA. You will be surprised with a few doses. ZOPERA is a positive cure for these troubles, because it acts upon the Stomach and Liver and through the Liver the system and Bowels must be regulated. Ask for a sample. 41-4t

It is rumored that negotiations are on foot looking to the purchase by the Grand Trunk of the Rome & Watertown Railway. It is also said that at the next session of the Dominion Parliament a charter for a bridge across the Niagara river at Clifton will be applied for, and connection made between the R & W. and the Great Western division of the Grand Trunk at St. Catharines. It is now considered certain that the Canada Southern intends to acquire the charter of the St. Catharines & Niagara Central Railway and build a road connecting with the Canada Pacific system at Toronto. The Grand Trunk does not intend to voluntarily lose one foot of its territory, and will meet the Canada Southern at every point.

"A severe cold settled in quick consumption. I bought two bottles of Dr. Wilson's Pulmonary Cherry Balsam and she took them. They worked a complete change and by its continuance she was completely restored to health." This is F. B. Gardner's testimony regarding the most popular remedy for coughs and colds, and throat and lung diseases generally, and a testimony somewhat similar is given by all who have tried it. Dr. Wilson's Pulmonary Cherry Balsam is nature's cure, and its effects are rapid and beneficial

The flood in the river Scheldt has subsided. Considerable damage has been done to the quays and streets of Antwerp adjacent to the river.

Intemperance of every kind is followed by exhaustion of the vital forces—by nervous prostration and general debility, with restlessness of body and mind, the body incapable of exertion—the mind feeble, capricious, with no power of concentration, and often subject to despondency, and an indisposition to do battle with the world. To recover permanently abstain from the excessive use of Whiskey and Tobacco, reform irregular habits, and take Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elixir Phosophates and Callaya, to restore tone to the stomach, vitality to the nerves and muscles, and energy to all the organs of the body. Earl Granville will take no action on the resolutions passed by the Australian convention until the official documents have been received from Sydney by mail. It is thought the final decision will be to establish a protectorate over New Guinea and the other South Pacific islands it is proposed to annex.

A Paralytic Stroke.

W. H. Howard, of Geneva, N. Y., suffered with palsy and general debility, and spent a small fortune in advertised remedies, without avail, until he tried Burdock Blood Bitters. It purified and revitalized the blood, caused it to circulate freely, and quickly restored him to health. 51-2t

A despatch from Madagascar, says the French continue their marauding expeditions along the coast. They have bombarded Mahambo and some small ports in Antogil bay and Vohemar in British sound. Landing at Vohemar they burned the town and destroyed a quantity of the property of the Hovas, which was British property, over which the British flag was flying. The Hovas retired from the town.

The Best Proof.—The Globe.

"I sell more Burdock Blood Bitters than I do of any other preparation in stock," says B. Jackes, druggist, Toronto. If the reader will ask any druggist in the city he will get a similar answer to his query—a proof that it is the most popular medicine for the blood, liver and kidneys known. 51-2t

The London Times says that there was never a more uncompromising defiance flung in the face of the English nation or government than when Parnell on Tuesday evening declared war upon constitutional principles and the connection between England and Ireland. The situation is serious and will tax the ability of English statesmen to the utmost.

Be Careful what You Eat.

The best medical anthorities declare that worms in the human system are often induced by eating too freely of uncooked fruit and too much meat, cheese, etc. Whatever may be the cause, Freeman's Worm Powders are speedy and safe to cure; they destroy the worms, and contain their own cathartic to expel them. 51-2t

SAWERS' EXTRAVAGANCE EXPOSED.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—By inserting in your paper the following, addressed to the electors of Peterborough, you will confer a favor.

Yours, etc.,

—. —. —.

To the Electors of Peterborough:—

GENTLEMEN,—Mr. Sawers has not replied to my letter in last week's EXAMINER. Whether or not he unreservedly accepts my statements, I do not know, nor care, but I do know, that where serious charges are made affecting the candour and honesty of purpose and conduct of any individual seeking public office, and those charges are backed and supported by substantial evidence, if not disproved and combatted with stronger proof, they are admitted to be true beyond questioning.

In my former letter I showed, from the minutes of this year's council, that almost every position which Mr. Sawers took in his address, constructed though it was on his own premises, and fortified by his hypocricy and pettifogging quibbling, was assailable either owing to actual falsity of his statements, or to the tricky manipulation of words which left more to be inferred than was stated; that he was attempting to grasp the highest municipal gift in the hands of the people by duplicity, dishonesty and perfidy; that like an eastern necromancer, he was projecting out of his foolish brain vain illusions which he was striving to make appear as real and credible, and that he was stupidly trying to gull the electors and palm himself off as a miniature hero in brass, to be crowned with olives, and led forward as a common benefactor to us all and as a victor over the huge monsters jobbery and corruption. I submit that from the minutes of the council that he never was in favor of progress and municipal reform. He voted to increase the salaries of auditors 25 per cent, and that of assessors 33⅓ per cent. He moved the consolidation of the town's by-laws, which would have cost $1000, which motion was defeated by those very men whom this blatant "economist" treats as hopelessly corrupt and extravagant. He is opposed to allowing one person to hold the two offices of clerk and treasurer, although the division must entail increased expenditure, and carry in its train increased taxation. He advocated the fire station nuisance, and all the expenses ignorantly incurred thereby. He recommended the building of a wing on each side of the market building, and an awning over the market sidewalk, splendid trophies no doubt of his peculiar genius, which might descend as enduring monuments of his transcendental folly and stupidity to laughing generations.

BANK OF TORONTO BUILDINGS.

I also proved how that Mr. Sawers advocated every motion which led to the purchase of these buildings and the ratification of the same, and I now state that when Mr. Sawers affirms that he was opposed to paying the whole amount of the purchase money this year, he wilfully misstates his position. I find that on Aug. 27th, Mr. Sawers seconded the motion for the first reading of the by-law levying the rate for the present year, which included the rate to be imposed for these buildings, and that too, although he knew that the present offices were leased until two years from next January. It is indeed pitiable to reflect that any person, in order to gain a paltry vote and an office for which in experience, intellect, character and credibility he is totally unfitted, he will stultify and sink himself deeper than ever Opheus descended in search of his amiable spouse.

STOP THIEF! POLICE, $2700 REWARD.

On April 2ard, a little alien All Fools' Day, but before the dog days, Mr. Sawers makes a courtly bow in another scene. He was under a slight misapprehension—a delusion. He imagined the electors were becoming restless, turbulent, bloodthirsty and seeking for one another's gore. In order to preserve the peace and put on foot the rudiments of a standing army, he moved that six additional policemen be employed to cost only $2,700—$2,700 gentlemen, nothing more—except uniforms, perquisities, etc.

$200,000 BONUS—ENOUGH TO BUY A FOOL'S PARADISE.

By his excessive garrulity you will be always able to discover the fool. Had Mr. Sawers only preserved a strict silence he would never have favored a bonus of $200,000 to the Ontario & Quebec railway. This ranting "economist," the workingman's friend—thus to betray his principles and his imaginary supporters—thus to undertake a burden in comparison with which every other is small and lightsome—thus to sink the town in a debt which would cripple it for years! Where now are his protestations of economy? Who now was guilty of jobbery and extravagance? What was to be the price of his influence? Who would be the gainers? Who the losers? Time alone could unfold the mystery.

THE LIQUOR INTEREST.

It has been reported to me that the liquor interest of the town, in secret session, has resolved to support the candidature of Mr. Sawers. They, no doubt, imagine that they will have a plaything—a mere gew-gaw in their hands who will "tumble" to anything his owners wish. They know their man well, but he, base ingratitude! at one time did not know them, for I find that on Feb. 12th, he moved to increase tavern licenses $20, at that time never forseeing his present position, but only desiring to behold the stirring name of Sawers heading a motion which he now regrets, and which, I hope, he will never have the opportunity to swallow.

COW BY-LAW.

In my last letter I pointed out how Mr. Sawers had a kick at what he calls the poor man, richer perhaps than himself in common sense and intelligence—how he refused to extend the time for adding five per cent to the taxes beyond the 14th of Dec., and how now he pretends to so assiduously and hypocritically cultivate their interests. Yet even Sawers, noble champion, voted for the cow by-law, rightly in my opinion, but treacherously as their supposed advocate and friend. Alas! Sawers, the poor man's friend!

WATER WORKS.

Mr. Sawers by underhand tactics and anonymous squibs, has cast so dark a mantle over these works that neither their real bearings, nor his position can be thoroughly determined. He is everything to each man. In the first place I can authoritatively assert that the town cannot purchase the works unless the by-law be submitted to the vote of the people. In the next place Mr. Sawers has misstated a vote in reference thereto in a letter which appeared in one of the Peterborough papers. He did advocate the buying of 15 hydrants for fire purposes, to be paid by a local tax on the buildings only, to a depth of 114 feet from the streets to be benefitted.

A NEW ADDRESS.

If Mr. Sawers would only discard his first address, the following would necessarily be a reprint of the second:—"Gentlemen,—My arrogant presumption drove me forth as a candidate for the honorable office of Mayor. My overweening vanity compels me still to stand abjectly soliciting your suffrages, contrary to my little sense. My first address was a humbug. I am a humbug and a delusion. My whole candidature is a sham, a farce, a caricature. Heaven only knows the disgust which seizes me,"

Apologizing for trespassing on your columns,

I am,
AN ELECTOR.

A CHRISTMAS BOX.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

How does this ticket strike the electors, who believe that a mayor should work for the interests of the town and not for himself or friends?:

C. W. Sawers, Mayor.
John Sawers, Collector.
'Gus Sawers, Assessor.
Duncan McLeod, Treasurer.
W. H. Moore, Town Solicitor.

This is just what C. W. Sawers, that self-sacrificing patriot, is working for. If the electors were fooled by a wise man they would feel bad enough; but to be fooled by—the family compact candidate for the mayoralty——

Yours truly,
VIGILANT.

Peterborough, Dec. 25th.

A SAMPLE HYPOCRITE.

To the EXAMINER:—

DEAR SIR,—I accidentally came into possession of information that certainly demands an explanation from Mr. Sawers, whose hypocrisy and sham economy cries, are a disgrace to any man seeking to be elected mayor. I have it on excellent authority that Mr. Sawers told a member of the Water Works Company that he was not opposed to the water works, but that abuse of them was a good election cry. This is the poor man's friend—the honest candidate, whose only desire is to serve the town. A man who has no claim to the public confidence must do a deal of dirty work to secure it.

Yours etc.,
A DUPE NO LONGER.

Peterborough, Dec. 24th, 1883.

MR. SAWERS' QUESTIONABLE TACTICS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

SIR,—Will you permit me through the medium of THE EXAMINER to ask Mr. Sawers why he in his canvas so persistently charges Mr. Cox with seeking the mayoralty for the purpose of unduly promoting the interests of the water works to the detriment of the town?

Mr. Sawers is fully aware of the untruthfulness of the rumour, and when he knowingly and willfully makes use of the statement, and thereby misleads the unwary by giving currency to what he knows to be untrue, he is acting unworthily and forfeiting all right to the confidence of the ratepayers. If Mr. S. will deceive the electors and endeavor to entrap them into voting for him by the circulation of false reports, what may we not expect from him should he succeed in being elected as mayor—provided the occasion offered and he had any personal or private motive to serve?

Yours, etc.,
INQUIRER.

Dec. 20th, '83.

INFORMATION ASKED AND SUPPLIED.

MR. EDITOR,—I have been greatly puzzled to account for Mr. Sawers' exceeding eagerness to occupy the Mayor's chair. Is it because he has distinguished himself so brilliantly, personally, professionally and municipally that he thinks he is the best man in the town for the position? Has he done so much for Peterborough that the town is bound to reward him with the mayoralty? Does he want to demonstrate to the Dominion Government that he has so much local influence that they will give him the post office, building on his lot, and deprive Phelan's corner and No. 1 Ward of a chance for the site? Is it, as there is proof to show, that he may fill the offices of town treasurer, collector, and assessors with his relatives and connections, who are resorting to every mean and petty subterfuge to secure his election? I am told that one of them, at the Council meeting, when Mr. Sawers opposed the fair and honest amendment of the collector's, Mr. Cumming's bonds, attended the meeting with his bond in his pocket, ready for use, if his brother could bulldoze Mr. Cumming into resigning. Now, Mr. Editor, one family compact brought on a bloody rebellion in 1837, and can we expect that a Peterborough family compact will be for the benefit of the town? We have had too much experience of rings in the past to allow us to tolerate the rings that Mr. Sawers is trying to manipulate, to answer his own ambition and promote the schemes of his relatives and friends.

Yours etc.,
RATEPAYER.

OBITUARY.

The Late James Beckett.

James Beckett, who died on December 18th, was born in Ayrshire, Scotland, in the year 1793, and had consequently, at the time of his death, reached the ripe age of 90 years. After his father's death, he, with his eldest brother's family, sailed for Canada in 1820, and had for fellow-passengers the present Premier of the Dominion, J. Dougall, son of the proprietor of the Montreal Witness, and the Cameron family, who settled with him on the town line between Otonabee and Asphodel. For five years he had no neighbor to the north of him, and was truly a pioneer of the forest and endured all the hardships incident to the early settlement at that time. In 1837 he married Miss Catharine, third daughter of the late D. McNaughton, who at one time was steward to the Marquis of Breadalbane In 1853 he was suddenly bereaved of his beloved wife, and, to this heavy trial, was added another nine years later, when his youngest son was called away as he was entering a promising manhood. Though no aspirant for political honors he was a staunch Reformer and always took an active part in fighting the battles of the country that were necessary for good government and righteous principles. His hospitality was unbounded. He was for many years an earnest worker in the cause of temperance. The Sabbath was observed by him with Puritanic strictness, and was ever regarded by his household as the happiest day of the week, and the manner of its observance will ever be cherished by them with the most pleasing associations. He had a most remarkable memory and vivid imagination, hence his conversation was replete with history and anecdote, and, as he sought to improve his mind by every object around him, he seldom failed in apt illustration. His mind was well stored with Bible truths, and he had a great love for the Psalms and Paraphrases, many of which he repeated with profit to himself in his last illness. For over thirty years he was an elder in the Presbyterian church, Westwood, and labored in the Sabbath school until failing strength compelled him to resign in favor of younger persons. His health was remarkably good until about six months before his death, when he gradually sank away by old age and infirmity. On the 18th December he peacefully passed away in the full assurance of a glorious immortality. He leaves five daughters and one son, a Presbyterian minister in Thamesville, Ont., to mourn the loss of one who always had sunshine in his face, and concerning whom, as was truly observed by a neighbor, his mission seemed to be, peace on earth, good will toward men. Notwithstanding the bad state of the roads the funeral cortege was very large. The services were conducted by the Rev. J. Andrews, who spoke very feelingly concerning the virtues of the deceased, and especially of his unwavering faith in the merits of the Saviour.

ENNISMORE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

On Wednesday night, last week, the barns and out-buildings on lot 12, con. 5, belonging to Thomas Bradburn, was burned, with a large amount of the year's crop, implements, and two pigs of Mr. Herd's, the tenant. How the fire originated is unknown, but is thought through parties in search of fowl, as there has been considerable of that business transacted along the shores of Mud Lake of late. Buildings and contents partly insured.

COLDEST YET.

At sunrise on Sunday morning the 23rd inst., the thermometer ranged 18 degrees below zero.

HARVEY.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

At the close of the examination on Friday, Dec. 21, in S. S. No. 2, Harvey, the following address was read:

MISS M. BORROWMAN:

Dear Teacher—As you have decided to leave this school section, after having earnestly and faithfully discharged the duties of teacher for the last three years, we, your pupils who have attended the school, do hereby present this landscape and book of poems to you, hoping you will accept them as a memento of our love and esteem for you personally.

We thank you for the patience extended to us from time to time, in the thoughtless moments of our youthful exuberance, and for all your kind endeavors to "teach the young idea how to shoot."

We earnestly hope that you will enjoy every temporal blessing, and in the end, life everlasting.

Wishing you the usual compliments of the season we remain, in behalf of the school,

Yours loving pupils,
MARY OLIVER,
MARY CAIRNDUFF,
WILLIE MURDOCH,
TOM TATE.

Miss Borrowman replied in suitable terms.

FRAZERVILLE.

(From a Correspondent.)

[An item referring to the Presbyterian entertainment, Springville, was in type from another correspondent before the receipt of the Frazerville correspondence.

The horse which was stolen from Mr. Waterman's stable about three weeks ago has not been heard of since. We believe Mr. W has offered a very decent reward either to the thief or any other man if they procure the horse for him.

The anniversary sermon was preached in the Methodist church, Fraserville, on last Sabbath evening, by Rev. David Hunter. Owing to the extreme coldness of the evening the attendance was not large, but those who missed the sermon missed a rich treat; and we believe if the sacred desks throughout our fair Dominion, were filled with such men, who have such clear ideas of salvation, then fewer would be the misled minds on such an important subject.

A great many children in this vicinity have been sick, but we are glad to learn they are nearly all better.

Why do so many Ladies say: "I have so much trouble in getting the make of Toweling I like." If they call at Turnbull's first, they will find exactly what they want.

SCHOOL BOARD.

The School Board met on Tuesday evening, the 11th inst. Present—Mr. J. G. Galvin, Chairman; Messrs. Sanders, Gordon, Armour and Caldwell.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following accounts were presented and ordered to be paid:

S. Henderson, stationery, etc	$3.22
George Nichols, repairs	3.35
W. H. Casement, wood	4 50
Joseph Brown, repairs	50

Miss Hare's application for the position of teacher in the junior department was accepted; salary $300 per annum.

Mr. Isaac Watson, Sr., was reappointed janitor at his former salary of $30.

A communication was received from Mr. F. August, head master, inquiring if the board intended introducing the new series of readers; also the monthly reports for October and November.

The report was received, and the board decided not to introduce the new readers at present.

A resolution was moved by Dr. Armour, seconded by W. Sanders, appointing Mr. W. H. Casement returning-officer to hold the election for school trustees; the election to be held in the Council Chamber; the fee to be $3.

A member of the board suggested that $3 was too much if a poll was not held, as it only required one man to hold the nomination.

After some discussion the motion carried.

The annual Xmas entertainment of the Sunday-school of the C. M. Church was held in the P. C. A. Hall on Tuesday evening, the 19th inst. There was a full house, many being unable to obtain seats. First in order were songs, recitations, and dialogues by the pupils and members of the school. Miss Whaley, of Orangeville, by special request sang a solo, and was heartily encored. The programme, though long, seemed to be thoroughly enjoyed from first to last, all acquitting themselves most creditably. Next in order was a presentation to Miss Clarin, who was to leave Lakefield on the following day as Mrs. Whaley. The presentation was made by the ladies of the church as a slight recognition of her services as organist in the church and Sunday school. It consisted of a magnificent revolving silver water pitcher, a fruit basket, and a card receiver. The presentation was accompanied by an elegantly-written address, which was read by Mrs. Dr. Armour. Rev. Mr. Johnson made a suitable reply on behalf of Miss Clarin Rev. Mr. Deeprose then came forward on behalf of the trustees of the C. M. Church and with a few well-chosen remarks presented her a large elegantly-bound family bible as an expression of their appreciation of her services as organist and leader of the choir. Rev. Mr. Johnson replied on her behalf. She was also the recipient of a beautiful ocey, which she received from the ship, and which was presented by the ladies of St. John's Church as a token of their esteem and good wishes on the eve of her departure from Lakefield. And last, but not least, to the little folks at any rate, came the unloading of the ship, which was heavily laden with a great variety of Christmas presents, and many were recipients of tokens of kind remembrance. The entertainment proved a complete success in every way.

FIRE.

Our village was aroused on Friday night by the ringing of the fire bell and the cry of fire. It was a passenger coach of the Midland Railway which fell a prey to the devouring element. As there was no water at all convenient, nothing was done to prevent its complete destruction. The fire is supposed to have originated from the stove.

MUNICIPAL.

Nomination for Reeve and Councillors takes place next Monday in the Council Chamber. Very little speculation so far. The old Councillors will likely all be candidates again, with a probability of being re-elected.

MARRIAGE BELLS.

A quiet wedding took place in our village on Wednesday, the 19th. Miss E. Clarin, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Clarin, being the bride, and Mr. Eri Whaley, of Orangeville, the groom. The ceremony took place in the afternoon at the residence of the bride's father, and was performed by Rev. Mr. Johnson. The happy couple left on the 3:20 train, carrying with them the kind wishes of a large circle of friends.

SKATING RINK.

The rink was opened to the public on Saturday last, and no doubt will be well patronized.

MASONIC.

Clementi Lodge meets this (Thursday) evening, being the festival of St. John the Baptist, for the installation of officers.

KEENE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The ice has formed a bridge over Rice Lake, and pedestrians passed to and fro during last week.

The Keene rink will soon be ready for skating.

The review of the Sabbath-school lessons will be held in the Presbyterian church next Sabbath evening. A collection will be taken up in aid of the library fund.

A good many have taken advantage of the reduced fares, and have gone off for the holidays.

While Mr. Wm. Kerr, blacksmith at Matfler's carriage works, was assisting to bring some sleighs from the paint shop; on coming down the platform the slipped and broke his leg.

Mr. John Gall, proprietor of the Victoria House, has just finished roofing his hotel with galvanised iron. Considering the care which he bestows upon the interior as well as the exterior, we consider him well worthy of the patronage of the traveling public.

Burnham's grist mill is undergoing repairs, and a lot of new machinery is being put in. Mr. Humber, of Goderich, is the millwright in charge.

The band concert on Thursday evening last was quite a success. There is no doubt but a larger attendance might have been expected had there not been quite so much sickness in the vicinity.

Our New Watchmaker, Mr. Hughan, comes well recommended, and we are sure any work entrusted to him will be done in good style. Office lately occupied by Elias Burnham, Simcoe Street. 18-tf

HARVEY.

Mr. William Dewyer is now considered the boss chopper of Harvey. On Tuesday last he cut, split, and piled four cords of maple. The work was performed in the woods belonging to Mr. Telford, and was measured by Mr. Crowley and Mr. Telford. This is a very good record, and if any one has done better we shall be pleased to hear from him.

BETHANY.

Mr. Porter Preston's funeral was one of the largest ever witnessed in this part of the country. Mr. Preston's widow and family have the sympathy of the community at large in their bereavement.

The tobogganing club annual ball recently held was a most enjoyable affair. A good attendance, first-class music, and refreshments furnished by the lady patrons, all conduced to make the affair a success.

BOBCAYGEON.

An interesting match at bowls was played at the Forest House on Wednesday night between five representatives from Bobcaygeon and a like number from Fenelon Falls. The home team were victorious, but in courtesy to the visitors it should be stated that Fenelon has not an alley, so that they were unpractised.

The locks having been placed in fair repair, operations on the Government works have for the time ceased. Later on the canal is to be relined. Mr. Wm. Kennedy, the Government foreman, is now engaged at Chisholm's Rapids superintending the construction of two new lock gates, and general repairs of the works. Mr. Russell is also engaged at the same place in serving his country and astonishing the natives.

COBOURG.

The Kobold Brothers were among the sufferers by the large fire at Rat Portage on Sunday night.

The covered rink was opened to the skating public for the first time this season on Wednesday.

The band, having secured a new bandmaster, serenaded the citizens on Christmas morning.

To show the perfection to which the telephone has arrived, we mention the fact that a young man in town held a conversation with a citizen in London, Ont., one day last week.

A man coming in on Saturday said he passed six broken rigs between Baltimore and Cobourg, most of them with the axles broken off close to the wheel. The sudden cold, rough roads, and a backwoods state of civilization.

BELMONT.

A marble quarry, says the Herald, is said to exist near Round Lake, in the township of Belmont, about ten or twelve miles north of Campbellford. The stone is said to be among the finest produced, and there is an inexhaustible quantity lying in readiness for the enterprising speculator. Some quarrying has been done, but the cost of transportation so far distant from a line of railway made the venture too expensive to realise a respectable profit, and the work was abandoned. The opening of the O. & Q. Railway may bring the hidden wealth of this mine of stone more prominently into view, and it may yet become a place of busy operations. The railway will pass within a short distance of the quarry, and the marble could be drawn to a station by teams at a cost which will leave a good round margin of profit from its sale.

LINDSAY.

"There is a strong probability," says the Post, "that the proposed Salvation Army barracks will be built at Lindsay." A permanent supply of sinners warrants the undertaking.

Mr. Sidney Barclay, of Ops, and Mr. John Dix & Son, of Little Britain, had five head of thoroughbred cattle at the shorthorn sale in Toronto last Friday and Saturday. The cattle brought pretty fair prices.

Last Saturday evening Mr. W. A. Ward had an unpleasant experience. A lighted coal-oil lamp, standing on the table at which Mr. Ward was seated, exploded. The oil was scattered over the table cover, books, and papers, and the carpet around the table was saturated. The oil immediately took fire, and when put out on the table attacked the carpet.

At a meeting held on Monday evening it was definitely decided by the congregation that a new English church should be built on the present site. The brick for the structure having been already secured, the contractors will proceed at once to complete arrangements for an early commencement of operations.

POST MISS.

Mr. Guy Andrus, of Orono, has been appointed to the position of teacher of English and science in the High School here for the ensuing term at a salary of $650 per annum.

On Thursday afternoon last Mr. Thos. Wade threshed five hundred bushels of barley for Mr. Robert Wade, of the Lake Shore road, in about four hours. This is very quick work.

There being no criminal cases to be disposed of on the opening of the Counties' Court on Tuesday of last week, His Honor Judge Benson was presented with a pair of white kid gloves.

An excellent contrivance has been constructed at the Midland Railway shops here for lifting derailed cars upon the track, in the shape of a derrick erected upon a flat car built for the purpose. Strong rope and tackling are provided, and when in working condition it is capable of lifting a weight of eight tons. The design is taken from those used on the Louisville and Nashville railway, and this is the strongest and largest construction of the kind in Canada, being much larger than that used on the Grand Trunk railway.

CAMPBELLFORD

Trent Valley mill completed the dismissal of the employees last week.

The Rathbun Co. have concluded a contract for the supply to the G. J. R. of 280,000 ties during the coming year.

Mr. Thos. Curtin, an old resident of Campbellford, died on Thursday last, at the age of 73 years. His remains were placed in the Catholic burying ground on Tuesday last.

The books of the "Woodlands" cheese factory in Seymour west, show that during last season there were 1,158,349 lbs of milk delivered, and that from this quantity there were 114,109 pounds of cheese manufactured. The total receipts from the sale of cheese were $11,699,88, and the average price of cheese for the season was 10 and one-fifth cents per pound.

During the season of 1883 the Brae cheese factory received 1,578,062 pounds of milk, from which was manufactured 159,169¼ lbs. of cheese, thereby taking 9.91 lbs. of milk to one pound of cheese. From the sales of cheese the sum of $16,670.57 has been realized, the average price being 10 and 40-100th cents per lb. The standard of 3,000 lbs of milk has made 302 and 58-100th lbs. of cheese, and returned $29.13 per standard to the stockholders.

NORWOOD.

The material for the station reached here on Tuesday last.

The tracklayers, on the O. & Q. have reached Mr. Paget's farm in Asphodel.

$37.50 was netted at the tea-meeting held at South Dummer, under the auspices of the Methodist Sabbath school of that place, on Monday evening last. The success of the meeting was due in a great measure to the superintendent, Mr. Jas. N. Paget, who devoted a good dead of time to the preliminaries.

Mr. J. Davidson has been suddenly called away to bring home the body of his brother who dropped dead while on his way home from California. Mr. D. was called home about three months ago to attend the funeral of his father.

Mr. Jas. McMillan, of Asphodel, has purchased Mr. S. J. Clysdale's valuable farm in Dummer, paying therefor the handsome sum of $5,000.

Mr. Wm. Mackey, of Asphodel, has purchased Mr. Jas. McMillan's farm. He paid $3,175 for it.

Mr. John Pettigrew, of this village, killed two very large spring pigs last week. One weighed 336 lbs. and the other 309 lbs.—only seven months old. The above places Mr. Geo. Elliott's pigs in the shade—one of which, aged fifteen months, weighed 408 lbs., and another, aged seven, 275 lbs. Mr. John Morrow, of Belmont, sold a pig in Peterborough the other week which weighed 500 lbs.

ILLEGAL SLAUGHTER OF GAME.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER :—

I would like to make inquiries through the EXAMINER if there has been any one appointed to look after the game in this part of the country. If so such party had better be on the alert. As I was going back to the woods a few days ago I came across a gang of notorious pot-hunters encamped in an old shanty in the township of Methuen. I can go a little farther than the Toronto Mail and give you the names of the ringleaders, who are well known and habitual pot-hunters. Some of them have always made a practice of killing deer in the months of February and March on the crust, when no other dogs would eat them. There were a few others with the party, which are gone home, but those I could name were hunting still on Saturday when I came down. If any of the gentry concerned wish to know my name you may give it in full.

MR. COX'S REQUISITION.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER :

SIR,—When I addressed you on Thursday last I used some stinging words in reference to "Ratepayer" and "A. B.," thinking it would have the effect of forcing him to uncover and take the responsibility of his uncalled-for attack on the Water Company. I was, however, mistaken, as he evidently thinks "discretion is the better part of valor."

I feel some hesitation in taking up your valuable space again in noticing this anonymous writer, but I cannot allow his last letter to pass unnoticed. The object of his letters is to impress the ratepayers with the notion that there is a ring forming to force water taxes on the people whether they will or will not, and that Mr. Sawers is the champion who will frustrate their evil designs. No one knows better than "Ratepayer" that this is all clap-trap—all bosh. If "Ratepayer" thought it would serve his purposes better he would suddenly become the strongest friend of the Water Company. He says: "I and other gentlemen connected with the water-works signed Mr. Cox's requisition," but he carefully omitted to include Mr. Hazlitt's name in the list, who was the chief promoter in inducing Mr. Cox to accept the nomination for the civic chair, so that Mr. Hazlitt is manipulating this dreaded and formidable ring. We all know very well what a firm friend (?) Mr. Hazlitt is of the water-works.

I had no knowledge or idea what Mr. Cox's views were in reference to the water-works when I signed the petition, nor do I now know. I know this, however—that when I heard that Mr. Cox was likely to allow himself to be nominated I did not wait until the requisition was brought to me; I hunted it up and was glad to have an opportunity to sign it and be one of his supporters.

I, and hundreds of other citizens, felt grateful to Mr. Cox for coming forward to help the town in its emergency. I did so with no unfriendly feeling towards Mr. Sawers. But there is always a choice. I felt that Mr. Cox could not hurt any ratepayer without hurting himself a good deal. Mr. Cox has good executive ability, sound judgment, an unassuming manner, and will be an honor to the Council and a credit to the town. He will have an influence in the chair which will raise the Council from a beer garden to a deliberative body.

Yours truly,
W. CLUXTON.

Outrageous Attempt to Defame an Honorable Business House.

We notice that a concern in Janesville, Wis., styled "The Publishers' Commercial Union," has been making an effort to smirch the good name of H. P. Hubbard, proprietor of the widely known "International Newspaper Agency" of New Haven, by promulgating false statements concerning his financial and business habits. These statements can in no wise harm Mr. Hubbard where he is personally known, nor can they lessen the esteem of his thousands of correspondents. It is quite possible, however, that he will be annoyed by them, as mischievous and malicious reports from the most insignificant sources are liable to annoy business men whose reputation is most firmly established and most strongly entrenched. It affords us, therefore, a special pleasure in this connection to speak of the six years intimate business relations which THE EVENING POST has sustained with Mr. Hubbard and his Newspaper Agency, during which period we have accepted his orders for nearly fifteen thousand dollars worth of advertising; and to say that no bill of ours against this house has yet remained unpaid for a week after it was rendered. The experience of THE POST with Mr. Hubbard goes uniformly to prove that he is a sharp business man, as he has a right to be, but that he is also a gentleman who invariably performs as he promises, and who pays his bills as often as they are presented. This is the kind of Agencies with which THE POST likes to do business and we have a lingering suspicion that most other newspaper publishers allow their preferences to run in pretty much the same direction.—Hartford Post, Nov. 23, 1883.

A Dictionary and Engraving Free.

It will be seen from the advertisement of the American Agriculturist (N. Y.) elsewhere, that a splendid six-hundred-page Dictionary and superb Engravings, can be obtained free, by everybody. The American Agriculturist, now Forty-Three years old, continues to be the recognized leading Agricultural Journal of the world. Every number contains nearly one hundred columns of original reading matter, and one hundred original Engravings by the leading Rural writers of the county, and by the leading artists. The editorial matter is furnished by such well known writers as George Thurber, Joseph Harris, Wm. Clift, Byron D. Halsted, Prest, Liautard, Prof. Slade, of Harvard University, and Prof. Thompson, Nebraska University, while such well known artists as Edwin Forbes, Wm. M. Cary, and Alfred Trumble get up the original illustrations. During the coming year the paper will devote special attention to house plans for farmers, exposures of humbugs, and information as to the best points in the West for settlers. The circulation of the American Agriculturist is to-day larger than at any period since the organization of the Company publishing it, and it will continue to be, as heretofore the great journal for the farm, Garden, and Household. Price $1.50 a year. English or German.

Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya

"My wife for a number of years has been suffering from Asthma and Disease of the Heart. Her breathing was short and quick, at times causing great apprehension of impending death, and she was greatly prostrate with general debility. At night she was constantly subject to attacks of great difficulty of breathing. the surface of the body becoming cold, and she was apparently lifeless, being restored only by great exertion on the part of attendants. She began taking your medicine about a year ago, and she has not had an attack since, and is in the enjoyment of very comfortable health. I have great reason to be thankful for her extraordinary improvement.

R. W. MUNCASTER'S JEWELLERY STORE

is now the season of the year when people begin to think what y will select for Xmas and New Year's Presents, and again ere they will purchase them. The first consideration of course, important, but the second is, to those who have not as yet dealt th me, by far the more difficult to determine upon, as there are many long-winded Advertisements presented to the public, ich do not realize in effect what the customer has been led to pect from reading descriptions of the quality and size of some cks which are not substantiated by facts. The verdict passed everyone who have satisfied themselves of the reliability of my tements regarding the Quality, Cheapness and Quantity of my ock, I am happy to say, has been without any exception, favor- e. My constituents have found that when I advertised that I d the Best, the Newest, the Cheapest, and in every respect the rgest Stock of Jewellery in Peterborough, I have even exceed- my representations by showing the nicest display in the whole idland District, and by their dealings with me, have discovered at my style of doing business has given them confidence that no article will be misrepresented, which confidence in purchasing such an article as Jewellery the buyer must have. All I want is every person in Town to come in and examine my stock and I think I can satisfy them that I have what I advertise. Also, that I cannot be undersold by any dealer in Town—not one.

My present Stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewellery and Silver Ware, is the largest and best I have ever had, and for Price, Novelty and Reliability is unsurpassed. Among the immense stock will be found a full line of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES at all Prices and makes. GOLD JEWELLERY, in Necklets and Lockets, Watch Chains, Guards and Alberts, Breast Pins and Scarf Pins, Charms, Bracelets, &c. Brooches and Ear-rings set with Diamonds, Garnets, Aqua Marines, Turquoise and Pearls. GOLD RINGS. Ladies Gold Rings mounted with Real Stones, in every conceivable Design. WEDDING RINGS, in all sizes and Prices, at a high standard of Quality. Gold Keeper Rings, in Chased, Engraved and Chased, and Engraved. SILVER JEWELLERY, in all styles of Brooches, Earrings, Lockets, Chains, Necklets, &c.

SILVERWARE! -:- SILVERWARE!

e above line of Goods are being cut so much upon of late that the Quality has become quite a secondary matter with some dealers. Their whole aim is centred presenting a showy and trashy article, which will catch the eye and which will not wear much longer than a good quality of Pewter. Such a quality as that I do t keep at all. I have nothing but the Best Quadruple Plate, made by the leading American Manufacturers, whose reputation is the result of supplying a first-ss article to the public for the last fifty years. The stock of Plated Ware consists of all the Latest Designs in Cruets, Butter Dishes, Card Receivers, Cake Baskets, Pickle Stands, Knives and Forks, Spoons in Tea, Table and Dessert, and Fancy Articles, suitable for Christmas and New Year Presents.

WATCH REPAIRING

is Department is one which is sadly neglected in the average Jewellery Store. The object sought to be attained is to make as much money as possible out of Cus-mers by chargingexhorbitant prices and procuring cheap workmen. My reputation for work has been achieved by always doing GOOD, RELIABLE WORK, and arging a moderate figure for it, so that people leaving Watches with me for Repairs, know that they can rely on all Work leaving my hands. Do not fail to inspect my immense stock before deciding on your purchases. DO NOT FAIL TO REMEMBER THAT Muncaster's Jewellery Store is in Cluxton's Block, George Street, Peterborough.

NORWOOD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

THE ROUND-HOUSE.

As suitable grounds could not be obtained at the Norwood station for the railway round-house and repairing shops, the Ontario & Quebec Railway Company have purchased about thirty acres of ground on Mr. Mathison's farm, about nine miles east of Norwood, in Belmont, for the erection of these buildings. Norwood feels a little disappointed about the location of these buildings; but as the approaches to the station both from the east and west are in no way adapted for lengthened shunting grounds, we cannot expect what it is impossible for us to obtain. In placing the round-house and repairing shops in Belmont the company are consulting their own interests financially and as a matter of convenience to the profitable working of the line. The Belmont station, formerly located about four miles further eastward, has been removed to Mathison's, thus making that place an important station on this line.

MASONIC.

At the regular communication of Norwood Lodge, No. 223, A. F. & A. M., the following brethren were elected officers for the ensuing year:

W. B. Wm. H. Stephenson, re-elected	W. M.
W. B. J. A. Butterfield	S. W.
Bro. J. W. Stevenson	I. W.
Bro. T. Burke, re-elected	Secretary

Bro. D. Wigmore, re-elected	Chaplain

THE PROFIT OF DAIRY STOCK.

According to the Campbellford Herald Mr. James Whitton, of Seymour east, who resides on lot 25 in the 6th concession, is a most successful dairyman, and possesses one of the best dairy herds to be found in central Ontario. The herd numbers nineteen, and their record for the past season as taken from the milk book of the Brae cheese factory, is as follows:

Four days in April	1,757 lbs.
May	13,166 "
June	16,106 "
July	14,925 "
August	13,657 "
September	10,056 "
October	8,015 "
A total of	77,004 lbs

This realises the handsome sum of $747.4 after paying freightage to Belleville and cost of manufacturing. To this may be added the value of the milk used in the family during the season, about $20 more and whey at 40cts. per standard, which was the current price at Brae factory, amounting to $10.30, and there is a total of $777.78 for the nineteen cows, or an average of $40.93 per cow. What farmer with as large a herd can report a larger return, and what business can boast of as large a profit on the amount invested.

HON. ADAM CROOKS INSANE.

That the Hon. Adam Crooks is hopelessly insane was borne out by proceedings at Osgoode Hall on Thursday, when an order was made declaring him a lunatic and appointing R. H. Bethune, Major P. J. Evans and G. W. Dawson a committee to take charge of his person and estate. Mr. Crooks was removed some time ago to a private institution at Hartford, Con., where his condition was examined into and a report returned that he is incurably insane, and has but a few years to live.

MANITOBA'S MURMURS.

The farmers of Manitoba held a convention in Winnipeg last Wednesday. It was a most intelligent and representative gathering, and their grievances are indicated by the following

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

The committee reported in the evening, when the following declaration of rights was unanimously adopted amidst strong expressions of feeling:—Whereas, in view of the present depression in agricultural and commercial industries in the Province of Manitoba, the farmers of the Province have assembled for the purpose of expressing their views upon the causes of the said depression and means of removing the same; and whereas the present and future prosperity of the Province depends both commercially and otherwise upon the successful prosecution of agriculture; and whereas numerous and embarrassing restrictions are placed upon every effort made by settlers to extend their operations and improve their condition; and whereas such restrictions are unjust and unnecessary, and have been continued in defiance of the just rights of Manitoba; and whereas some of the said restrictions consist of the

OPPRESSIVE DUTY ON AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS,

the monopoly of the carrying trade now enjoyed by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and the improper and vexatious methods employed in the administration of the public lands of Manitoba; and whereas the inhabitants of Manitoba are British subjects, and have made their homes here upon representation that they would be allowed all the privileges which, as such subjects, they would elsewhere in Canada be entitled to, and it appears that by the terms of admission of Manitoba into Confederation they should be allowed such rights and privileges; and whereas they are denied such rights, and they find that the representative system of the Province is such that they are practically denied the privilege of securing the redress of their grievances through their representatives in the Provincial or Dominion Parliaments; and whereas a large portion of the public business of the Dominion is wholly connected with Manitoba and the North-West, especially important to the Departments of the Interior, Railways and Public Works, and Immigration; and whereas it is the right of every British subject to call the attention of the constituted authorities to the existence of abuses and wrongs;—therefore, be it resolved, that the Province should insist upon the right of the

LOCAL GOVERNMENT TO CHARTER RAILWAYS,

anywhere in Manitoba free from any interference; that the Province should insist upon the absolute control of her public lands, "including school lands," by the Legislature of the Province, and compensation for the lands sold and used for Federal purposes; that the duty on agricultural implements and building materials be removed, and the Customs tariff on articles entering into daily consumption be greatly modified in the interest of the people of this Province and the North-West; that this Province claims the right of representation in the Federal Cabinet; that it is the duty of the Provincial Government to make such amendments to the Municipal Act as shall empower municipal councils to build or assist in building elevators, grain warehouses, and mills within the limits of such municipalities; that this convention is unanimously of opinion that the Hudson Bay Railway should be constructed with the least possible delay."

After adopting the platform a resolution was brought forward declaring in favour of separation from the Dominion, but found no seconder, and was withdrawn. A committee was appointed to consider and report on the best means of securing the objects set forth in the platform. The meeting adjourned till the next day.

SPRINGVILLE.

(From a Correspondent.)

The social and concert held in the Presbyterian church here on Thursday evening last was a very pleasant success. The refreshments, which were of the first order, were served between five and eight o'clock. The literary and musical part of the concert commenced shortly after eight and was exceedingly fine. The solos and duets of Miss Wells and the Misses Huston sustained their renutation as vocalists, while the solos of Miss Ellsworth were rendered in a very effective manner. Miss Ada Huston promises to be one of our coming vocalists. The selections of Mrs. J. Fowler were also of a high order, and indicated a power of voice and training surpassed by few. The readings and recitations were also good. Miss Edmison and Mr. Strike especially excelled themselves, while the recitation of Miss Laing and the reading of Mr. Smith were well received. The Rev. T. Manning gave a lively and instructive address.

Yours, etc., ONLOOKER.

SMITH.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The tea-meeting held on Tuesday evening of last week in the Baptist church, Communication Line, Smith, was a profitable and pleasant entertainment. The edibles prepared by the ladies were abundant and of an excellent quality, and everything passed off pleasantly and successfully. The proceeds amounted to $190, in addition to the proceeds of an autograph quilt, which netted the neat sum of $19.75. Rev. A. Emric de St. Dalmas, pastor, occupied the chair, and excellent addresses were delivered by Rev. F. Ratcliffe and Rev. E. F. Torrance. Most acceptable readings were given by Miss Ratcliffe and Mr. F. Hill. Music was supplied by the choir, and the vocal duet by Mrs. de St. Dalmas and Miss Jennie Sanderson was most delightful. Altogether the occasion was one of great profit and enjoyment.

CHEESE INDUSTRIES.

Turnbull has been literally over crowding his counters with fresh goods believing that there always will be a steady demand for reliable goods at reasonable prices. Farmers waiting for the first snow to go and buy a big parcel, will be convinced of the good value they can get if they allow the goods to speak for themselves.

OTONABEE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT.

Mr. Geo. K. Mark, teacher S. S. No. 10, Otonabee, gave an entertainment on Friday evening, Dec. 21st. After a very interesting programme, Mr. Mark's pupils presented him with a beautiful book case and the following address:—

DEAR MR. MARK,—We the pupils of this school cannot allow the connection to be severed, that has existed between us for the last eighteen months, without expressing our regret at your removal.

You have filled the responsible situation of teacher in this school with a very great degree of credit to yourself and pleasure to those with whom you have come in contact.

We find that the word, "Farewell," is hard to utter but rest assured that our sincere wishes for your welfare will follow you wherever you go, and as a slight expression of our feelings, we ask your acceptance of this small token, and we trust that you may prize it for the motives that prompted us in giving, rather than for its intrinsic worth, and we all heartily unite in wishing that it may recall to your memory all that is pleasant in connection with your residence here.

Our earnest prayer is that "He who doeth all things well," may guard and protect you, and that when our earthly career is ended, we may, one and all, meet in that better land where parting is unknown.

Signed on behalf of the pupils,

MAGGIE CHAMBERS,
FREDERICK STEWART,
ANNIE SMITHSON.

After an appropriate reply from Mr. Mark the meeting broke up, all returning home well pleased with the evening's performance.

A HALF-BUSHEL BOX.

It is a little difficult to make a box that will hold exactly half a bushel. The books say a box 12 by 11¼ inches square and 8 inches deep will hold half a bushel, but it is too large, a half bushel containing 1,075.2 cubic inches. It is nearer the mark to make the box 12 by 11¼ and 8 inches deep, but that is too large. If made 12 by 11 and 8¼ inches deep, it is nearer still, but a little too small. A cylindrical box 18¼ inches in diameter and 4 inches deep holds just half a bushel.

Ladies who are tired of wearing Wincays for house dresses will find a beautiful line of Dress Goods at Turnbull's only 15 cents a yard.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Pursuant to a judgment of the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, made in a cause, Fitzgerald vs. Fitzgerald, the creditors of Catherine Fitzgerald, late of the Town of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, who died in or about the month of April, 1882, are on or before the 14th day of January, 1884, to send by post, prepaid, to E. B. Edwards, of Peterborough, Solicitor of James William Fitzgerald, the administrator of the deceased, their Christian names and surnames, addresses and descriptions; the full particulars of their claims, a statement of their accounts, and the nature of the securities (if any) held by them; or in default thereof they will be peremptorily excluded from the benefit of the said judgment. Every creditor holding any security is to produce the same before me at my Chambers, at Peterborough, on the 21st day of January, 1884, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, being the time appointed for adjudicating on the claims.

CHANCERY SALE

OF VALUABLE

FARM PROPERTY

DORIS vs. DORIS.

Pursuant to a judgment of the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, made in the above Cause, on the 10th day of November last, there will be sold, with the approbation of C. A. Weller, Esq., Master of the said Court at Peterborough, at his Chambers, in the TOWN OF PETERBOROUGH on Wednesday, the 9th day of January, A.D. 1884.

at the hour of 2 o'clock, p.m., Lot Number 17, in the 10th Concession of the Township of Otonabee, in the County of Peterborough, containing 200 acres.

The property will be sold subject to a reserved bid, and will be first offered in one block, when if no sufficient sum be bid thereby, it will be withdrawn, and then offered in two parcels, each containing 100 acres, and being composed of the north and south halves of said lot respectively.

The soil is a good clay loam, well adapted for agricultural purposes. Each parcel contains about 18 acres of good wood, pumps of hard water convenient to house and stables, two frame barns, size 36x56, stable and shed. The land is well fenced throughout, excepting about 25 acres on the south half. About 25 acres of each parcel is seeded down with clover and timothy.

In addition to the foregoing the north half of said lot has situate thereon a GOOD BRICK COTTAGE, size 30x32, consisting of 4 rooms, cellar and cellar kitchen. There is also a very large quantity of manure on said parcel, which will become the property of the purchaser.

On the south half of the said lot there is also situate a GOOD FRAME HOUSE, 1½ stories high, size 20x30 consisting of 8 rooms and summer kitchen.

The purchaser will be entitled to possession on the first day of March next.

The conditions of sale are as follows:

The purchaser will pay ten per cent of the purchase money at the time of sale, and the balance in 30 days, without interest.

The purchaser may, however, at his option, if the land be sold in block, leave the sum of $6,000 part of the purchase money unpaid, to be secured by mortgage upon said lands, for a term not exceeding 5 years, with interest payable yearly at 7 per cent. per annum. If the land be sold in two parcels the purchaser of each parcel may leave the sum of $3,000 unpaid, to be secured by mortgage as aforesaid.

The purchaser must elect at the time of sale which mode of payment he will adopt.

The other conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of the said Court.

Further information may be obtained on application to R. H. Deanstoun, Esq., Solicitor, Peterborough, or to the undersigned,

C. A. WELLER,
Master at Peterborough.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 27, 1883.

The Departing Year.

Before another issue of the EXAMINER has reached the hands of its readers the year that now is, will have been numbered with the past, and the seal of time set upon a sepulchre from which there can be no awaking. It is a pleasant and agreeable task that remains to us in its dying moments, to offer the customary salutations and compliments of the season to our numerous friends and patrons.

To Canadians generally the past year has been one of fair prosperity, though in business circles the pulse of trade has not throbbed as high as heretofore; but there is the comfort that things might have been as they have in other lands—vastly worse. Individually the year has borne sad as well as welcome changes. While to some it has brought unbroken prosperity, to others it has brought sad change and reverse. In many a household there are vacant chairs; and sweetly sad memories of loving care and infinite thoughtfulness, that made the household a happy home, are all that is left of a living presence dear as life. Yet such dark lines are needed to give shading to the true picture of human life. But the holy Christmas season that crowns the closing year, gives to all who will, a warrant of hope that brings resignation and suggests the thought:

> 'Tis sweet as year by year we lose
> Friends out of sight, in faith to muse
> How grows in Paradise our store.

Though the past year is gone forever, it still may serve us well; its failures, if rightly read, may bring useful lessons of success, and its successes may inspire hope, arouse ambition, and remind us that earnest endeavor and honest industry, as far as human conditions avail, assure an abundant reward. Bearing this in mind, in expressing the hope that the coming year may be to our numerous friends and patrons more happy and prosperous than any previous year has been, we shall, we hope, be permitted to congratulate ourselves on the success and prosperity that have hitherto attended our labors and efforts on their behalf. We have striven steadily and earnestly to supply our ever-increasing circle of readers with an interesting and instructive journal, conducted on fair and honest principles, and advocating constantly the cause of civil and religious liberty, and the progress of reform in the real and proper sense of the word. By means of a number of excellent reporters and local correspondents in numerous districts, we have kept our readers thoroughly posted on all matters of county importance, and provincial intelligence. On questions pertaining to the welfare, growth, and prosperity of the Dominion and its public affairs we have spoken with no uncertain sound, and we have the satisfaction of knowing that though victory has not yet perched on our banners in the defeat of the Government at Ottawa, the cause to which we have devoted our journal is advancing.

That our course has met with approval and high appreciation we are abundantly satisfied. Never has the EXAMINER received a more hearty and earnest support. The year has been one of progress and advancement beyond our most sanguine anticipations. The EXAMINER has been steadily gaining ground in the confidence and good will of its patrons. This has been evidenced again and again by the numerous letters we have received expressing satisfaction with our course and with the principles and tone which have characterized the paper from the beginning. In returning thanks for the liberal support which has been so warmly accorded by our many friends, the EXAMINER ventures to ask not only a continuance of their assistance and efforts, but also an extension of them if possible. We base this request on the value the paper already possesses as an advertising and news medium, with a wide circulation, and also upon our desire and intention to further improve and extend its usefulness in all respects. During the coming year, we shall use every legitimate effort to maintain the efficiency and usefulness of the EXAMINER, and these endeavors can be ably seconded by our subscribers bringing the journal to the notice of others, patronizing it as the best advertising medium in the county, and also in any other way which may occur to them likely to advance its interests. And now, dear readers, we would add our good wishes to those of all your other friends, and heartily wish you, as we again reiterate our thanks for past favors,

A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

The Mayoralty.

The incumbency of the important office of mayor of a town like Peterborough, involves many special qualifications. Our mayor should be a gentleman worthy of and commanding the respect not only of our own citizens, but also of that of other towns: He should possess administrative and executive ability of the first order. He should realize the responsibility of the office, and possess a personal interest in the wise and economical administration of the affairs of the town. He should have tact, energy, suavity—mildness of manner and energy of action. He should be a man of sufficient business experience, accompanied with the important endorsation of success, to have the confidence of, both his constituents and the Council, over whom he presides. Without this he can have the respect of neither, and his suggestions to the latter, in the interests of the town, will receive scant attention; he will be powerless to exert a proper influence over the deliberations of our representatives, and will degenerate into a mere figure-head, void of influence or respect. He should have a personal character sufficiently high to place him beyond the need of courting popularity by the preaching of flabby demagogueism, or of taking any course merely because it is "popular." He should possess a permanent stake in the town and in its success; he should have no personal interests to serve except as they are connected with those of the town. He should at once be a credit to the office and to a town verging on cityhood.

That Mr. George A. Cox, one of the candidates for the mayoralty, possesses those qualifications as fully, (if not more fully) than any man in town, few will deny, except those deluded by false cries and prejudiced by baseless appeals, and a factious misrepresentation of the true relation of Mr. Cox to the town. For twenty-six years Mr. Cox has been a citizen of Peterboro', and while he has had phenomenal success in business enterprises he has not selfishly kept all the benefits to himself, but the town has continuously been the better of his business operations. What money he has made whether here or elsewhere, he has invested chiefly in a permanent form in Peterborough, thus identifying himself with the interests of the town, with this result, that to-day anything that tends to benefit the town must necessarily benefit himself, and vice versa, whatever injures the town injures him. It is to his personal interest to have the taxation as low as possible. Having property in town representing $300,000, it will be seen that an addition of even one mill to the rate of taxation means an addition of $300 to his taxes. It is to his interest to make Peterborough a cheap place to live in, to make taxes low—anything, in fact, to attract population. Of all Peterborough's prominent and wealthy citizens, it is difficult to name one who has worked harder or more successfully for the promotion of its interests, and for croakers and self-seeking wirepullers to say that if elected Mayor, he would take one step to undo the work of over a quarter of a century's energetic enterprise on behalf of the town, would be the rankest nonsense.

In fact, there is hardly one objection advanced against him as Mayor that will for a moment stand scrutiny. Without a shadow of foundation—in fact, without excuse except that it "will make a good election cry"—is the assertion that he favors the purchase of the waterworks by the town. The very idea is laughably absurd. He doesn't wish to do so, and couldn't if he so desired. No Mayor nor Council has the power to purchase the waterworks without the consent of the ratepayers, and he has no power to force the latter to buy what they do not want to buy. The Consolidated Municipal Act provides (section 346) that "every by-law for raising, on the credit of the municipality, any money not required for its ordinary expenditure, and not payable within the municipal year" shall receive the assent of the ratepayers. Thus that aspect of the waterworks bugbear is disposed of, and another that has been mooted is equally harmless. Mr. Cox is pledged to no course, to no party, to no clique, to no corporation. He has no particular friendship for the waterworks. The dividends declared by the company do not appeal very strongly to his shrewdness as an investor. He has no cause to seek to benefit that company at the expense of the town, and consequently at his own expense. This is shown by the fact that Mr. T. G. Hazlitt, one of the foremost and staunchest upholders of the principle that no water rates for local purposes should be paid for by a general rate, was the most active in persuading Mr. Cox to become a candidate for Mayor. If Mr. Cox was in favor of the monstrous injustice of paying for local water rates by a general tax, would Mr. T. G. Hazlitt assist in a scheme in direct opposition to his principles and sympathies?

No; there is not a grain of truth in the implied charges; there is not a tittle of evidence to show that Mr. Cox has the slightest intention of taking any course prejudicial to the interests of the town. There is even no danger of his attempting to fix the burden of a poor-house on the town. When he sees the need of a charitable institution he does not go about wire-pulling and intriguing to secure it at the people's expense; he simply buys a poor-house of his own and presents it to the public. The munificent liberality of Mr. Cox in devoting Moira Hall—equivalent to $11,000—to charitable purposes shows that he is not nearly so likely to burden the ratepayers to provide funds for anything for the public benefit as to put his hand into his pocket to "pay the shot" himself. With him as Mayor there is no danger that public money will be wasted in giving aid to those who do not need it.

As contrasted with that of his opponent, Mr. Cox's influence, to be exerted for the good of the town, is a thousandfold greater. There are two or three matters that will soon require settlement. The railway workshops will be removed from Port Hope, and the Ontario & Quebec workshops will require location. Peterborough is admirably situated in reference to both railways. Can any one doubt that Mr. Cox, with his immense influence and connections, will not be infinitely more likely than Mr. Sawers, an unknown man of third-rate abilities and without influence, to secure these great works, which will add incalculably to the population and financial prosperity of Peterborough? We do not wish to disparage Mr. Sawers; he is a respectable young man, well enough fitted to move in the quiet sphere of private life he has hitherto occupied, but as Mayor of Peterborough he would be a conspicuous failure. And his unfitness for the position is even more pronounced in comparison with his opponent. It is inconceivable that the people of Peterborough can be so blind to their own interests, so forgetful of the dignity and importance of the town, as to elect a man like C. W. Sawers over George A. Cox. In such an event they will make the town the laughing-stock of Ontario; in the other they will have at the head of affairs a Mayor of whom they may be proud—a man whose name is associated at home and abroad with the growth and prosperity of the town, and who as Mayor will work as energetically and successfully for its advancement as he has done as a private citizen.

A Falsehood.

Mr. John Carnegie, during the recent by-elections in Cardwell, Middlesex and Simcoe, finding that the Tories were about to make their last desperate attack on the Mowat stronghold, thrust himself upon the electors of some of these constituencies and plied his game along with the notorious Big Push, the corruptionist Pringle, Boultbee, Mackintosh and other such "politicians." Amongst all these shining lights it was acknowledged that our honest representative had no peer in his line, and that he stood head and shoulders above his Scriptural prototype. In the Mail of the 6th of December is a report of a speech delivered by Mr. Carnegie, which for direct falsehood and unscrupulous misrepresentation is a Koh-i-nor among gems. We have waited for several weeks to see if he would repudiate in his organ the Mail's report of his speech, but he has not done so, and therefore we must assume that his remarks as reported are what he said. Out of a bundle of misstatements we pluck a single sample one, in uttering which he must have known he was uttering a cool, passionless, deliberate untruth. "In Peterborough," he said, "there were the Division Court bailiffs against them," (meaning the Tory party) and to this he makes no exception. We imagine that Mr. Carnegie, in uttering this Tupperism, must have had his mind's eye on Peterborough and its dyed-in-the-wool Tory bailiff or its Tory Division Court clerk, and we can imagine how the howls of applause that burst upon his ears must have seemed to him the triumph of falsehood over truth. We would expect Mr. Carnegie to delude his hearers with sophistries, but that he should resort to deliberate untruth, both expressed and implied, demonstrates how firmly the force of habit enchains the local representative of West Peterborough.

In a recent issue the Review says, "the fact still remains unaltered that Mr. Blake has not been able to snatch a single constituency from Sir John Macdonald since the general elections." The Review editor must have thought he was talking to a Cardwell audience when he deliberately suppressed the fact that Mr. Blake, in the election of Mr. Allison, of Lennox, snatched that constituency from Sir John, a seat that he was elected to by a majority of over 200. The Review, in the sentence quoted, achieved as near an approach to telling the truth as it generally does in dealing with political subjects.

LUCKY BALLYDUFF.

Samuel Murphy, student of the Ont., Veterinary College, is in luck. He purchased ticket No, 1,749, in connection with the Guelph lottery, and a few days ago received a letter from the managers informing him that he had drawn $4,000. Murphy lives about thirty miles north of Port Hope, near Bethany post-office. The man who won the $15,000 prize in the London lottery lives only a mile distant. Previous to the drawing, which gave him a competency, he offered Murphy his ticket for 75 cents, but the latter wouldn't buy. It's to be hoped that the neighborhood of Bethany won't come in for all the lucky numbers.

REQUISITION

To GEO. A. COX, Esq.:

SIR,—

The undersigned ratepayers of the Town of Peterborough, having watched with interest the marked ability with which you have managed the affairs of the Midland Railway, and the success which has attended you in every enterprise with which you have been connected, and recognizing the great benefits which have accrued to the Town through your efforts, now desire to show their appreciation of your services by conferring on you the highest position in the gift of the citizens, and respectfully and urgently request that you will allow yourself to be elected Mayor:—

REPLY.

To WALTER PATERSON, Jr., Esq., And 326 others.

GENTLEMEN,—

I appreciate the honor done me in being presented with a requisition, signed by such a large number of my fellow-townsmen, asking me to allow myself to be nominated as Mayor for the ensuing year.

If I consulted my own feelings I should promptly decline the honor, but I feel that we have arrived at an important crisis in the history of our town, when it is the duty, not only of the Council, but of all citizens interested in the welfare of the town, to do what they can to promote its interests and preserve its credit.

If I can be of any service in this respect, I am prepared, in response to such a large and influential requisition, to place myself at the disposal of the ratepayers. It is not my intention, however, to ask any person for his support, and if I have reason to think that even a respectable minority of the ratepayers are opposed to my election I shall withdraw from the contest.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

CEO. A. COX.

The Manitoba Free Press does not believe in annexation as a remedy for the Province's grievances, but it editorially exclaims: "How long must the country endure being robbed by the tariff, plundered by a monopoly, and insulted by eastern Tories.

J. L. Harris, president of the Moncton, N.B., sugar refinery, is at Ottawa urging that the same duty be imposed on raw sugar as that imposed by the United States, and that the same drawback on exports be granted. He says there are too many refineries in Canada.

A case of attempted poisoning is reported at Limehouse, Halton Co. Two daughters of Mr. Samuel Meredith were very seriously affected by eating an apple, which it is supposed had been dosed with Paris green. There is no direct evidence as to the party who did the poisoning.

The Hamilton Tribune is not in such a bad way as was published by one of its rivals. It seems that some notes which D. B. Chisholm promised to protect had to be taken up by the paper, and embarassed it temporarily, but in a card published Mr. Hawke hopes to have things in shape almost immediately. The paper continues on as ever.

The prizes at the Refuge for Girls, in connection with the Mercer Reformatory, have been distributed, The first was awarded to a girl who made 48 garments in the half year. In all 601 articles of clothing were made. Another prize was given for neat mending, and a third for domestic work.

A deputation from the Women's Christian Temperance Union waited on the public school board of Toronto with a petition signed by 534 ratepayers, asking that temperance text books be introduced into the city public schools. The petition was referred to the committee on school management.

One-Half a Million of Dollars for Postage.

George Stinson & Co., the celebrated art publishers, of Portland, Maine, undoubtedly pay more money for postage stamps than any other firm in the world; for the last five years their postage bill has averaged over two thousand dollars per week, making a grand aggregate of over five hundred and twenty thousand dollars; this is about the three-hundredth part of all postage of every description collected by the United States government during that time, and in this connection it must be borne in mind that the country now has over fifty million souls, and fifty thousand post offices. But the enormous sum paid for postage represents only the cost of sending the light packages, letters and circulars, for heavy packages are sent by express and freight. Messrs. Stinson & Co. publish every description of pictures of the best class, and their trade now extends over the entire world. As an illustration of the fact that their trade reaches the furthermost parts of the earth the following may be interesting: A short time since an order for an assortment of over three thousand large and expensive pictures was received from Tasmania, away down under the South Pole. Not many years ago Tasmania was a penal colony of England, and its population was entirely of convicts and their keepers. Since the removal of the convicts it has become a thrifty colony. This place is so remote that three months are required for an answer to a letter. Tons of pictures are sent to South America by Messrs. Stinson & Co., and West Africa sends to Portland for works of art; they have trade in every quarter of the globe where civilization has gained a foothold. Commencing at the bottom, they have worked their way up to the top, step by step, and thereby, added to the greatest push and enterprise, they have that solid, practical experience that is always necessary to the best results, in all things. They carry in stock millions of pictures, and are at a moment's notice ready to fill a five-cent order, or one for thousands of dollars. They employ some five hundred artists, clerks, and workmen; their machinery and appointments are on a magnificent scale, and a trade of ten thousand dollars a day, on an average, are required to keep them moving in full blast. Their assortment of steel plates is especially fine, and ranks very high in artistic merit; many thousands of dollars are often spent on a single plate. They appreciate the value of printer's ink, and know how to use it to the best advantage; therefore they advertise largely and liberally in the newspapers. Newspaper advertising was an important factor in laying the sound foundation of their great success, and without it they state that it would have been utterly impossible for them to have reached their present position.

Stinson & Co. are a striking illustration of what can be accomplished by energy, industry, and good judgment. There is "room at the top"—all honor to those who fight their way up. This firm believes in standard goods and low prices, and on that principle their business is conducted. American homes should be made beautiful by refined and meritorious works of art; no one has any excuse for not adding to their homes the charms of pictures, for fine works of art are within the reach of all.

The first Canadian Grand Legion of Honor was organized at Hamilton on Wednesday night.

For the first time the Virginia Legislature rejected a bill to remove the disabilities of certain persons convicted of violating the duelling laws.

THE NEW RAILWAY TICKET.

A new railway ticket coming into use now-a-days works in this wise: A passenger buys a fifty mile, a hundred mile, or a five hundred mile ticket made up in a little book with a perforated section for each mile. Each of these little sections is good for a mile in any direction or on any part of the road. For instance: if you bought a five hundred mile ticket on the Grand Trunk at Toronto, you could go to Hamilton and give up forty miles, then to Guelph and give up thirty-five miles. The balance of the ticket would then be good to go over the Midland, or to go east, or in any direction whatever, and it would be good till used. The rate of mile is thereby fixed, and you need never be at a loss to know what it costs to travel between two known points.

We are glad to hear that the Canadian Pacific Railway are contemplating the introduction of this system—have in fact decided on it, and that before long it will be in use on the main line and on the Ontario and Quebec division.

The Grand Trunk too are in favor of it, but do not expect to adopt it before January 1st, 1885. The saving to the railroads and the convenience to the public therefrom would be almost incalculable.

Naught but Death Divorces;

OR,

LADY AUDREY'S SACRIFICE.

The opportunity was not long in coming. At the back of Medina Villas was an inclosed piece of ground called the Square Garden. It was very prettily arranged, with seats and garden chairs under the shade of the trees, and a green lawn in the middle for the children to play upon. Admission to the Square Garden was a patent of respectability in Rookdene; it was granted only to the inhabitants of Medina Villas and Trinity Square. Outsiders looked on with envy—certainly possession of those shady walks and beautiful flowers was to be envied. More than once Audrey had seen a tall, graceful figure walking there—always alone—always, even when the sun shone brightest, with veiled face. She watched the stranger day after day. She spoke to no one; no one spoke to her; children avoided her; she never had a book with her; she sat, hour after hour, watching the tide, watching the swaying branches, her hands lying listlessly on her lap. She seemed so lonely, so sad, that Audrey's kind heart ached for her.

One morning Audrey, looking into the Square Garden, saw the tall dark figure and the trailing dress and the veiled face—not seated this time, but pacing restlessly up and down the long walk. Audrey knew that walk so well; she remembered hours when the fever of unrest would have killed her if she had not walked till it was quelled. Up and down the long path paced the stranger, never looking to the right or the left, never stopping for rest, a kind of madness born of the violence of repressed emotion evidently possessing her.

She never saw Audrey watching her with kindly eyes, she never saw the group of children at play, she never heard the song of the birds nor the distant murmur of the waves; restless, passionate anguish, sullen, fierce despair, it was plain, held her in bondage.

Suddenly a little paper kite came fluttering over the trees. A rosy, happy, laughing boy preceded it with shouts of joy. Audrey looked at him with a smile; the tall figure walked on quickly.

"Look at my kite!" shouted the child. "How high it is in the air! Oh, look Mabel—look, Maud!"

A chorus of happy cries followed, and then the hapless kite fluttered and fluttered until it fell upon the veiled head of the tall lady.

"Oh, my kite!" cried the boy in despair.

Audrey hurried to the rescue.

"Will you let me remove it?" she said to the stranger.

The lady, startled by the sweet voice, stopped, and Audrey disentangled the kite and gave it to the boy.

"Thank you," said the stranger—and her voice was as sweet and gentle as Audrey's own.

She had been compelled to raise her veil, so that the kite might be disentangled, and Audrey saw a face that startled her, it was so full of passionate anguish and sorrow, so full of tragic despair.

Here was the chance she had longed for. Audrey was quick to embrace it. She said something about the beauty of the day, and the lady replied.

Then, with the sweet smile that had always made her one of the most attractive of women, Audrey said:

"I am very grateful to that little kite; it has rendered me a great service. I have been longing to speak to you, and it has given me the opportunity." Then, before the lady had time to turn away, she said quickly, "Let me introduce myself to you. I am a neighbor of yours. My name is Brooke—Miss Brooke. I live next door to you."

The sad eyes looked wistfully at her.

"Why should you wish to know me?" she asked.

"Because—pray do not be offended—your appearance interests me. You are too young to be sad."

"Young? Alas that any one should call me young!" cried the lady, her lips trembling. "Young! Why, it seems to me that I have lived here twenty years!"

"You have had great sorrows?" interrogated Audrey.

"Sorrow?" she repeated, with a bitter little laugh. "That is a weak word."

"I wish you would let me be your friend," said Audry—"I would gladly help you."

"My friend? I cannot—I can have no friend."

"Yes," said Audry, calmly, "you can have one—that is myself. Do not say 'No;' think the matter over. If after a few days you do not like me I will never trouble you again; but I think you will if you try."

The bright, beautiful eyes looked fearlessly into her face.

"It would be quite useless," she told her, "for me to make any friends; I am dying."

"Dying! Of what?" asked Audrey.

"I am dying of a disease that few people believe in," she answered. "Six years ago I should have laughed at it myself. I am dying of a broken heart."

Looking at her, Audrey felt inclined to believe it. There was a little flush on the lovely face—a light that was unearthly in the bright dark eyes. There was a strange, worn, tired look that struck her with keenest pain.

"A broken heart," said Audrey slowly and sadly—"that must be terrible. One must suffer much before that comes."

"I have suffered from pride—from love—from shame—from neglect; I have been driven mad by cruelty."

A flame like fire shone in her eyes as she uttered the words, and Audrey, taking the trembling hands, held them tightly clasped in her own.

"Has no one ever taught you," she said, "that there is a refuge in all distress—a comfort in all trouble—a hope when all other hope seems lost?"

"No; no one," she replied.

"Believe me, there is. No sin, no sorrow, can be too great, no heart too crushed, no soul too sad for this hope. If you could raise your eyes to it—a bright, shining light all fair and gracious—earth with its sins and sorrows would be far from you; you would forget everything in its loveliness, and it would draw your love and sorrow all to itself."

"Not mine," she said, with a bitter sigh. "You think you are talking to some one as good as yourself; you do not know me."

"Nor do you know me. That matters little. You are sad and sorrowful. I wish to comfort you—to show you light in the darkness—to tell you that he who has lost this world has lost but little, but that he who loses Heaven loses all. If you have lost all the world, Heaven remains."

"I know nothing about Heaven," was the moody reply. "It is the place for good people—not for me."

"For good people, yes; but there are two kinds of brightness there—the radiance of the innocent who have never sinned, and the brightness of those who, having sinned, have repented exceedingly."

"No one has ever talked to me in this way before. Who are you?" said the stranger.

"My name is Audrey Brooke," was the smiling answer; and then, seeing that her words had gone home, the rector's daughter would not mar their effect by repetition. With the tact that never failed her she changed the conversation.

"My name," said the strange lady, "is—Mrs. Dighton." Her face flushed hotly as she spoke, and then the color faded, leaving it marble-white. "My—my husband was in the army," she added, "now I am alone. I have been staying here some time." Then the white lips quivered. Nothing but kindly pity shone in the face of Audrey Brooke.

"You will let me join you sometimes when you are in the Square Garden, Mrs. Dighton?" she said gently; and she did not know until she uttered the name how great was her dislike and repugnance to it. Why had Elodie ever taken that name? The stranger looked up in wonder when she detected the hesitation in the sweet voice; no idea came to her of what had caused it.

"It is not good for one to be so entirely alone," continued Audrey; "it will cheer both you and me if you will let me join you here sometimes."

As she was speaking the boy with the kite ran up to them and held up his little face for a kiss. Audrey bent down with a few laughing words and kissed him." Elodie drew back with a shudder.

"I do not like children," she said quickly.

"Nay," returned Audrey, "I am sure that cannot be true. You have not the face of one who dislikes children."

"I would rather not kiss one," said Eloide hastily; and the child, chilled by the tone and words, ran away.

Mrs. Dighton did not hold out her hand in farewell, leaving Audrey perplexed as to whether she had pleased her.

"I must persist until I succeed," she thought. Constant dropping wears away the stone. I will care for her and talk to her until I wear away her reserve and make her love me."

She kept to her resolution. There were times when Mrs. Dighton turned from her with a gesture which meant that she could not speak, and then Audrey would walk on patiently, never feeling in the least hurt or offended.

One day she saw her with her face quite unveiled, and its marvelous beauty struck her with wonder; the low white brow, the golden hair, the dark gray eyes, and the perfect mouth pleased her.

It was a good face, although poor Elodie had gone so painfully wrong. It looked like the face of one easily influenced, easily persuaded, but not willfully wicked.

As Audrey gazed at her the words which came into her mind were the old ones of the sword wearing out the scabbard; the fret and torment of the soul were evidently wearing out Elodie's fragile body.

She was so thin, so worn, so shadowy. "She must have been exquisitively beautiful a short time since," thought Audrey; "no wonder Roche loved her—no wonder Roche loved her—no wonder the loss of her made him bitter and proud and hard."

Then she wondered again, as she had wondered a hundred times, how any one could leave Roche, who was still her chief among men.

CHAPTER XIII.

A month had passed since that first meeting in the Square Garden. For several days Audrey had seen nothing of Mrs. Dighton; she was not much surprised, therefore, when Mrs. Dalton told her that the lady next door was very ill.

"They call it low fever," said the little landlady, "but I know it is the heat of the weather that is affecting her. This heat would kill any one."

"I must go and see her," thought Audrey; "now is my opportunity."

She sent to ask if she might call upon her. The first answer was "No."

Then she sent in a basket of fruit and flowers, asking if she might visit her for only five minutes; the answer was—if she pleased.

Audrey soon found herself in Elodie's little drawing-room. The window was wide open, and a little couch was drawn near to it.

On it lay Elodie. She looked terribly ill. Audrey hastened to her. She waited for no words of greeting, but, bending down by the little couch, she kissed the lovely face.

"Why did you not let me come before?" she said. "I have been longing to be with you."

"I knew that if you came you would stay; you are always so kind to me," re-Elodie.

"Why should I not stay?" asked Audrey.

The delicate face flushed, and the gray eyes filled with tears. Elodie's hot hands clasped Audrey's.

"I will tell you," she said. "I should like above all things to have you for my friend—I should think it the greatest blessing that had befallen me; but I cannot deceive you—I must tell you the truth—and when you know it you will not care to be my friend."

"On the contrary, I shall care more than ever," declared Audrey; "there is no story that you can tell me which would make me care less for you, or feel less anxious to be your friend. Put me to the test."

"I wish I could; I should like a friend. Your face is bent so kindly over me, your eyes smile, and your lips say such gentle words; do you know that in all my life no woman's face has ever been so kindly over me! I had no sisters, and my mother died when I was young. No woman's face has ever smiled upon me; and you will turn from me when you hear my story."

"Put me to the test," said Audrey, cheerfully.

The trembling hands clung to her, the white face turned to her, the troubled eyes filled with tears.

"I will tell you all," she responded, "and if you do not turn from me it will be because you are different from others, with a sweet wisdom that I do not understand. I shall watch your face while I am speaking; if it changes, if it turns from me, I shall know that you have condemned me. I am not Mrs. Dighton, I am not even a widow. My husband is still living, but I ran away from him."

The weeping eyes looked eagerly to see if Audrey turned away, but, bending down, the rector's daughter kissed the troubled face.

"You do not hate me then? Oh, Heaven, is there one creature left in the world whom I can call friend? I will tell you all my story," she continued—"it is a sad one. My mother died while I was very young, and no good woman trained me. That was the beginning of evil for me—no good woman trained me, no one ever talked to me of right or wrong. My aunt, Lady Danefield, adopted me; and she had but one idea, and that was that I must make the best use of my beauty and marry the richest man who sought my hand. That was my education, my training—I might also say, my religion. Of self-control, discipline, self sacrifice, I never heard; of religion, as you understand it, I never heard; self, self-indulgence, was the beginning and end of all my teaching. I was both proud and ambitious in those days; I longed for a grand position, for a high place in the world. Ah, me! I had two lovers; one was Captain Archer Dighton, whom I loved very dearly; the other, Sir Roche Villiers. Why do you tremble? Have I startled you?"

"No," said the sweet voice; "go on, dear.

"If I had been left to myself, I should have married Captain Dighton. I loved him very dearly; but he was poor, so poor that it was with difficulty he kept a place in society.

"Sir Roche was rich, wonderfully rich, and my aunt never gave me a moment's peace. But let me give myself all blame. I was proud and ambitious; it would be a grand thing to be Lady Villiers of Rowan. Are you disturbed by my story?"

Again the sweet face bent over her and the soft voice whispered to her to go on.

"I married Sir Roche," said Elodie, "and though I did not love him, I had the greatest possible respect for him. He was good, true, loyal, a gentleman and a scholar. He was good in every sense of the word; if he had a fault, it was that he was proud, and did not easily forgive. He loved me very much.

"Ah, when I think of the wasted treasure of love lavished on me, I know how I have sinned! We were very happy at first; I enjoyed the novelty of wealth and high position. We should have been happy now, but that I met Captain Dighton when Sir Roche took me to town for the season.

"He had just come into possession of a large fortune, and the first thing that he said to me was that it had come too late. Too late—ah me, if I had been wise, if I had been sensible, that one speech would have put me on my guard, and with bitter words I should have dismissed my tempter. I am not going to excuse myself—I have no excuse to offer—but, if I had one true friend, if my husband had been one degree kinder or less proud, my fate would have been different—I should not have done what I did. I will not blame others. I was vain, proud; I disliked control; I would not brook interference.

"Captain Dighton knew all my faults; he played upon them. Sir Roche was kind at first; he saw the captain always with me, and said nothing. I think he was too strictly just, pure, and honorable in himself to suspect the want of such qualities in others. Then people began to talk about us and he grew sterner. He spoke to me several times about Archer Dighton, but I defied him.

"I refused to listen to him; I was insolent in my disdain. I would not be corrected or advised. Archer Dighton encouraged me in all this; he set me against my husband. He told me that every gossip in London was privileged to speak to Sir Roche about his wife; he advised me to resent it.

"He said no woman of any spirit would submit to such a thing. How foolish I was to listen, for all the time I had much affection and respect for my own husband! Things went on from bad to worse. Sir Roche became sterner and prouder; he vexed me, watched me, annoyed me.

"Archer Dighton soothed, flattered, and pleased me. One fatal night we went to a ball at Quorn House. I had no more thought of acting wickedly than you have now; but everything went wrong. Captain Dighton flattered me until I think I must have become mad. There were one or two very unpleasant scenes.

THE SHORTER TARIFF CATECHISM.

ADAPTED TO CANADIAN CONDITIONS.

Question 1.—What is the chief end of a tariff?
Answer—To put money into the pockets of the manufacturers.
2. What is a tariff?
It is a tax.
3. Who pays this tax?
Consumers.
4. Who are the consumers?
All the people, but chiefly the poor.
5. For whose benefit is this tax laid?
For the benefit of the manufacturers.
6. Who are the manufacturers?
Moneyed men and capitalists.
7. Are they a large or a small part of the population?
A small part.
8. Are they the rich, or the poor?
Most generally the rich.
9. How is it that so few persons can put a tax put on so many?
Because, as a general thing, they form corporations.
10. Of whom are corporations generally made up?
Corporations are, for the most part, made up of the rich, for the purpose of making themselves richer.
11. What do such corporations tend to become? Monopolists.
12. What are monopolies?
Monopolies, or rings, are men who combine to fix the price of goods, the rate of wages, and to forestall the market.
13. Isn't forestalling wrong, unlawful?
Yes; forestalling is unlawful.
14. Why don't the law punish such rings, abolish rings, etc.?
Because most persons don't understand that a tariff may become, in our country, a cause of monopolies and rings.
15. Does the tariff protect the labourer, and help to pay off the national debt?
Yes; some of it goes into the Dominion Treasury.
16. Doesn't the whole tariff go into the Treasury?
No; only that which is paid on foreign goods. If the tariff is so high as to shut out all foreign goods, then no tariff money goes into the Dominion Treasury. The higher the tariff the less money the country gets, and the more the manufacturers get.
17. Where does the tariff money go that don't go into the Treasury?
All the money that doesn't go into the Treasury goes into the pockets of the manufacturers.
18. But if the manufacturer gets all this money doesn't he divide it with his employees?
Yes, sometimes he does. The law obliges me to pay the tariff, but it doesn't oblige the manufacturer to divide his profits with the workmen—and he doesn't do it, or the employees would not so often go on the strike.
19. Don't the manufacturers say that they don't want the tariff for themselves, but for their workmen?
Yes; this is what they say, but at the same time they are always talking about reducing the workmen's wages; how is this? And while always talking about the pauper labour of Europe." why are they using every chance to introduce this foreign pauper into the place of the Canadian.
20. Don't the manufacturers want a high tariff for the good of the country?
Yes; we suppose some of them do, but we don't think the manufacturers love the country so much more than the rest of us do.
21. If protectionists don't want a tariff for the good of their workmen, nor because of their greater love of the country, nor for revenue purposes, what do they want it for?
They want it for themselves.
22. What kind of a tax then, is the present protectionists' tariff?
It is a tax on the many for the benefit of the few; it is a tax on the poor for the profit of the rich; it is a partnership between the manufacturer and the Government for the benefit of the manufacturer.
23. Would you have no tariff.
Yes; I would have a constitutional tariff.
24. What is a constitutional tariff?
A constitutional tariff is a tariff for revenue.
25. On what should we lay such a tariff.
We should lay our tariff on luxuries, wines, silks, jewels, etc; on what everybody wants, but nobody must have.

About Us All.

Constipation makes half the people sick. You are dizzy, have bad breath and taste, can't eat, can't sleep well, head aches, nervous, irritable. Can't work it off, can't rest it off. Well your Liver must be invigorated. Your food must digest properly. Now save a doctor's bill with a bottle of ZO-PE-RA. You will be surprised with a few doses. ZOPERA is a positive cure for these troubles, because it acts upon the Stomach and Liver and through the Liver the system and Bowels must be regulated. Ask for a sample. 41-4t

John Bright makes notes and headings of his speeches, and with great care writes down and commits to memory all the important passages. Gladstone merely jots down facts and figures, and for expression trusts entirely to the moment. The late Lord Derby, the "Rupert of Debate," wrote down every word and committed his speeches to memory. In one of his letters he says that all his principal speeches cost him two sleepless nights—one in thinking what he would say, and the other in lamenting that he might have said it better. Thiers was equally precise. O'Connell and Gambetta spoke always on the inspiration of the moment.

Happy Consummation.

COUNTERFEIT BILLS.

Persons handling $5 bills on the Bank of British North America, should remember that their are bad ones of this description still floating about the country. The "Monetary Times" says that it has before referred to counterfeit money of this bank. They may be distinguished from the genuine "" by wanting the exact date of issue, the day of the month being absent. The date given is "July, 1877."

Linlay's Wharf, Aug. 22nd, 1883.

Messrs. Churchhill & Co, Gents,—I have been afflicted with Salt Rheum for the past three years, and have been treated by some of the best doctors in Eastern Ontario without any lasting benefit. I was recommended by Mr. C. J. Lindsay, of Kars, to try your Fountain of Health. After using five bottles of the Fountain and two bottles of your Climax Salve, I belive I am perfectly cured. My general health is also much improved, and I now feel like a new man. Yours truly, ROBT. BURNETT, Engineer Str "Olive," Montreal and Portland Line. 51-2t

MARRIED "IN FUN."

From Flatbush, L. I, come details of a peculiar case. At a sociable entertainment a couple of giddy young creatures were "married in fun" but the girl now claims that it was real. The evidence disclosed that this mock marriage business was very rife, and some of the girls were married half a dozen times. It also seems that the silly creatures when not engaging in a mockery of the marriage service were hugging and kissing indiscriminately, and all this is told in open court as though it were an every-day occurrence. A little common sense would seem to go a long way in Flatbush.

HON. WM. MACDOUGALL AND THE BOUNDARY AWARD.

The jubilation of the Review and other Tory organs over Hon. Wm. Macdougall's utterances is, like many of their arguments founded on misrepresentations. The chief Tory organ wholly misrepresents the utterances of the Hon. Wm. Macdougall on the boundary question. So far from saying that he agreed with Sir John Macdonald that the award was not worth the paper it was written on, Mr. Macdougall expressed the opinion that the boundary adopted by the arbitrators was a just and reasonable one, and that it should have been ratified by the Federal Government. A straight line drawn from the north-west angle of Lake of the Woods to the mouth of the Rupert River was, he said, the legal boundary according to all the evidence that could be obtained, but at the request of Surveyor-General Dennis the arbitrators had adopted the Albany River as the north-western boundary of Ontario—the natural boundary being most convenient—while the difference made in the area of the Province amounts to anythitg:

An End to Bone Scraping.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used, instead three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well. Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c per box by Taylor & McDonald.

A Good-By Supper.

On Thursday last Mr. David Sang, who had charge of the coffer-dam construction, excavations, and pumping in connection with the erection of the O. & Q. Railway bridge, was entertained by his friends at a supper, laid out at the Little Windsor in Ed Brown's best style. The usual toasts and songs followed, and a most pleasant evening was spent, exceeding even the most Sang-uine expectations of its promoters.

St. Andrew's Bazaar.

The bazaar conducted by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society in connection with St. Andrew's Church, in the school rooms, on Thursday evening last was successful and profitable. The articles of use and ornament displayed, furnished chiefly by the ladies of the congregation, were readily disposed of, and the tempting refreshment tables were liberally patronised. The financial outcome was very gratifying.

Traffic Returns.

The traffic of the Midland Railway of Canada for the week ending Dec. 8th, 1883, was as follows:—Passengers and mails, $6,452.20; freight, $12,450.37; total, $18,902.57, as compared with $14,206.73 for the corresponding week of 1882, being an increase of $4,723.84; and the aggregate traffic to date is $1,064,315.78, being an increase of $50,366.07 over 1882. And for the week ending Dec. 14th, 1883, it was as follows:—Passengers and mails, $6,657.12; freight, $11,564.39; total, $18,221.51, as compared with $14,439.98 for the corresponding week of 1882, being an increase of $3,781.53; and the aggregate traffic to date is $1,082,537.29, being an increase of $5,147.60 over 1882.

Christmas Entertainment.

The Christmas festival of St. Luke's Sunday-school took place in the Town Hall, Ashburnham, last Thursday night. The children were first regaled at tea, after which Mr. R. Mead amused them with some clever tricks of sleight of hand, and the magic lantern entertainment immensely delighted the youngsters. After the adults had partaken of tea the Christmas carols were sung, and some entertaining readings and good songs given. The prizes were then distributed, to the number of forty. The school is in a most flourishing condition, and its Christmas festival was a delightfully pleasant gathering.

A very fine assortment of Xmas Cards and Fancy Goods in great variety suitable for Xmas and New Year presents to be seen at Bird's Drug Store, which will be sold cheap for cash. Come early and secure bargains. No trouble to show goods. Bound to make prices right. T. J. Bird. 50-3t

Christmas "Post."

The Christmas edition of the Lindsay Post this season is the best of the series. It is bright and pleasant to behold, well filled with live advertisements and seasonable reading matter. We congratulate the Post on the beauty of its Christmas edition, and its patrons on the excellent advertising medium thus presented for their benefit.

Nonsuch! Washing Compound

Is unlike any of the ordinary crystal preparations in its composition and action. It is the only compound, we believe, that will without any injurious effect thoroughly cleanse all fabrics. Its use dispenses with the great labour and fatigue incident to washing in the ordinary way. It never fails to satisfy. For sale by all grocers. 49-52t

The Christmas Examiner.

We have received at the hands of our exchanges most flattering and complimentary notices of our Christmas supplement, but space forbids an extended publication of them. Its excellence of appearance and value as an advertising medium are highly commended. The public have sought it with avidity, and read it with profit to themselves and advertisers.

Russian and German Felt Boots already at the Wholesale and Retail Establishment of R. Stenson & Son.

A Beautiful Gift.

The Great Rock Island Route has issued a new and most comprehensive Cook Book, of 128 pages, filled with new and reliable receipts from the best caterers of this and other countries. No housewife can afford to be without it; and though worth one dollar, it will be sent to any address, postpaid, upon receipt of ten cents in stamps. As they will go like hot cakes send at once to E. St. John, G. T. & P. A., Chicago, Illinois.

The Siding Dispute.

On Thursday last Street Inspector Johnson ordered three men, John Pillar, John Donnelly, and Daniel Hilliard, in the employ of the Midland Railway, engaged in putting in a siding for Mr. Yelland's coal yard, Brock street, to quit work on the score that they were obstructing the street. On their refusing they were put under arrest and brought before the Police Magistrate. Mr. Poussette appeared for the accused and Mr. Edwards for the town. Several witnesses were examined and decision in the case was reserved till Saturday, when Mr. Dumble fined the three men one dollar and costs each, deciding that the railway company had no right to put in a siding on the street. Of course work on the siding is dropped.

Address to Bishop Jamot.

On the occasion of Bishop Jamot's visit to Lindsay, says the Post, for the celebration of the feast of the Immaculate Conception, and while at Loretto Convent on Sunday, His Lordship was presented with the subjoined address by the young ladies of the Sodality of St. Mary's, accompanied by a beautiful pectoral cross:—

To His Lordship, Right Rev. Dr. Jamot, Bishop of Peterborough:—

May it please your Lordship to accept as an earnest of our undying gratitude and esteem this pectoral cross. Worn on your heart it will speak to you of us and say, therein we wish to be enshrined forever. Glorious emblem of man's redemption, special mark of your pastoral charge. May your Lordship wear it long, bear it valiantly, triumphantly here, and through it attain to glorious crown of immortality hereafter. We subscribe ourselves your Lordship's most devoted children.

The Sodality of the B. V. M.

Bishop Jamot thanked the young ladies for their beautiful present and said he should value it most highly.

Address and Presentation.

On Christmas eve a committee of the Fire Brigade Band called on Mrs. E. Dunford, Rubidge street, and presented her with a beautiful silver ice pitcher, and the following address:—

To Mrs. E. Dunford:

Dear Madam,—The members of the P. F. B. B. being desirous of showing their appreciation of the many courtesies received at your hands, beg to tender you their sincere thanks, and respectfully ask you to accept this gift as a slight token of remembrance by the members of the band.

Wishing you and Mr. Dunford a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year,

We remain, (on behalf of the band),
Sincerely yours,
J. Fraser, Secretary,
J. Hill, President,
E. McCabe, Treasurer.

Mrs. Dunford was agreeably surprised with the handsome present, and wishes to publicly recognise the thankful kindness of the members of the band, that suggested the beautiful present and neat address.

SPANNING THE OTONABEE.

The G. & C. Railway Bridge.

The stonework of that fine example of engineering skill, the Ontario and Quebec railway bridge over the Otonabee River, was recently completed and it is now ready for the iron truss work, which will shortly be put in position by the contractors for the super-structure, the Hamilton Iron Bridge Company; and if this part of the bridge corresponds to the solid and carefully constructed nature of the sub-structure—and it is affirmed that it will—then this bridge will be one of the solidest and strongest structures of its kind in Canada.

THE TOTAL LENGTH of the bridge from bank to bank is six hundred and fifty-two feet seven and one-quarter inches, divided into four clear spans and an embankment or filling. Beginning on the east the first span is one hundred and twenty feet clear and overlies the Ashburnham channel of the river. Next is an embankment two hundred feet in length, consisting of an earth filling sixty feet wide at the base and sixteen at the top.

The abutments in the river are twenty-eight feet in length, twenty-seven in breadth, and rise nineteen feet from the foundations.

The piers, which are built on piling, floored with timber, are forty feet long on the foundations and eight feet in width. They are provided, on their up-stream faces with bush-hammered cut-waters, laid at a batter of forty-five degrees. The lower portion of all piers and abutments, as well as both sides of the embankment, are protected with rip-rap, that is, loose stone, piled in to prevent washing out, etc.

The stone used in the construction of the masonry is limestone from quarries near Warsaw. The courses of masonry vary in depth from one foot three inches to two feet four inches, laid in Portland cement, below water line. The tops of the piers are protected by cap stones six feet in length by two feet in depth, covering the upper end of the pier.

The bridge was built from plans prepared under Mr. Hugh D. Lumsden, chief engineer of the road, and was erected under the superintendence of Mr. J. H. Barber, division engineer, assisted at first by the Doane brothers, and latterly by Mr. W. L. Mackenzie, assistant engineer. The foreman of the mason work was Mr. P. W. Sabiston, who has had considerable experience as a bridge builder, both in Canada and Scotland. Mr. David Sang superintended the erection of the coffer dams, and the pumping operations, as well as the excavation for the foundations of piers and abutments. Mr. W. J. Ross acted as inspector of the erection of the work on behalf of the railway company. Neither expense nor labor has been spared to make the bridge a first-class job, and it is only a sample of the excellence of the ordinary work of Messrs. McDermid & Hendrie, the contractors for the section of road between Norwood and Pontypool, including the bridge. The cost of the bridge as it now stands is in the neighborhood of $36,000.

Turnbull's Grey Cottons are known North, South, East and West of Peterborough for their good value. See what he is offering during January, by the piece.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

CANDIDATES NOMINATED.

The nominations for public school trustees took place on Wednesday last, with the following result:

No. 1 Ward—Geo. B. Sproule, re-elected by acclamation.

No. 2 Ward—John McClelland, nominated by Jas. Stevenson, seconded by R. Roe; R. W. Errett, nominated by W. J. Green, seconded by Thomas Beavis.

No. 3 Ward—Melville Millar, nominated by Adam Hall, seconded by H. B. Merrick; E. B. Wilson, nominated by R. Lund, seconded by John Sawers. [Mr. E. B. Wilson desires us to state that he does not wish the position of Trustee for No. 3 Ward for the ensuing year, and that he is not a candidate. He also wishes to thank his mover and seconder for the honor of the nomination.]

No. 4 Ward—George Hilliard, nominated by D. Gamble, seconded by Dr. Fife; Henry Denne, nominated by John Gamble, seconded by John Sawers.

SEPARATE SCHOOL ELECTIONS.

No. 1 Ward—Noah Laplante, nominated by A. Williams, seconded by I. Guerin; C. Halpin, nominated by J. O'Meara, seconded by J. P. Bryson.

No. 2 Ward—J. O'Meara, nominated by Wm. Ball, seconded by Geo. Ball; T. McGrath, nominated by N. Laplante, seconded by T. Dolan.

No. 3 Ward—M. Quinlan, nominated by J. O'Meara, seconded by R. W. Muncaster. Mr. R. W. Muncaster was nominated, but declined the candidature.

No. 4 Ward—John Garvey was elected by acclamation.

PERSONAL.

We had the pleasure of a call from Mr. Hugh Ross, of Belleville, on Wednesday.

Mr. Hayter, of the Millbrook Messenger, was in town on Friday last and paid us a friendly visit.

The Rev. J. C. Wilson, of Omemee, preached in the George Street Methodist Church in the morning and in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church in the evening, last Sunday.

To-day (Thursday) Mr. Wm. Logan, of Lindsay, the well-known cricketer, takes matrimonial possession of one of Ashburnham's fair citizens, the third daughter of Mr. H. Calcutt. We give our congratulations. Mr. Logan, great cricketer as he is, never made a happier "hit" in his life than in securing so good a young lady to wife.

Good news comes to Hand. Mr. E. H. Hand, editor of the Fenelon Falls Gazette, has come in for the welcome little legacy of $5,000 by the death of a relative in London, Eng. We withhold congratulations till we see what course E. Smiff, of the Independent, takes. He is a rank Communist and believes in an equal distribution of wealth, and may claim his share.

Fresh Dress Goods just received at Turnbull's. Ladies wanting a dress in January, will be able to get a length of any color at a decided bargain.

WHAT THE PEOPLE ARE SAYING.

That Mr. Cox's majority should be over 500.

That first-class men should be chosen for the Council.

That the Peterborough merchants' display of Xmas goods was not equalled outside the cities.

That the Christmas trade would have been better had snow come earlier.

That still it might have been worse.

That the Mayor of Peterborough should be one of the ablest, most dignified, and most respectable men in Peterborough.

CHRISTMAS CHEER

For the Veterans of the "Finality School."

For toothsome and tempting displays for delighting the palates of Christmas gourmands the butchers of Peterborough certainly excel. The excellence and extent of their display, its artistic arrangement and general effect, make the cities look to their laurels. The show of Christmas meats this season was very fine.

MR. JAMES HOWDEN

last Saturday put the cap sheaf on all his former efforts. His stock, while being very large and choice, was arranged with great taste and skill, and the decorations, consisting of flags, evergreens and flowers, greatly heightened the effect. The material of his fine show of meats is as follows: two thoroughbred Devons from Dr. Kincaid's stock farm; one thoroughbred Durham heifer fed specially for the Christmas market by Mr. Joseph Redmond, of Otonabee—fully justifying the reputation of the feeder; one heifer, fed by Mr. Sisson, of Cavan—higher praise is needless; two heifers from Mr. Geo Hookey, of North Monaghan, fed from calves for the Christmas of 1883; one thoroughbred heifer, 672 days old, reared by Mr. Kennedy, of South Monaghan, and fit for the teeth of a prince. Two fine heifers purchased from Mr. Johnston, of North Smith, and fed expressly for holiday meat; two heifers fed by Mr. Howden, himself; and the appearance of the juicy masses of marbled beef shows that he didn't spare the corn. These beauties took first and second prizes at county shows. Besides, there was one calf bred by Mr. A. Stewart, of Otonabee, as well as lambs, pork, poultry, spiced meats of all kinds and, in fine, everything of the best that could tempt the appetite. His display was, throughout, a most superior one.

MR. HARRY WINCH,

the artistic meat merchant, of course, was out with a fine display, beautifully arranged and decorated. The "raw material of his meats were supplied as follows: one thoroughbred Durham heifer by Mr. Edward Sutton, of Cavan, weighing 1076 lbs.,; a steer and heifer fed and bred by Mr. R. Moloney, of Douro; one heifer, supplied by Mr. Wm. Armstrong, of Otonabee; one heifer fed by Mr. John Moloney, Warden of the county, a fine proof of his stock feeding knowledge; two heifers fed "to order" by Mr. Winch himself—and, of course, fed right. In addition a fine supply of lambs from the farms of Messrs. E. Bulmer and J. Davidson, Smith, Geo. Wilson, Cavan, R. Moloney, Douro; etc. His display challenged admiration and thronged his stalls with customers.

MR. ARTHUR WHITE,

corner of Aylmer and Simcoe streets, made a very creditable display. His stock consisted of six excellent animals supplied thus: two heifers, by Mr. Robert Dunlap, North Monaghan; one heifer by Mr. Wm. Jackson, Emily; one cow, Mr. S. Carver, North Monaghan, and two cows fed with extra skill and care by Mr. White, himself, expressly for the Christmas shambles. Besides these he had a good display of lamb, mutton, pork, etc., and he drove a roaring trade last Saturday.

MR. R. WAINWRIGHT

had a most extensive and excellent stock of Christmas meats, of the primest quality. Owing to his absence when our reporter called, we cannot give the names (which are well worthy of record) of the gentlemen who supplied the animals. His stock was full and first-class.

MR. WM. DENOON,

Hunter street, had a good display, which, though not so large in number as others, was well up in quality. His stock consisted of one heifer and steer fed by Mr. Thos. Young, of Smith; one heifer fed by Mr. Daniel Roseborough, of Smith, as well as lambs, pork, etc., etc., altogether a fine chance for his customers to secure first-class meats.

TWO MURDERS IN TWENTY-FOUR HOURS.

On Friday night last an old woman 70 years of age, Susie Gibbs, a peddler, was murdered in her hut at the Humber, near Toronto. Money was the object, as the old woman was a miser, and had amassed large sums of money. No clue and no arrests.

On Friday night in Belleville Peter Lazier, while a guest at Gilbert Jones' house, was shot dead. Burglars had entered the house, and Mr. Lazier, whose home is in Picton, rushed from his room and closed with one of them, who shot him through the heart. Three men have been arrested on strong suspicion.

Messrs. Wm. Davis & Son, contractors, for a section of the Lachine canal, have entirely completed their work and disbanded the force of men in their employ. The total expenditure on the work was something like $1,500,000.

FANCY AND STAPLE DRY GOODS

FOR ONE MONTH

At THOMAS KELLY'S,

CORNER OF SIMCOE AND GEORGE STREETS.

We respectfully direct attention to the above announcement, and have to say that in consequence of the general appearance of trade, the near approach of a seemingly dull winter, and the fact of having an enormous stock—ONE OF THE LARGEST AND BEST IN THE TOWN—we have determined to commence a Great Bona-fide Cheap Sale

ON SATURDAY NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR ONE MONTH

Surplus Stock will not be carried over, no matter what the sacrifice. The prices will tell, and the goods will move out quickly as they must be sold. In order to make this Sale a GRAND SUCCESS, we have decided to make the reductions on the whole stock. The Reductions will be general, and not confined to a few leading articles. BARGAINS IN SILKS. BARGAINS IN DRESS GOODS. BARGAINS IN HOSIERY and GLOVES. BARGAINS IN UNDERCLOTHING. BARGAINS IN BLANKETS. BARGAINS IN LINENS and SHEETINGS. BARGAINS IN COTTONS. BARGAINS IN PRINTS. BARGAINS IN TWEEDS and CLOTHS.

BARGAINS in Every Line, and ONE PRICE to All!

Other dealers have asked us to postpone our annual sale this year until after the usual holiday trade was over, so as not to spoil their profits. Profits or no profits, the sale must go on. The people must have a benefit. ☞Parties Buying by the Piece Liberally Dealt with. These Goods are not shop worn nor bankrupt stock, but this season's purchases. We have too many and must unload. The Superior Quality of our goods together with the prices at which they are sold are inducements of especial interest to every buyer.

The Paris Mob's Blunder.

King Alfonso was hissed and hooted at in the streets of Paris recently, not because he was a Spanish king, but because he was a German colonel. The mob that jeered him and hustled his escort represent a very small proportion of the Paris population, but nevertheless constitute a dangerous minority, whose acts of late have become unpleasantly prominent. The forbearance of the authorities towards this rabble was probably due to their unwillingness to shed French blood in protection of a Foreign king. The insult in other times might have been followed by sharp reprisals, but the Spain of to-day is too weak by herself to resent the offence to her king, and must perforce pocket the affront with, if not a smiling face, one not expressing the passions that rankle in her heart.

King Alfonso says that during his recent visit to Germany he did not commit the kingdom in any way, that he has entered into no new alliances, and that he still retains the friendly feeling towards France which one Latin nation should feel for another. However this may be, his acceptance of the honorary command of a German regiment has necessarily no political significance. Such commands are frequently conferred on sovereign princes in continental European armies. The Prince of Wales is, we believe, honorary Colonel of a German regiment. The King of Italy commands an Austrian regiment. The Emperor of Germany is an honorary colonel in the Austrian service, and Francis Joseph has a regiment in the German army. These commands are purely honorary,

The Royal colonels, except on the occasion of a first and formal inspection, probably never see their regiments, the duty of which is carried on by the actual commanding officer precisely as if he had no princely superior. The regiment frequently comes in for a good thing in the shape of a special uniform or badge, as a token of the supposed interest its honorary colonel takes in the corps. The Duke of Wellington was a marshal in almost every European service, and had titles of military dignity in and from the countries where he had served. During the war of 1866, it is related, the Austrian regiment "King of Prussia," was directly opposed to the Prussian regiment "Emperor of Austria," and fought none the less fiercely for all that.

The regiment of Uhlans, of which Alfonso has accepted the command, may never see their royal colonel, more especially as out of regard to French susceptibilities he waived the usual inspection, but it will enjoy a certain distinction in the service, and possibly more substantial advantages. Meanwhile the French mob have angered Spain and offended Bismarck. France has not acted in an over-friendly way towards her neighbor beyond the Pyrenees heretofore, and Bismarck and Alfonso may bide their time, nursing a wrath which may burst out when least expected, to the disadvantage of France.

Sowing the Tares.

"Father," said a fashionable young lady, "am I a member of the church?"

"Yes, my daughter," her father replied, "you are a member of the church. I initiated you by naving you baptized in infancy."

"But, father," she answered, "I have no piety, never was converted, and I do not think I ought to be a church member."

"The wheat and tares are to grow together, our Lord tells us in the parable, and you are a tare, I fear, my daughter—only a tare," replied her father.

"But didn't you say that you initiated me?" she asked.

"Yes," he said, "I initiated you in your infancy. But why do you ask?"

"Because," she answered slowly, "the Bible says that the one who sowed the tares was the devil." The old man groaned, walked the floor, and made no reply.

Science.

—It is said that glass is gradually beginning to take the place of wood and iron in the construction of bridges in England. The inventor makes blocks of glass, which he hardens by a special process. In solidity it is said to leave nothing to be desired. The experiments already made have given surprising results, and the cost is below that of bridges of wood or iron. Moreover, the glass cannot be injured by insects like wood, nor rusted like iron.

The tin ore known as Cassiterite occurs in the Black Hills of Dakota Territory, near a place called Harney. It is contained in a vein or mass of coarse crystaline granite, and is associated with crystals of mica large enough to be of commercial value. Here the tin ore "is disseminated in grains from the size of a mustard seed to the size of peas, and sometimes an inch in diameter, These grains are irregular in form. No perfect crystals have yet been found. They can be easily separated from the mica by crushing and washing. The ore appears to be very clean." The short paper from which we gather these facts is contributed by William P. Blake to the American Journal of Science, but it contains no statement of the extent of this Dakota tin deposit.

To illustrate the great dryness to which the plains of the Pampas are subject, in South America, east of the Andes, and between latitude 20 and 30 degrees south, Professor Arnold Guyot, in a paper read before the National Academy of Sciences, mentions the gran seco, or great drought of nearly three years' duration which occurred in the present century, and "is still remembered as having cost the lives of millions of cattle, which came to die along the few river courses which had retained some water." Their bones accumulated in the places where they died, just as fossil remains of creatures of an earlier geological age are found on these same great plains.

—When a bummer has spent his last cent at a certain Chicago bar, and proposes the opening of a running account, he is informed that it can't be done. But if he prefers warmth inside to outside, his coat, vest, or hat will be purchased, and payment made in drink. The dicker stops only at his trousers and shirt. The stock thus obtained is put on sale in a second-hand clothing branch of the establishment. A man may here literally drink the clothes off his back.

ENSNARED.

Deep in the vast primeval wood,
My half-decaying cabin stood.
Its walls were weary, and its floor
With stain and mould was darkened o'er.
Therein I dwelt, aloof from care,
Alone with fancies sweet and rare.

Long after dawn I lay in bed,
And heard the woodpecker overhead
Beat on the roof his rattling call,
And hear the wild-waves rise and fall,
Whilst from afar, worn keen and thin,
Faint memories of the world came in.

At noon the wood was strangely still:
No fluttering wing, no tapping bill;
Shadow and sunshine side by side
Drowned in him aisles vistas wide;
Even the brook's voice, rich and full,
Seemed slowly lapsing to a lull.

When night came on, the owl came too;
"Hoo-hoo, hee-hee, hoo-hee-oo-oo!"
And sly faint footfalls, here and there,
Betrayed the hesitating hare;
Whilst in the tree-top, dark and deep,
The wind sighed as a child asleep.

Day-time or night-time, all was well;
With light and dew God's blessing fell.
For coarser dreams I had no room.
My heart was like a lily bloom,
And every song I sang was sweet,
As the blue violets at my feet.

But at the last, all unaware,
Unlucky bird! I touched the snare.
And (in the city's meshes wound)
My cabin never more I found,
Nor that sweet solitude where naught,
Save nature, helped me when I wrought.

Mrs. Mary A. Dailey, of Tunkhannock, Pa, was afflicted for six years with Asthma and Bronchitis, during which time the best physicians could give no relief. Her life was despaired of, until in last October she procured a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, when immediate relief was felt, and by continuing its use for a short time she was completely cured, gaining in flesh 50 lbs in a few months. Free Trial Bottles of this certain cure of all Throat and Lung Diseases at Taylor & Macdonald's Drug Store. Large bottles $1,00. 51-2t

The Cork police are closely watching Scrab, Nally and others suspected of attempting to tamper with crown witnesses at the trial of the county Mayo conspirators.

Yes, Sir.

One can't expect to succeed in business or in pleasure either, for that matter, unless one feels all right in health and spirits. This is the first consideration. Now, it as a small matter when this remedy, ZO-PE-SA, is recommended so highly, even guaranteed to renew one's energy and spirits by invigorating the Liver and aiding Digestion, by clearing the Brain, opening the pores of the skin, regulating the Bowels and system, to go to the drug store and get a single bottle of Zopesa as a trial. It is a duty every one owes to himself. Try a bottle then. 41-4t

Messrs. Churchill & Co, Dear Sirs,—I have been troubled with Piles for the last five years, and during that time I have taking medicine from five doctors which failed to effect a cure. I have used only one box of your Climax Eye Salve, which I purchased frrom W. F. Ritchie, of Osgoode Station, and can recommend it as a safe cure to all afflicted with the same disease. I consider your Fountain of Health an excellent tonic to build up the system.

Yours truly,

CONFIDENTIAL.

Thousands of young Men and Women—married and single—through the effects of vicious youthful habits, or excessive indulgence in later years, have so undermined their general systems as to induce almost every other disease, and the real cause of these troubles being scarcely ever suspected, they are drugged and doctored for everything but the right one. The ordinary modes of treating troubles of this nature do no good. The JERUBEBIN COMBINATION REMEDY is offered as A Speedy and Certain Cure, as hundreds afflicted with every form of disease have been restored to complete health by its use, after all other remedies failed. This remedy is adapted to every condition of nervous debility and weakness in either sex, but especially in cases arising from imprudence. Its recuperative powers are truly astonishing, and its continued use for a short time changes the languid, debilitated condition, to one of renewed life and vigor.

Forwarded to any address, on receipt of Price, $2 per package—sufficient for one month's treatment.

A CRANK COLLECTING HAIRPINS.

The Simple Theft Sometimes Seems Feeble-Minded Men.

"Do you see that young man following the young lady?" said a gentleman to the reporter just as night was preparing to drop her dusky mantle down and pin it with a star last evening.

"A masher?"

"No, not so bad as that."

"What then?"

"A crank."

"What breed?"

"A very common one just at this time. He's a hairpin crank."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, simply what I said. It's a new craze that has struck all in a heap those peculiarly rattle-pated individuals who have been wont to burn the midnight lamp composing a sonnet to my mistress' eyebrows. As the small boy used to gather postage stamps and the wee girl fill up her button-string, so do those tender-hearted youths collect hairpins. They watch the ladies as they pass along the streets, at parties, balls, and in stores on shopping excursions, and when a hair-pin works loose and falls to the ground or floor it is quickly picked up, the lady's name discovered if possible, and the hairpin, properly labelled therewith, goes to swell the collection. The holder of the hairpin collectors will succeed in picking a loose one from a lady's back hair without her knowing it. I was invited the other evening to inspect a collection of these relics of beauty gathered together by a seventh ward young man. He had nearly 300 of them, and they all bore the name of the charming wearers, including all the changes of fore and aft on the name Smith, from Arabella to Zola, and from plain Smith to Schmidt and Smyth. One of the pins, my delectable companion informed me, was from the head of one of the leading society belles of the city, and cost him $5 to secure it, a rival collector having obtained the precious trophy and sold out to him."

"What do they do with them?"

"The same as the boy did with his postage stamps, or the girl with her button strings—keep them to look at and admire. The craze has just struck the West. It originated among the dudes of Boston about a year ago, and has just arrived. In all probability it will die out in a single season, as it seems too foolish to endure long."—Milwaukee Journal.

THE BOTTLE MAN.

A Professional's Views of Walking Advertisements.

The gilded neck of a contrivance fashioned in the similitude of a champagne bottle towered above the heads of the throng in Sixth-avenue. A pair of legs protruded from the bottom. Half way up, on the side which faced in the direction of its progress, was a small opening with a grating across it. Stepping alongside, the reporter rapped near the grating.

"Who's there?" came a challenge in hollow tones from within.

The response, "A friend," suggested itself, and was spoken.

"What do you want?" said the voice.

"Want to ask you how you like this thing."

The bottle became communicative, and as it toddled up the avenue, the voice said:

"It all depends upon the weather. A man as understands the business will accommodate himself to the seasons. He will tote a banner, or maybe carry a lettered umbrella or wear a painted linen duster during the heated term, take to boards when the season of raw north-east winds come on, and go into a bottle for the winter. Boards is better than banners in cold weather. The wind always blows up or down the street, so a feller is pretty well protected most of the time. When he comes to a crossing, if he finds the wind whistling across pretty sharp, he can walk edgeways and protect himself. But in right down cold weather a bottle is as much better than boards as a double-breasted overcoat is better than a liver pad.

"Then again, in hot weather no man as knows himself will go into a bottle, without he happens to be a chap as has seen a great deal better days, and don't want to be recognized by his friends. Take a ward politician in reduced circumstances, for instance—he don't want to be seen carrying a banner or between boards; so he is glad enough to go into a bottle for the heated term. There is once and a while a chap as has reasons for sort o' keepin out of view, you know, and he is ready for a bottle any time in the year. I ain't tellin' no names, but I knew a party what kept away from the police for a month or more, till they got off his track, by doing the bottle act. He used to toddle along the avenue right by the side of the detectives who was looking for him. He wasn't any of your poverty stricken sort, but lived like a fighting-cock—carried a bottle of the best old stuff in his coat pocket, lunched on boned sardines when he was loafing along, and smoked real Havanas. The smoke? Oh that was all right. He blew it out of the bottom, and, if anybody saw it, they thought it just curled up from the cigar of somebody else who was passing."

HUMOROUS.

—In the literary way—The man who bothers the book editor with his alleged poetry.

—Captain Mayne Reid is dead; which reminds us that his books were our main read during boyhood's sunny hours.

—"No," said Bass; "I can't afford to pay you anything to tell my fortune. When I find the fortune I guess I shall be able to tell it without your help, thank you." He probably will.

—The metrical system is sensible and convenient, but it will never find favor in this country. The idea has become rooted in the public mind that it is something akin to the gas metre, and the public does n't sigh for it.

—"How do I succeed?" asked Screwem; "why, I attend strictly to business. I don't let sentimental considerations interfere with it. I put my whole soul in my work." "But that was some time ago," replied Fogg; "at least, it is a long time since you had any soul to put into anything."

JANE JR.

Jane Jr., has hair like wheat—
Golden in its color.
Only of the two like wheat
Is by far the duller.

Eyes as brown as nuts that fall
In late October;
Full of dewy purling thrills,
Temper in the ember.

Lips that sometimes make you deaf
All the time like tasting;
So much sweetness seems a sin
To be idly wasting.

Hands—such handy little hands.
Dimples deep and ruddy—
Just the kind of hands you know
For a lifetime study.

When the years come to the line,
When the sun is setting,
When the dew is falling soft,
Grass and daisies wetting—

Jane Jr., stands beside the bars,
And I stand beside her,
Feeling that I'd like to share
All that may betide her.

Share the bad and better things.
Share her sweets and honey,
Share her nps and share her downs,
Share the old man's money.

Little lumps, fast in my throat,
Please to skip and let me
Tell my love of all my love
That has long beset me.

O ye gods! to love's young dream
What a brisk death-rattle!
"Stop that spooning, Nancy Jane
And hurry up the cattle!"

Jane Jr., to the milking speeds,
A dutiful sixteen-year,
While I seek some quiet spot,
Cursing Jane, the senior.

GIVE THE BOYS A TRADE.

Go where you will and you will find youths entering manhood without any equipment for the struggle before them. Tens of thousands of them hope to become merchants when they have no aptitude whatever for commercial affairs and are doomed to lives of bitter toil and grinding poverty. This ought not to be. Every boy in Canada is justly entitled to a trade and he ought to have the chance to master one. Many sons of poor parents and many orphan boys are compelled to forego the inestimable benefits of apprenticeship, and these ought to be assisted by wise philanthropy, but very many more fail to improve the great opportunity of becoming a skilful worker, and so drift into the laboring army to become helpless victims of poverty all their lives. Boys in town and city, learn a trade. It will be your surest and best friend through life. Parents, in whatever else you come short, don't fail to see to this matter. You will be ensuring the happiness and comfort of your sons, the welfare of those who come after them and discharging a solemn duty you owe to society and the country.

DO NOT NEGLECT REGISTRATION.

Notwithstanding the repeated warnings which have been given as to the registration of births, marriages and deaths, people are as heedless as ever, and a large proportion of these events are never chronicled. The matter of registering every birth, marriage and death is the duty of parents, ministers and physicians, and is required by the government in order that a correct return of the vital statistics of the country may be given every year. The government is becoming more particular upon this point, and severe penalties are the result of neglect and indifference. A fine of $20 and costs may be imposed upon every person who neglects to register in each and every case. When a birth occurs, it is the duty of the father to register the same; when a marriage takes place it becomes the duty of the minister; and when a death happens, the attendant physician should convey the particulars to the registrar.

WELL SALTED.

The following little trick, of a farmer, for some farmers are trickly, is related by the Waterloo Review: Last spring Mr. Peter Todd purchased a quantity of butter, (forty 40 packages,) from a prominent merchant in a neighboring village, which the name of is Tecawater. When Mr. Todd inspected the butter he came to the conclusion that all was not right, and turned out four of the packages. Each package contained from seven to eight pounds of pure salt, and each of the balance of the 40 packages contained as much, if not more. To appreciate the full villany of the transaction it must be borne in mind that salt is worth one third of a cent per pound, and buttre is worth seventeen to twenty cents per pound.

PLEASE READ THIS.

The writer is Mr. W. O. Lathen of Plympton, N. S. I commenced coughing and raising blood last spring and consulted two doctors and took their medicines, but obtained no relief. I was greatly alarmed; the more so because all my father's family died of consumption. I am now well. I was cured by Dr. Wilson's Pulmonary Cherry Balsam. Good testimony reply given. There are hundreds like it. In all cases of coughs, colds and throat diseases and lung diseases, including asthma, bronchitis and all their tribe, Dr. Wilson's Pulmonary Cherry Balsam is invaluable.

...This was said almost tearfully, and the ...n hastened to comfort her.

..."Now, Kitty, my darling," he said, ...derly and remorsefully, "don't look ...if you are going to cry; you know I ... not mean anything. I know you ... fond of me, unworthy as I am of you. ...me, cheer up and say good-bye, else ... may be missed."

...A sound, or rather a succession of ...nds, followed these words, which nearly ...w the unfortunate Dick into a frenzy.

..."He's kissed her, by Heaven," he mutter-... the perspiration burst out upon his ...head, despite the cold weather. "Oh, Kitty, Kitty! how could you be so false, so cruelly false? But I must see that brute, come what will," continued Dick, [illegible] his grief in his over-[illegible]

...Thinking in the [illegible] climbed up the incline leading to the hedge, and pulling aside the snow-covered brambles, he peered through just in time to see Kitty—his Kitty—looking, oh, so terribly bewitching in black velvet and swandown, just in the act of tearing herself from the embrace of a good-looking young fellow of about Dick's own age.

Dark thoughts flashed through Dick's mind at that moment. Should he scramble through the hedge, and then and there annihilate his rival; or should he wait until Kitty was out of sight, and then challenge the interloper to a duel?

"Neither," said common sense, coming to his aid at this critical moment—"neither, if you do not wish to be laughed at."

At this moment Kitty looked back, and kissed her hand to the man who stood gazing after her retreating form. He returned the salute, and then turning on his heel walked thoughtfully away in the opposite direction, leaving poor Dick in a state of misery quite impossible to describe.

"Such is life," he soliloquized, as he got down from his rather undignified position; "and just now I was sure enough to think it so much worth the living. Oh, Kitty, Kitty, I never dreamt of such perfidy as this. Farewell, a long farewell to all my hopes, to all my happiness," he went on to himself, pathetically.

Then, suddenly remembering that it was terribly cold, and that he had better be making good his return, his thoughts took a more savage turn.

"How I hate all this fuss about Christmas," he muttered between his teeth. "Everyone pretending to feel jolly, and all that sort of thing. It's all infernal rubbish, every bit of it. Nobody does feel jolly really. There's no such thing as jollity in the world, and the world itself is the greatest mistake I know of."

In this festive frame of mind, and with a dark scowl disfiguring his handsome face, the usually genial, good-tempered Dick entered the precincts of Fairleigh Hall.

A chorus of merry voices greeted him as he made his appearance in the great drawing-room, which was at present the scene of operations.

"Come along, Dick," said Mr. Fairleigh. "I thought you were never coming back; come along, old man, and set to work at once."

Dick smiled a ghastly smile, and began at once to hoist some gigantic boughs of holly for Mrs. Fairleigh, who, being naturally venturesome, had mounted a pair of steps the better to perform her part of the business in hand.

Dick stole a stealthy glance round the room just to see if Kitty had returned, and his heart gave a great bound when he discovered her in a remote corner, weaving some winter roses into wreaths in a thoughtful preoccupied manner.

"Thinking of that puppy," thought Dick, grinding his teeth. "By Jove, I wish I had him in my clutches for just half an hour."

The luncheon bell ringing just then put every other thought out of his head; for, despite his grief, and his terrible disappointment, Mr. Dick Allingham was forced to confess that he was most ferociously, most unromantically, hungry.

At any other time he would have rushed to Kitty's side and escorted her to the dining-room where luncheon was laid out; but, without a glance at his faithless love, Dick selected Madge Dingle, a bright, handsome, volatile brunette of about twenty, who was doing her best to play fast and loose with everyone.

With her he chatted gaily—in fact, flirted savagely throughout the meal, without glancing even once in Kitty's direction.

Mrs. Fairleigh stared at him in amazement.

"What has happened?" she wondered. She was quite sure that Dick was over head and ears in love with Kitty, and yet here he was flirting in the most barefaced manner with handsome Madge Dingley.

"Surely they could not have quarrelled?" she queried to herself.

She glanced at Kitty, but that young lady's face was as unreadable as any face well could be. She was listening, in the most interested manner imaginable, to what Sir Rupert was saying to her; and if she felt at all hurt at Mr. Allingham's manner, she certainly gave no sign of the fact.

Even handsome Madge Dingley herself was taken by surprise. Dick had seemed so thoroughly engrossed, so thoroughly infatuated with Kitty, that Miss Dingley had not even attempted to play off her arts to him; but he was evidently disposed to flirt with her now, she concluded.

So, without further trouble or reflection, she gave herself up to the enjoyment of her favorite pastime, and to all outward appearance Mr. Allingham and Miss Dingley were flirting with each other very deeply indeed.

After luncheon they all marched back to the drawing-room, and Dick attached himself to the side of Madge Dingley, apparently having eyes and ears for no one else.

Sir Rupert was most assiduously attentive to Kitty; but, for all that, Kitty's big dark eyes looked somewhat mournful, and her usually bright face was very unusually pale.

At last the long afternoon, so enjoyable to the majority, so interminable to two of the company, came to an end, and, after a cosy tea in the library, everyone departed to dress for dinner.

After dinner there was to be a dance, and Dick had engaged himself for nearly every dance during the afternoon. Of course, all the waltzes were put down on Miss Dingley's programme; equally, of course, he had not put down a single dance on Kitty's.

"She shall see that I am not quite such a fool as she supposed me to be!" he thought, as he viciously spoiled his fourth necktie. "She thought I should dangle after her this hateful week just to enlarge her number of victims, and add so much thereby to her own enjoyment, and all the while she goes out to meet that fellow out yonder, and kisses him in the most disgraceful, in the most barefaced manner! But I will show her that she made rather a mistake!"

With this courageous resolve, Mr. Allingham devoted himself again to Miss Dingley upon entering the drawing-room, and with great dignity led her to the dining-room.

After dinner, dancing commenced, and then began Dick's deepest woe.

Kitty was a lovely dancer, and Dick had danced with her so often that their step, especially in the waltz, was in perfect accord; but dancing with Miss Dingley was quite another thing.

Somehow, he could not get on with her at all, and the partners he had selected for the square dances were not very much more to his taste.

Altogether, the world seemed very much turned to dust and ashes; and in almost savage disgust, Dick turned aside into one of the heavily-curtained bow-windows, and, almost concealed from observation, took a survey of the proceedings.

Involuntarily his eyes sought the corner where Kitty sat, and he started perceptibly as he caught sight of her pale, weary face.

"What could possibly make her look so sad?" he wondered. "Was it—could it be that she had misjudged his attentions?"

His heart gave a great leap, only to go down with greater force. Of course, she was thinking of that fellow who had kissed her in the morning! Had she not told him that she should think of him throughout the whole Christmas-time?

Mr. Allingham set his teeth savagely as he repictured the scene of the morning, and he put up his hand as though to ward off the sound of those terrible kisses.

Yet, despite his indignation, he could not resist a strong impulse to go over to Kitty's side, and try to comfort her.

She looked such a little thing, he thought, there seemed something almost cowardly in harbouring malice against her.

After all, if she liked the other fellow the better, she could not help it; and, looking down upon his false little love from the height of his six feet of masculine humanity he began to feel a tender pity for her.

The next instant he had crossed the room to her side; but Kitty averted her eyes, and answered him only in monosyllables.

However, talking to her had roused the old passionate love, and Dick determined not to give her up without a struggle. Accordingly, he begged her to come into the ante-room for a moment, as he had something important to tell her

"Now I'll get to know if there's any chance for me, at all events," murmured Dick to himself, as he led her to the apartment in question, stealing a glance the while at Kitty's haughtily-reared little head, and coldly-averted eyes.

The ante-room was but dimly lighted, but not so dimly that Dick could not perceive it was empty, and that there depended from the centre ceiling a huge bough of mistletoe.

"Oh, that's why everyone has been popping in and out of this room!" thought Dick; and at the same time he wondered whether Rupert had stolen a kiss from Kitty yet under that bough of mistletoe.

The thought set him longing for one himself.

He stole a glance into the drawing room, and discreetly drew the curtains a little closer behind him.

Everybody was enjoying themselves hilariously with "Sir Roger de Coverly."

"Now for it!" thought Dick. "I'll have just one kiss, though I never get another throughout the rest of my life!"

And, before Kitty could be aware of his design, he had drawn her under the mistletoe and kissed her, not once, nor even twice.

"Who was that fellow you kissed out there behind the hedge this morning?" he murmured, unable to keep the secret any longer.

Kitty started, and her heart gave a bound of relief.

"Why, you silly old fellow, Dick," she said, laughingly extricating herself from Dick's embrace, "that was my poor brother, Maurice. He's in disgrace with the pater just now, you know."

What Dick's answer was need not be recorded; suffice it to say that when they emerged from the ante-room their faces wore so widely different an expression to what they had done when entering it, that sharp-eyed Mrs. Fairleigh guessed the secret at once.

"They've settled it under the mistletoe," she concluded; and when the joyous bells rung out the fact that Christmas day had arrived, Dick and Kitty listened to them hand-in-hand, and he returned to his old decision that life was very much worth the living, after all.

"Upright Pianos."

A few extracts from the numerous endorsements by the leading artists of the World as to their Superiority:—

The pianoforte of your make used at my last concert is the most admirable instrument I have ever seen. Please send to my address in London one of your Upright Pianos. This, I think, is the best endorsement of your instrument I can give you.—CHRISTINE NILSSON.

Neither in Europe or America have I seen an Upright to equal yours.—ELILKE GERSTER GARDINI.

In all the qualities an artist can require your Upright Pianos surpass anything I have ever seen.—SOFIA SCALCHI.

It is superior in quality of tone and evenness of action to any instrument I know of.—CLARA LOUISE KELLOGG.

Having had an opportunity of using your New Concert Upright Piano at the concerts given by Her Majesty's Opera Company, we beg to compliment you upon your great success. You can justly claim a superiority over any piano we have hitherto seen, for concert purposes and accompanying the voice.—ITALO CAMPANINI, ANTONIO GALASSI, ANNA DE PELOCCA, EMIL AMBRA.

The successful manner in which your Upright Piano has stood the severest tests, is such as heretofore has been applied to the Grand Piano only, and it commands our unqualified endorsement.—OLE BULL, EMMA THURSBY, ALFRED H. PEASE, MAURICE STRAKOSCH.

Is Water-Power Becoming Scarce in England?

There has not been a time in many years when the water in the various streams and rivers has been so low as this season. Streams which have never given out before have been so low that they were practically worthless, and this emphasizes the fact that the steam-engine is the coming power, for the long-vaunted water-power of New England is giving out. Various causes have appeared to make the water-power less, and even less than it was supposed to be, and these causes have been working all the time and increasing in practical effect, so that now it is giving out almost in every place of any account, with some very few exceptions, where the timber has not yet been cut off back in the sources of supply on the hills or mountains. The effect upon the goods trade upon this account is already appreciable, and there is a demand for the best kinds of cotton, which was not expected so early in the season, if we are to take all the views which are expressed upon this matter and put them together. The curtailment of production on account of the drought will work, in the present state of the market, a very great advantage, and really it will be out of the reach of buyers to make a very large break in prices of manufactured cottons, for the reason that the supply is very much cut down at present. In this way it will make a brighter fall trade and a better outlook for the winter trade, more especially if we have such a winter as we have had in two or three instances where the water has not been in its usual quantity until almost spring, instead of early in the fall, as usual, and it will be another instance of exceptional conditions to prevent the market from breaking down under the load of accumulated goods. One thing is far beyond question now, and that is that the water-power of the Eastern States is fast failing away, and is growing less each and every year. Let us look, therefore, to steam with a clearer eye, and learn more of it, and how to handle it, so that we can keep up the busy wheels of the million of cotton-spindles and thousands of sets of woollen machinery. Water-power in the Eastern States is doomed, and it will not be long until we are a steam-spinning section of the country.—Cotton, Wool and Iron.

COLOR BLINDNESS.

Unless Dr. Jefferies, who lectured in New York the other night on color-blindness, was incorrectly reported, he made a grave mistake in asserting that to people who are color-blind red and green appear as gray. In the most usual form of color-blindness red and green appear identical, so that the color-blind person can see no distinction between them; but in nearly all cases red and green appear as different as possible from gray. It is well established that color-blind people do not see either red or green as people with normal eyesight see either of these colors; but the color which they see in place of red and green is a vivid one, bearing no resemblance whatever to gray, which is one of the few colors which nearly all color-blind persons see correctly.

Precisely how colors appear to the color blind it is of course impossible for any one to know—as impossible as it is for a person born deaf to understand what the blast of a trumpet resembles. In extreme cases of color-blindness it is generally supposed the color-blind person sees only light and shade. This is not true, for it sometimes happens that the shaded lines of an engraving will present to the color-blind eye an appearance like that of a blue skein of worsted, or in some cases a red skein. That is to say, that while the color-blind person will see little but degrees of light and shade in colored objects, he will see what to him are colors in the lines of an engraving.

The whole subject is as yet very imperfectly understood, even by the best physicians. The one thing that is well established is that a color-blind person cannot distinguish between red and green, and that hence red and green should not be used as signals either on land or at sea. Most of the men who are now properly kept out of the navy and the merchant service because they cannot tell a red light from a green one, could at once distinguish a blue light from a white one, and in view of this fact, it would be wise to substitute white and blue for red and green in signal flags and signal lights.

"Sing a Song of Sixpence."

You all know this rhyme; but have you ever read what it is meant for?

The four-and-twenty blackbirds represent the twenty-four hours. The bottom of the pie is the world, while the top crust is the sky that overarches it. The opening of the pie is the day dawn, when the birds begin to sing, and surely such a sight is fit for a king.

The king, who is represented as sitting in his parlor, counting out his money, is the sun, while the gold pieces that slip through his fingers as he counts them are the golden sunshine.

The queen, who sits in the dark kitchen, is the moon, and the honey, with which she regales herself, is the moonlight.

The industrious maid, who is in the garden at work before her king—the sun—is risen, is daydawn, and the clothes she hangs out are the clouds, while the bird, who so tragically ends the song by "nipping off her nose," is the hour of sunset. So we have the whole day, if not in a nut-shell, in a pie. —Philadelphia Evening Call.

Frozen Meat.

Meat is now frozen in Sydney and sent in refrigerated chambers to London. The hulk Rica Genova is fitted up with the freezing apparatus in Darling Harbor, and can accommodate the carcasses of 10,000 sheep or 1000 bullocks. The cold is produced by compressing air, cooling it, then permitting it to suddenly expand. In this way a temperature of seventy-two degrees below zero is obtained in a few seconds. This cold air is then let into the freezing chamber where the carcasses hang. A sheep is completely frozen in thirty-six hours, a bullock in five or six days. The frozen carcasses are transferred to the freezing rooms of the Orient steamers and conveyed to England at an extra cost for freight and freezing of 3d. per pound on the price of the meat in Sydney.

The accused assailant is very diminutive.

Be Careful what You Eat.

The best medical authorities declare that worms in the human system are often induced by eating too freely of uncooked fruit and too much meat, cheese, etc. Whatever may be the cause, Freeman's Worm Powders are speedy and safe to cure; they destroy the worms, and contain their own cathartic to expel them. 51-2t

The Mayoralty.

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough:—

GENTLEMEN:—

At the request of many of the ratepayers of the Town, who are opposed to the present management of our Municipal affairs, I appear as a candidate for the Mayoralty for 1884, and beg respectfully to solicit your votes and influence therefor.

My course as Councillor during the present year has been severely criticised, but I can only say that every act of mine in the Council was prompted by my conviction of what was just and right to the ratepayers. I entered the Council without personal interest of any kind to serve, determined to advance the interests of the ratepayers to the best of my ability, and, as far as my single efforts could do so, to conduct the business of the Town on the same sound business principles that every one of you applies to the conduct of your own private affairs.

This course, opposed as it was to the loose and extravagant manner in which the majority in the Council have been accustomed to carry on your business, naturally called down upon me a storm of abuse, which, however, the courage of my convictions has enabled me to bear without difficulty.

Many important matters have been before the present Council, and, as my opponent, Councillor Paterson, holds views on them different from my own, I shall here state a few of them, hoping to have the opportunity of discussing the merits of our opposite opinions before you with him.

FIRE PROTECTION.

I am opposed to paying by a general tax for hydrants taken by the Town for fire protection, believing it to be unjust to ask ratepayers living outside the fire limits to pay for the protection of the centre of the town.

Mr. Paterson's views on this subject are directly opposed to mine.

HOUSE OF REFUGE.

As chairman of the Charity Committee this year, I have had excellent opportunities of judging of the necessity for such an institution, and am forced to conclude that at the present time is not required. No doubt some few cases could be found in our midst which it would be extremely convenient to send to such an institution, if we had it, but the immense cost of building and maintaining a Refuge would be out of all proportion to the benefit to be derived from it. In the future this may not be so. You may therefore rest assured that, if I have the honor to be elected by you to the Mayoralty, I will use my influence to prevent this burden being added to your already heavy taxes.

Mr. Paterson's views on this subject also are, I believe, opposed to mine.

CIVIC SALARY.

I am not in favor of attaching a salary to the office of either Mayor or Councillor, believing that the opportunity which you thus afford them of proving themselves faithful servants, and worthy of your confidence, ought to be a sufficient recompense for their time and trouble.

I understand Mr. Paterson's views on this point also are at variance with mine.

CLERK AND TREASURER.

I am opposed to allowing one person to hold the two offices of Clerk and Treasurer. On this point also Mr. Paterson differs from me.

BANK OF TORONTO BUILDINGS.

As the paying for these buildings this year has caused a considerable increase in the amount of taxation, and a good deal of dissatisfaction has been expressed in consequence, a few words form me on this subject will not be out of place. Early in the year there was a general unanimity in the Council as to the desirability of purchasing these buildings on the terms offered by Mr. Stevenson, namely:—$4,500, payable in debentures bearing interest at 5 per cent, running over either 10 or 20 years, but when this matter came up in discussing the estimates, to my surprise, the whole amount (less about $400 received from the Town Trust Commissioners) was asked for this year. I was opposed to this, but was voted down, Councillor McNaughton alone supporting me. Mr. Paterson, whose duty it was, as Chairman of the Finance Committee, to compile the estimates, can perhaps give some satisfactory explanation to the ratepayers for putting this heavy tax upon them. The title to these buildings has not yet, I believe, been perfected. Is it possible that the purchase may yet fall through?

There are many other points on which I might touch, but as this address is already too long, I shall only say that I am opposed to all jobbery and rings, and to the transacting of the town's affairs in secret conclaves and not in either open Council or Committee.

I am in favor of progress and municipal reform, and where any saving can be effected in the management of our municipal affairs, I am also strongly in favor of such saving.

If elected, I shall use my best efforts to obtain a dollar's worth of your money for every dollar expended.

I am now in your hands, and it is for you to say by your votes whether my conduct during the year and my position on the foregoing important matters are worthy of your support and confidence.

I remain,

Your obedient servant,

C. W. SAWERS.

HOW TO MIX PAINTS.

The following table will be found serviceable, especially for amateurs, as showing how simple pigments are to be mixed for producing compound colors:

Buff—White, yellow ochre, and red.

Chestnut—Red, black, and yellow.

Chocolate—Raw umber, red and black.

Claret—Red, umber and black.

Copper—Red, yellow and black.

Dove—White, vermillion, blue and yellow.

Drab—White, yellow ochre, red and black.

Fawn—White, yellow and red.

Flesh—White, yellow ochre and vermillion.

Freestone—Red, black, yellow ochre and white.

French Grey—White, Prussian blue and lake.

Grey—White lead and black.

Gold—White, stone ochre and red.

Lemon—White and chrome yellow.

Limestone—White, yellow ochre, black and red.

Olive—Yellow, blue, black and white.

Orange—Yellow and red.

Peach—White and vermillion.

Pearl—White, black and blue.

Pink—White, vermillion and lake.

Purple—Violet, with more red and white.

Rose—White and madder lake.

Sandstone—White, yellow ochre, black and red.

Snuff—Yellow and Vandyke brown.

Violet—Red, blue and white.

In the combination of colors required to produce a desired tint, the first-named color is always the principal ingredient, and the others follow in the order of their importance. Thus, in mixing a limestone tint, white is the principal ingredient, and red the color of which the least is needed. The exact proportions of each color must be determined by experiment with a small quantity. It is best to have the principal ingredient thick and add to it the other paints thinner.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them a name of their own, and not try to sell them on the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back. 2-tf

A THOUGHTFUL HUSBAND.

A Detroit lady who is subject to heart disease, took tea last Sunday with a neighbor, and while sitting at table her husband rushed in without a hat, and in his shirt sleeves.

"Be calm!" he exclaimed hurridly to his wife; don't excite yourself; you know you can't stand excitement, and it might be worse.

"Good Heavens!" cried his wife; "the children—"

"They're all right! Now, Mary, don't get excited. Keep calm and cool; it can't be helped now; we must bear those visitations of Providence with philosophy!"

"Then it's mother!" gasped his wife.

"Your mother's safe; get on your things, but don't hurry or worry. It's too late to be of any use, buf I'll fly back and see what I can do. I only came to tell you not to get excited."

"For mercy's sake!" implored the almost fainting woman, "tell me the worst?"

"Well, if you will have it, the consequences be on your own head, Mary. I've tried to prepare you, and if you will know—don't excite yourself; try and survive—but our chimney's on fire, and the whole department and all the neighbors are in our front yard."

She survived.

A Great Discovery.

Mr. Wm. Thomas, of Newton, Ia., says: "My wife had been seriously affected with a cough for twenty-five years, and this spring more severely than ever before. She had used many remedies without relief, and being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery, did so, with most gratifying results. The first bottle relieved her very much, and the second bottle has absolutely cured her. She has not had so good health for thirty years." Trial Bottles Free at Taylor & McDonald's Drug Store. Large size $1.00.

OTHER PEOPLE'S PROPERTY.

Old Pettigrew, of Austin, is very precise in the majority of his statements, and is a strict constructionist. One day a neighbor rushed in on Pettigrew while the latter was eating his breakfast, and exclaimed excitedly:

"Mr. Pettigrew, your house is on fire!"

"I beg your pardon," responded Pettigrew, "but what did you say?"

"Your house is on fire."

"Ah, that is where you are wrong," replied Pettigrew.

"Wrong?" said the neighbor.

"Yes, this is not my house. I only rent it.

The Best Proof.—The Globe.

"I sell more Burdock Blood Bitters than I do of any other preparation in stock," says B. Jackes, druggist, Toronto. If the reader will ask any druggist in the city he will get a similar answer to his query—a proof that it is the most popular medicine for the blood, liver and kidneys known. 1-2t

FOR HIS GIRL.

The other day a rather green looking young fellow—though he evidently lived in the city—went into a dry goods store and walked up to one of the lady clerks and the following conversation occurred:

"I want to get four yards of wide ribbon for a girl."

"All right, sir. What color do you want?"

"I don't know. I just want four yards of ribbon, that's all."

"Yes, but we ought to give her some color that will suit her. Is she a blonde or brunette?"

"She ain't neither; she's a hired girl."

CROSS TO STRANGERS.

Sweet little Meg came into her Sunday school class one morning, her eyes filled with tears, and, looking up into her teacher's face, said: "Our dog's dead, and I guess the angels were real scared when they saw him coming up the path, for he's awfully cross to strangers.

Advertising Cheats!!!

"It has become so common to write the beginning of an article, in an elegant, interesting manner,

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible,

"To induce people

"To give them one trial which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

"Religious and secular, is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness

"And ability

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

Did She Die?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years,"

"The doctors doing her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A Daughter's Misery.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief,

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters, that we had shunned for years before using it."—THE PARENTS.

Father is Getting Well.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters." A LADY of Utica, N. Y. 51-4t

THE HAINES "Upright Pianos."

A few extracts from the numerous endorsements by the leading artists of the World as to their Superiority:—

The pianoforte of your make used at my last concert is the most admirable instrument I have ever seen. Please send to my address in London one of your Upright Pianos. This, I think, is the best endorsement of your instrument I can give you.—CHRISTINE NILSSON.

Neither in Europe or America have I seen an Upright to equal yours.—ELILKE GERSTER GARDINI.

In all the qualities an artist can require your Upright Pianos surpass anything I have ever seen.—SOFIA SCALCHI.

It is superior in quality of tone and evenness of action to any instrument I know of. CLARA LOUISE KELLOGG.

Having had an opportunity of using your New Concert Upright Piano at the concerts given by Her Majesty's Opera Company, we beg to compliment you upon your great success. You can justly claim a superiority over any piano we have hitherto seen, for concert purposes and accompanying the voice.—ITALO CAMPANINI, ANTONIO GALASSI, ANNA DE PELOCCA, EMIL AMBRA.

The successful manner in which your Upright Piano has stood the severest tests, is such as heretofore has been applied to the Grand Piano only, and it commands our unqualified endorsement.—OLE BULL, EMMA THURSBY, ALFRED H. PEASE, MAURICE STRAKOSCH.

Thousands of young Men and Women—married and single—through the effects of vicious youthful habits, or excessive indulgence in later years, have so undermined their general systems as to induce almost every other disease, and the real cause of these troubles being scarcely ever suspected, they are drugged and doctored for everything but the right one. The ordinary modes of treating troubles of this nature do no good. The JERUBEBIN COMBINATOIN REMEDY is offered as A Speedy and Certain Cure, as hundreds afflicted with every form of disease have been restored to complete health by its use, after all other remedies failed. This remedy is adapted to every condition of nervous debility and weakness in either sex, but especially in cases arising from imprudence. Its recuperative powers are truly astonishing, and its continued use for a short time changes the languid, debilitated condition, to one of renewed life and vigor.

The Mayoralty.

Once more we feel it our duty to call the attention of the ratepayers to this important contest, and to remind them of the significance of the choice they will make on Monday next. As time passes we feel that there is less necessity of urging Mr. Cox's claims to the position of Mayor. His claims assert themselves, and no thinking man can resist their force—no unprejudiced ratepayer can fail to see that in electing Mr. Cox, he is giving the town the best possible available Mayor. Unscrupulous opponents, for purposes of their own, have sought to impute to Mr. Cox sentiments he does not and never did possess, and motives he never entertained. To those who heard his modest yet masterly address at his nomination, it is useless to point out how completely he refuted all charges that have been made against him from time to time during the contest. Not only did he do this, but, by his modest, yet dignified bearing, his superiority to all petty subterfuges, his singleness of purpose, and the convincing arguments he advanced to show how closely connected were his own interests with the welfare of the town, he so ingratiated himself with his hearers that they, fairly divided as to numbers at the beginning, were overwhelmingly in his favor at the conclusion of the nomination proceedings. He proved that he was in favor of every economy consistent with the efficient performance of the municipal service. He used no doubtful language in declaring his opposition to purchasing the water-works, except with the full assent of the people, or of asking one ratepayer who did not receive the benefit, to pay for one gallon of water. In every way he showed that the interests of the town were of necessity as dear to him as his own; and all who heard his address must have been convinced that on the score of ability, energy, public-spiritedness, dignified bearing, courtesy, and respect for all men, he is incomparably superior to his opponent for the position of Mayor. But it is the duty of the people to elect their Mayor; this Mr. Cox believes, and he will stoop to no underhanded means, no mud-throwing, no button-holing, no wire-pulling, no insinuations, to secure the position; therefore he makes no personal efforts to thrust himself on the ratepayers. He is willing to serve the town if the town wants his services. He leaves it to his opponent to show, by the agonizing nature of his exertions, that he must have some personal object in seeking an office that should seek him; to show that he will not allow the people to select their Mayor, but is striving by scandalous insinuations, undignified trickery, breaches of confidence and trust, to thrust himself on the people as occupant of a position, for which he has hardly one of the many qualifications required to make him fit for it.

Mr. Cox has shown that he has every qualification; he has placed his great business abilities, his vast experience, and an integrity that has stood the test of a quarter of a century without revealing a flaw, at the public service, and has pledged himself that he will, as Mayor, use all his power to guard and promote the interests of Peterborough. Therefore, for the sake of the town's material interests, for the sake of its credit, we urge every elector who has any concern for the promotion of the one or the maintenance of the other, to go to the poll and record his vote for Mr. Cox. If this be done we shall have a Mayor whom all can respect and name with pride, who will be an honor to the town, respected at home and abroad.

South Monaghan and Union.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—In your paper of Dec. 13th, I notice an editorial on the advantages of annexation of South Monaghan to Peterborough. But there is one important matter you did not touch on. I should like to have you show how it is going to affect our pockets.

Yours, etc.,
RATEPAYER.

South Monaghan, Dec. 27th.

We have before considered the commercial and general aspect of the annexation of South Monaghan to the county of Peterborough; in compliance with the request of our correspondent we will deal with the financial bearing of the question, and try to show that, in spite of apparent difficulties, the union, so desirable in every other respect, would also in this respect be, on the whole, advantageous to the township. Let us briefly talk over the matter.

The county rate payable by South Monaghan in the year 1883 was seven-tenths of a mill in the dollar, which, on the equalized ratable property of the township, calls for a county tax of $441.05. The county rate of Peterborough for the same year was two and a quarter mills in the dollar, representing a county tax of $1,417.65. South Monaghan, if it were united to Peterborough, would increase the equalized value of ratable property in this county by $630,070, or about one-twelfth. Therefore, the net increase the township would have to pay under the new conditions would be the difference between the amount it has now to pay and the amount it would have to pay if annexed, less one-twelfth, which would be about $850. That is, every hundred acres of land at the present equalized value, would have to pay an extra tax of forty-six cents. This amount seems exceedingly small when one considers the immense advantages that would accrue to South Monaghan by becoming a portion of Peterborough. At present the township is in a comparatively isolated position. It is hemmed in by water on the south, and shut out from its chief market except at the labour of miles of wearisome travel. It is shut off from a short cut to Peterborough town by the unbridged Otonabee. If a union were secured, a bridge at Rosa's would be surely built (in fact that could be made one of the conditions of union), and the road through Otonabee would be put in first-class repair. With these improvements the people would be placed within ten or twelve miles of the best market town in Ontario—a market where, on the whole, farmers get higher prices for farm produce than that of any other town. The population of Peterborough is large and rapidly increasing; thus, there is a keen demand and consequent good prices. Peterborough has the advantage of being fed by the best railway service outside of Toronto, there being practically seven railway lines virtually centreing in the town. Therefore, its population and importance are bound to increase, prices to be improved,—a high-priced market, with an ever brisk demand—while the market values, to the farmer, of Port Hope and Cobourg, small as they are now, cannot hope for any improvement, if, indeed, they can expect to hold their own. Thus the farmer who, by the union of South Monaghan to Peterborough, would have to pay forty-six cents additional to his taxation, would be able to make up the amount in the increased price he would secure in Peterborough on the first load of farm produce, and would, besides, save on that and every subsequent trip to Peterborough, one half the distance in travel. We shall be happy to furnish any other information in our power, and our columns are open to short, pointed correspondence on the subject, which is of live importance to both the township and town.

"Abuse of Patronage."

"For more than a year" and a half "now there has been a vacancy in the" Customs office of Napanee. "During" two Dominion and one Local election in Lennox "this piece of patronage was unblushingly used by the supporters of the" Tory Government at Ottawa "to influence votes, the strongest assurances having been given to the friends of" the sixty Tory candidates "for the position that the success of the Government would secure the appointment that the particular voter being addressed might desire. So many indeed were promised the" collectorship "that the Government dreads the indignation of those deceived and dare not gazette the appointment. The" Tory "Government did not shrink from this dishonest course, but it does shrink from the consequences of an exposure of its trafficing in public patronage." The quoted portions of the above paragraph was used by the Review in reference to the delay in filling the office of registrar of this county. If our contemporary were honest instead of being simply partizan, it would not hesitate to also denounce the delay in filling the customs office at Napanee, which has been vacant nearly two years.

Editorial Notes.

Sir Richard Cartewright was, on Thursday last, elected by acclamation, to represent South Huron in the Dominion Parliament. There was not the slightest opposition. Sir Richard's election will add greatly to the debating ability on the floor of the house.

It is stated on the best authority that Hon. Mr. Ross, Minister of Education, intends to have but one authorized series of text-books for public schools. This seems to be a step in the right direction, and trustees should be cautious about actually introducing new text-books till this important matter is definitely settled.

A full range of these beautiful Blue and Jet Black Cashmeres, all wool, just received at Turnbull's.

THE INDICTMENT STILL STANDS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

MR. EDITOR,—Trusting to your former kindness, I again ask for a word or two in reference to Mr. Sawers.

Yours, etc.,

To the Electors of Peterborough:

Those who have read my former letters, arraigning Mr. Sawers' course in the Council and his course in the mayoralty contest, perhaps expected that he would make some attempt to disprove such damaging allegations. But I did not expect it; for I knew that my charges were founded on facts. On nomination day Mr. Sawers did make an attempt to divert their, to him, damaging directness; but it was the lamest attempt and the most laughable failure ever witnessed in public. His whole aim seemed to be abuse of your journal. He utterly failed to justify his motive to saddle $4,500 this year on the ratepayers for the purchase of the Bank of Toronto buildings, two years before they were required—two years before the lease of the present town premises expires. He failed to reconcile his claim to be the "poor man's friend," with his advocacy of the cow by-law. He failed—but why repeat, since he failed in every point he touched on; he also failed to keep his temper; he failed to keep his insulting tongue off private business affairs, he failed to show that he had honor enough not to use a private conversation on private business in public discussion; but he did not fail—and in this respect he never fails—to make an egregious and utter ass of himself, to the disgust of even his own supporters, one of whom openly expressed his disgust at his candidate. In addition to his bad record in the Council, Mr. Sawers showed on Monday that as a Mayor he would be a calamity. He would keep the Council in tumult the year round. He is so cantankerous, so cranky, so ill-tempered, so ill-mannered, so uncourteous, so insulting that no man can work with him. If he had the ability of a Gladstone (which heaven knows he hasn't) by the above-named defects he would obstruct the work of any public body. His election to the mayoralty would be, not only an indescribable damage, but an indelible disgrace to the town. This is the last time, Mr. Editor, that I shall have need to trouble you with Mr. Sawers as a candidate—the people will settle him next Monday. I have written for the public benefit and all I regret is that I had not a more dignified and worthy subject than Mr. C. W. Sawers, as he appears as a candidate for the mayoralty, for in that light only have I sought to deal with him.

Yours finally,
ELECTOR.

Dec. 31st, 1882.

MR. SAWERS' SELF-SEEKING.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:—

I am only a simple mechanic, and, I suppose, one of the "workingmen" whom Mr. Sawers seems to have made himself guardian angel of. Now, this No. 1 ward is chiefly composed of workingmen, and I should like to know why Mr. Sawers, by writing to Ottawa, is making every effort to deprive us of the post office site. Mr. Sawers pretends to be the friend of the workingman, but I believe that if it hadn't been for his wire-pulling to secure the site himself, the post office would have been under erection on Phelan's corner and a hundred "workingmen" at work upon it. This shows how much better Mr. Sawers works for his own interest than for that of No. 1 ward.

Yours, etc.,
MECHANIC.

Jan. 1st, 1884.

AN OUTSIDE OPINION.

The following from the Bobcaygeon Independent showing in what light Mr Geo. A. Cox is regarded as a benefit to Peterborough, only tallies with actual facts that must be familiar to everyone in the town:

"Without being a trained railway man Mr. Cox has certainly managed the Midland with the utmost success. He was one of those happy beings whom Fate favors. He caught that flood in the tide of the affairs of the Midland which led to fortune. He took the Midland, a wretched trail from nowhere to nowhere, and a hopelessly bankrupt concern, surrounded with active competitors. He leaves it a well developed system, a profitable corporation, having skillfully possessed itself of the properties of each of its rivals. In Mr. A. White, as traffic manager, Mr. Cox has had an able assistant. Mr. White is pre-eminently a railway man. Upon him has devolved the duty of working up the business of the roads, of arranging the tariffs, and of contriving in such a way that the earnings would meet the liabilities without bearing too heavily upon the public. Having at the same time to study the interests of his line and the accommodation of the people, is a delicate position to occupy, but Mr. White manages to adjust the balance with marked satisfaction both to his company and his customers. It is possible that the system may be controlled from Toronto, instead of Peterborough, in which event Peterborough will sustain some little loss, a loss, however, that it can afford, after obtaining such material advantages and lasting benefits as it has received under the Presidency of its energetic and enterprising citizen, Mr. Geo. A. Cox.

THE INFALLIBLE SIR JOHN.

In 1882 Sir John boasted that so infallible was he as a "constitutional lawyer" that in no single case had his judgment been reversed. Here is an extract from the Mail of the 2nd of June, 1882—eighteen days before the general election:

"The following question in writing was handed to Sir John: 'What is your opinion of the constitutionality of the Ontario Licence Act?'"

Sir John said that since Confederation his decision had often been given, as Minister of Justice, on constitutional questions, and in no single case had his judgment been reversed. He believed that the act was not worth the paper it was written on. Whenever the Licensed Victuallers brought the matter before the courts it would be decided that the act was an usurpation, and had no force whatever."

The Licensed Victuallers, acting upon the suggestion contained in this speech, brought an action. The Court of Appeal in this Province decided against them, but the Tories who belonged to the Licensed Victuallers, and who believed in Sir John Macdonald's pretensions to superior knowledge in constitutional law, appealed to the Queen, and the question was heard before Her Majesty's judicial advisers a few weeks ago. Judgment has now been given and the Privy Council has decided that Sir John's opinion was "not worth the paper it was written on" The Privy Council should be ashamed of itself.

For Good Value and New Colours in Winceys' go to Turnbull's.

REQUISITION

To GEO. A. COX, Esq.:

SIR,—

The undersigned ratepayers of the Town of Peterborough, having watched with interest the marked ability with which you have managed the affairs of the Midland Railway, and the success which has attended you in every enterprise with which you have been connected, and recognising the great benefits which have accrued to the Town through your efforts, now desire to show their appreciation of your services by conferring on you the highest position in the gift of the citizens, and respectfully and urgently request that you will allow yourself to be elected Mayor:—

REPLY.

To WALTER PATERSON, Jr., Esq., And 328 others.

GENTLEMEN,—

I appreciate the honor done me in being presented with a requisition, signed by such a large number of my fellow-townsmen, asking me to allow myself to be nominated as Mayor for the ensuing year.

If I consulted my own feelings I should promptly decline the honor, but I feel that we have arrived at an important crisis in the history of our town, when it is the duty, not only of the Council, but of all citizens interested in the welfare of the town, to do what they can to promote its interests and preserve its credit.

If I can be of any service in this respect, I am prepared, in response to such a large and influential requisition, to place myself at the disposal of the ratepayers. It is not my intention, however, to ask any person for his support, and if I have reason to think that even a respectable minority of the ratepayers are opposed to my election I shall withdraw from the contest.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

TO THE ELECTORS OF
No. Two Ward.

GENTLEMEN.—I have been requested by a number of the ratepayers of the above ward to allow myself to be nominated as councillor for the year 1884.

I have agreed to accept the nomination so flatteringly offered me, and beg to say that my policy, if elected, shall be retrenchment in every legitimate way.

It will be impossible for me to solicit the votes of the ward personally, as the time is so short, but I trust this notice will be accepted instead of a personal canvass.

I am, respectfully,
Your obedient servant,

WHAT SHALL I GIVE HIM?

Is a puzzling question. It is easy enough to find things for the "hers," in fact the variety is embarrassing; but the selection of a present for the male sex is more difficult. We have known Ladies to present their Husbands with useful Household Articles and it is not a bad idea, but if you wish to give the man something for personal use, the list to choose from is rather short. CLOTHES are Staple—always in demand. Why not a new OVERCOAT or SUIT? A SET OF SHIRTS, some fine HOSIERY, HANDKERCHIEFS, or NECKWEAR? or, if that is not appropriate, give the Domestic Man a HOUSE COAT OR WRAPPER. While to the Gay Young Man, SHIRT STUDS, SCARF PINS, SILK TIE or SCARF. Now that you have the hint what to get, we will modestly add that a good place to get everything of this sort is right here, where we are making a Special Holiday Display of Useful and Ornamental Wearing Apparel for Men and Boys.

OVERCOATS! OVERCOATS!

Owing to the backwardness of the Season, OUR STOCK will be SOLD REGARDLESS OF COST prior to Stock-taking.

LOST IN THE WOODS.

An incident happened a few days ago in this vicinity that shows that the shrewdest student of woodcraft is apt to lose his bearings. Messrs. Richard Purser, John Dinwoodie, and another gentleman, went forth to slay the sportive rabbit. What success they had is neither here nor there. They had been hunting in the vicinity of a swamp of a couple of acres. In this, strange to say, Mr. Dinwoodie became lost out and out. He exercised all his woodcraft, but still he performed the trapper's traditional circle; he acknowledged himself completely lost in two acres of swamp. His companions not finding him, became alarmed, and went to a neighboring farm house for lanterns—it was nearly dark, Mr. Dinwoodie being "lost" three or four hours Just as the searching party reached the edge of the the swamp Mr. D. emerged from his seclusion, and overcome by the shame of being lost in a potato patch of woods, exclaimed on seeing the party: "For ——'s sake, Dick, don't put this in the papers." But Dick was indiscreet, and breathed the facts in the hearing of a long-eared reporter, and here are the facts. Our reporter received an invitation to join the party, in another hunt, but he hasn't enough confidence in Mr. Dinwoodie's woodcraft to risk his valuable existence.

CURLING.

A meeting of those interested in curling took place at the rink, on the 27th inst. Mr. Graham, President, in the chair. The following were the officers elected:—Mr. R. C. Strickland, President; Mr. B. Eden, Vice-President; Mr. T. J. Bird, Secretary. Committee of Management—Messrs. Clarin, Casement and Walter Strickland.

SCHOOL ELECTION.

Nomination for school trustees took place on Thursday, the 27th instant. Messrs. G. J. Calvin, Dench, Thos. Casement, Graves and D. Hilman were nominated to fill the two vacancies. Mr. Thos. Casement resigned, saying that he did not wish to stand if there was going to be a poll. During his absence, however, he was again nominated. All are good men, and had they been present a poll would not likely have been demanded.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

Nomination of reeve and councillors took place on Monday the 31st Dec. Mr. R. C. Strickland was re-elected Reeve by acclamation. Messrs. Cox, McWilliams, Nelson, Urquhart, Moore and J. L. Madill were nominated as councillors. Mr. Madill and Mr. Nelson resigned, and no further nominations being made the above were declared elected by acclamation, to the apparent satisfaction of all. Messrs. Strickland, Cox, Nelson, Urquhart and Moore gave short addresses. The old councillors expressed their regret at Mr Nelson resigning, but believed Mr. J. Moore would be a good man to take his place. The meeting broke up with three cheers for the Queen.

PRESENTATION.

On Monday, the 24th ult., Messrs. D. Smith and J. Todd agreeably surprised the Rev. Mr. Clark, superintendent of the C. P. S. School, by calling at the manse and presenting him, on behalf of the teachers, friends and scholars, with a beautiful beaver cloth overcoat, trimmed with Persian lamb; also, Persian lamb gauntlets and a sum of money, total value about $73.

Butter Buyers

everywhere are refusing to take white, lardy looking butter except at "grease" prices. Consumers want nothing but gilt-edged butter, and buyers therefore recommend their patrons to keep a uniform color throughout the year by using the Improved Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. It is the only color that can be relied on to never injure the butter, and to always give the perfect color. Sold by druggists and merchants.

TRUSTEE ELECTION.

On Wednesday of last week the election to fill the vacancies in Norwood School Board took place, when Robert Scott and Thomas Armstrong, the retiring Trustees, were re-elected by acclamation. Very little interest was taken in the proceedings, there being barely sufficient to nominate the candidates.

MASONIC INSTALLATION.

On St. John's Day, the 27th of December, the members of Norwood Lodge, No. 223, A.F. & A.M., celebrated this event, as is their custom, by the installation of their officers for the current year. The following brethren were duly installed by W. Bro. W. H. Stephenson, W. M.:—

W. Bro. W. H. Stephenson	W.M.
" J. A. Butterfield	S.W.
Bro. P. W. Stevenson	J.W.

Bro. John Harper	I.G.
" Isaac Powell	Tyler.

ANOTHER MARRIAGE.

On Wednesday of last week another interesting marriage was celebrated in our village, the contracting parties in this case being Mr. Thomas J. Howson, of Asphodel, and Miss Annie Starr, eldest daughter of our well and favourably known townsman, Mr. James Starr. The nuptial knot was tied by the Rev. Mr. Gee, at the residence of the bride's father, in the presence of a large number of invited guests, all of whom evinced their esteem for the happy and beautiful bride, by presenting her with valuable and handsome souvenirs. The happy couple left that afternoon for Toronto to enjoy their honeymoon.

MUNICIPAL.

Our municipal election took place on Monday last. It was an exceedingly tame affair. There was just fifteen of the free and independent present; but as there was no desire to change the composition of our Council Board, the electors wisely thought there was no need for their presence. Mr. Thomas Fraser was re-elected Reeve, Messrs. H. Reynolds, W. H. Minaker, D. Mahoney and Wm. Hutchinson were re-elected Councillors.

WEDDING BELLS.

Wedding bells rang merrily in our village last week, when a well-known gentleman of far-off Winnipeg, was so fortunate as to carry off in wedlock one of Norwood's fair daughters. The parties to this nuptial agreement were Mr Gilbert H. McGregor, of the audit office of the Canada Pacific Railway, as well as organist of Zion Methodist Church, Winnipeg, Manitoba, and Miss Mary Theresa Cope, only daughter of our highly respected townsman, Mr. P. P. Cope. The marriage ceremony took place on Christmas Day, in the Norwood Methodist Church, in the presence of a very large number of mutual friends, and was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Gee. The bridesmaids were Miss Nellie R. Inglis, of Parkdale, Toronto, and Miss Emma Pearce, of Norwood, all of whom were dressed in really beautiful costumes, appropriate to this august occasion. The groomsmen were the Rev. F. H. Sproule, of Carleton Place, and Mr. E. C. Arthur, Principal of the Collegiate Institute, Whitby. After the ceremony had been performed, Mr. and Mrs. McGregor were presented to the large and admiring congregation, and Miss Kate Buck, at the proper time, played on the organ some highly appropriate pieces of music. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the happy couple, with a large number of the friends of both, partook of a wedding dinner at the residence of the bride's father, and after the disposal of which the newly married couple, escorted by the groomsmen, and bridesmaids, left for Hastings, where the train was taken for Ottawa, where they will spend their honeymoon with the relatives of Mr. McGregor. The bride was the recipient of a number of kind attentions and tokens of affectionate remembrance, having altogether received no less than forty-eight costly and handsome presents, useful as well as highly ornamental, among them being a very beautiful tea-set in silver. The members of her Sunday School class waited upon her and presented her with a valuable lamp, accompanied with the following address:

Dear Friend and Teacher:—

With deep regret we learn that you are about to depart from amongst us, and that the relations of teacher and taught, which of late has existed between us is now about to be severed. Your earnest endeavours to promote our spiritual welfare, and your uniform kindness have won for you our sincere gratitude and affection. As a teacher of truth and that, when far away you may have something that will recall the many pleasant hours we have spent together, we present you with this lamp. May its light bring pleasure in the thought that you have so often tried to point your pupils to the "Light of the world," and though sometimes you have failed to see much of the results of your labour, rest assured that like the bread "cast upon the waters," it shall be seen "after many days," that in the future, some while acknowledging themselves followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, shall attribute to your instrumentality their determination to lead a better life.

That you may enjoy a merry Christmas, and in the home to which you are going, many happy New Years is the sincere wish of your affectionate pupils.

Signed on behalf of class,
EDITH MCLAUGHLIN.

Peterborough Markets.

(Reported by W. H. Wilson & Co., Grain, Produce, Provision and General Commission Merchants, Corner George and Brock Streets, Peterborough, Ont. P. O. Box 2.)

There has been scarce movement in grain the past week. A dull market has resulted in a decline in some kinds of grain. Spring wheat has dropped to $1.05 and $1.06; fall wheat from 90c. to $1.03; goose wheat, little offering, selling about 85c. to 86c. Peas bring 73c. to 75c. Rye, 56c. to 56c. Oats, 31c. to 32c. On the market, the attendance has been fair—prices of most articles steady. Roll butter more plentiful; selling from 19c. to 22c. Eggs, 20c. to 24c., not likely to hold up. Keg butter is lowering—it has got to be fine to bring over 17c.; not much offering. Dressed hogs are high; $6.25 to $6.75 has been paid. Other commodities unchanged.

CHANCERY SALE

OF VALUABLE

FARM PROPERTY

DORIS vs. DORIS.

Pursuant to a judgment of the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, made in the above Cause, on the 10th day of November last, there will be sold, with the approbation of C. A. Weller, Esq., Master of the said Court at Peterborough, at his Chambers, in the TOWN OF PETERBOROUGH on Wednesday, the 9th day of January, A.D. 1884.

at the hour of 2 o'clock, p.m., Lot Number 17, in the 10th Concession of the Township of Otonabee, in the County of Peterborough, containing 200 acres.

The property will be sold subject to a reserved bid, and will be first offered in one block, when if no sufficient sum be bid therefor, it will be withdrawn, and then offered in two parcels, each consisting of 100 acres, and being composed of the north and south halves of said lot respectively.

The soil is a good clay loam, well adapted for agricultural purposes. Each parcel contains about 18 acres of good wood, pumps of hard water convenient to house and stables, two frame barns, size 30x50, stable and shed. The land is well fenced throughout, excepting about 25 acres on the south half. About 25 acres of each parcel is seeded down with clover and timothy.

In addition to the foregoing the north half of said lot has situate thereon a GOOD BRICK COTTAGE, size 26x32, consisting of 4 rooms, cellar and cellar kitchen. There is also a very large quantity of manure on said parcel, which will become the property of the purchaser.

On the south half of the said lot there is also situate a GOOD FRAME HOUSE, 1½ stories high, size 20x30 consisting of 8 rooms and summer kitchen.

The purchaser will be entitled to possession on the first day of March next.

The conditions of sale are as follows:

The purchaser will pay ten per cent of the purchase money at the time of sale, and the balance in 30 days, without interest.

The purchaser may, however, at his option, if the land be sold in block, leave the sum of $6,000 part of the purchase money, unpaid, to be secured by mortgage upon said lands, for a term not exceeding 5 years, with interest payable yearly at 7 per cent. per annum. If the land be sold in two parcels the purchaser of each parcel may leave the sum of $3 00) unpaid, to be secured by mortgage as aforesaid.

The purchaser must elect at the time of sale which mode of payment he will adopt.

The other conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of the said Court.

Further information may be obtained on application to R. H. Dennistoun, Esq., Solicitor, Peterborough, or to the undersigned,

Naught but Death Divorces;

OR,

LADY AUDREY'S SACRIFICE.

"'You will never be allowed to meet me again,' said the captain; 'your husband looks as cross as only a British husband can look.'

"Ah me! He bewildered me with flattery, with sarcasm, with satire. When the evening was drawing to a close, he said to me:

"'My beautiful Elodie, do not go back to that hateful bondage, to the tyrant who delights in showing his power over you. Come with me.'

"I went. It is a common story—sad enough for a tragedy. You do not turn from me? Heaven bless you for ever and ever! You think I was easily tempted?

"I was so young—I knew so little; if one hand had touched my shoulder, if one voice had whispered in my ear, 'Stop—think of what you are doing,' I should not have gone. I only thought how vexed Sir Roche would be, how it would punish him for having scolded me. I never thought of myself, of my blighted life, my lost name—never at all, believe me; I was so young and so thoughtless.

"I was only one week with Captain Dighton. He took me to Paris, and then I awoke to a sense of what I had done. In one week I had found out his true character. It was selfish, utterly heartless, utterly without principle, utterly without honor. My heart rose in hot rebellion against him, and I longed to be again with the noble loyal man whose life I had blighted.

"Then I realized that by one act of mad folly I had lost my position, my name, all that was of value in the world. I had placed a barrier between myself and my old life. I had lost all. Only Heaven knows what that awakening was like. In one week we quarreled, and I left Captain Dighton.

"I came hither, not knowing whither to go and what to do. I am called Mrs. Dighton here because unhappily my trunks and my letters bore that name; I did not dare to change it. After a time a mad hope came to me. I said to myself that my husband was a just man; that his wrath and anger were reasonable; that I had outraged and insulted him—yet that surely, when he knew how I had repented, he would forgive me. I resolved that I would live here in seclusion year after year until I had lived down my sin, and then he would surely forgive me.

"It was such a foolish, futile hope. I can give you no stronger proof of how utterly foolish I was than in telling you this belief of mine—that Sir Roche would forgive me. I wrote him letters full of such passionate sorrow and anguish that I believe, had he read one, he would have relented.

"But he never read them; they all came back to me unopened; and then I knew that he was seeking a divorce from me. I made no defense; what could I say? The divorce was granted. Captain Dighton's rage, when he found that he had a large sum of money to pay, was something fearful. I will not tell you of the letters he wrote, or what he said. I will tell you about myself.

"It came to me like a thunderbolt—the knowledge that I was no longer Sir Roche's wife. I could not believe it or realize it. I could not understand it. If I had been condemned to imprisonment, there would have been reason in it.

"In the madness of my foolish youth I had sinned, and I deserved to suffer for it; but that we two should still be living, yet no longer husband and wife—I could not understand it.

"My solicitor told me that I was free to marry again. How could that be, when my heart was breaking with sorrow that I had sinned against Sir Roche? I declare to you that for months I was utterly stunned. I could not realize that I was not Sir Roche's wife. Still even then I did not lose heart. I thought that, though Sir Roche had done this he had perhaps only done it to justify himself. For all that I knew it might have been the custom—he might have been compelled to do so, but he would forgive me in the years to come, when he saw how I repented—how I lived, in solitude, in seclusion, hoping always to win his pardon and regain his affection. I said to myself, 'When he sees that I forget everything but him, he will forgive me.' For five long years I lived in these little rooms, striving to win back the love I had lost, the position I had forfeited; and one day Sir Roche's solicitor came to see me. Heaven grant that no creature living may ever feel the same pang of disappointment that I felt! I had but one thought, my repentance was accepted at last, the time of my penance was over. I had lived down my sin, my husband was going to forgive me. I thought all these things—none of them were true. The solicitor had come to make some permanent arrangement about the income that Sir Roche allowed me, and to tell me that Sir Roche was married.

"'To whom?' I asked; and the lawyer looked alarmed. 'That doesn't concern you, madam,' he answered.

"'Tell me,' I cried, 'the name of the woman who has dared to take my name and my place!'

"'I must remind you, madam, that you have forfeited both,' he said, with a low bow; neither one nor the other belongs to you now.'

"Since then I have despaired. I was so young and so thoughtless when I did that reckless deed. Heaven grant that no creature may ever feel the same pang of repentance. Now I can only die of my despair. You do not turn from me?"

"No," said Audrey, and she drew the golden head down until it rested on her breast. "The sin was great; I recoil from that. It was a great, grievous, foolish sin; it seems to me to have no excuse. You were not driven to it by unkindness; not even by the greatness of your love for another."

"No; but otherwise beforehand I had not thought of it," declared Elodie.

"Now you have suffered very cruelly. But there must be suffering where there is sin; they always go together."

Elodie raised her golden head; the flush had died from her face, leaving it marble-white.

"There is one person," she said, "whom I will never forgive. I forgive Archer Dighton, who spoiled my life. I forgive Sir Roche, who has been so hard and cruel, who has judged me without mercy, who has refused to pardon me; I forgive the aunt who neglected me and filled my mind with ideas that were all wrong.

"But I will never forgive the woman who married my husband—who took the place that I might have regained but for her. You tremble! Ah, my story has angered you! I cannot forgive her. How could any woman marry a man whose wife was still living and seeking forgiveness? I do not know whether she was rich or poor, whether she was noble or plebeian; but I hate her!"

She paused a few minutes, for Audrey's face had grown very pale.

"You cannot conceive," she said, "how I hate her! I think so much of Rowan, for I was very happy there. I picture her in the rooms I loved, wearing the jewels I wore, taking my place, the servants all calling her 'Lady Villiers.' I can imagine Sir Roche going to consult her, and I hate her.

"I know that I am dying.

"Dr. Borat told me this morning that my life was a matter of days unless I could control the nervous fever that is killing me. I cannot control it, for I am always thinking of her who dare to call herself Lady Villiers while I live. Granting that I forfeited my place, still he has no right to put any one else in it. I hate her."

"Perhaps she did not know," remarked Audrey, gently—"it is possible that she did not know—Sir Roche had been married."

"She must have known—every one knew; my portrait hangs in the gallery at Rowan."

Audrey did not tell her that it had been burnt.

"Sir Roche stripped my rooms; he sent everything to me that had once belonged to me. But I noticed that he did not send my portrait. You know how my hopes rested on that; he kept that by him."

Audrey remembered the pitiless voice that had said: "I tore her portrait from the walls and burned it."

"Perhaps," continued the feeble voice, "this person whom they call by my name has ordered it to be taken away. I shall never see Rowan again now that she is there."

The sweet face bent more kindly over her, the gentle voice whispered more gently:

"I have something to tell you about this lady. I know her."

The golden head and white face were raised quickly, and then fell again.

"You know her?" interrogated Elodie. "Tell me about her."

"I will tell you all I know," said Audrey. "To begin, she never was half so fair as you. She was quite a simple girl, a clergyman's daughter, and knew nothing of the world.

"She had never heard of Sir Roche, and she had never seen him until she met him at a friend's house; there they fell in love with each other, and Sir Roche asked her to be his.

"He never told her that he had been divorced from his wife—she never dreamed of such a thing. He had taken every precaution too that she should not know it.

"The servants at Rowan were changed; there was no way in which she could know it. If anyone inadvertently spoke of Lady Villiers, she, poor child, thought that they meant Sir Roche's mother. She was a simple girl and she loved Sir Roche very dearly.

"At last, quite suddenly—without any warning—the story of Sir Roche's marriage and divorce was brought home to her.

"At first she was incredulous; she would not believe it. She went to him and spoke to him about it. He said that it was true—every word of it.

"She did not upbraid him; she told him the simple truth—that she had never believed in divorces, and never should—that the notion of it was altogether against her conscience, altogether wrong. And she left him that same day. She gave up wealth, position, name—above all, his love and her happiness—for her conscience's sake, and she went back home to her father's house. Now do you hate her?"

Hot tears fell on the white face.

"No—not now," she said; "she is a noble woman."

Audrey went on in a lower voice:

"She took her wedding ring from her finger, and she forbade any one to call her Lady Villiers. She made no compromise, but she cast herself off entirely from the life she loved.

"Then for a long time she was very ill—lying between life and death. You will not wonder at that—it was a terrible wrench for her. When she recovered she was almost afraid at first of facing her new life. Then an idea came to her; Heaven sent it. She was thinking one morning what she could do with her spoiled and blighted life. She said to herself, 'There must be one woman on the face of the earth just as unhappy as I am myself, and that is Elodie. I will go and find her; I will try and cheer and comfort her. I will make amends to her for the unconscious injury I have inflicted upon her.'"

"She is a noble woman," repeated Elodie.

"She carried out her idea," said Audrey. "She left home again, but this time it was to seek out her whom the world had forgotten."

She clasped her tender arms around the trembling figure, and touched the pale face with her lips. "You do not hate me now, Elodie, do you?" she asked, gently.

"Was it you? I am not surprised. I have always felt that you were different from the rest of the world—that you were more than an ordinary friend to me. No, I do not hate you; I love you with all my heart!"

The sweet, gentle girl encircled the trembling figure with her arms. She laid the tired head lovingly on her breast, and forgot her own sorrows and wrongs in the sorrow of the unhappy lady before her.

"I feel, Elodie, that I have a claim upon you. I shall stay with you and nurse you until you are well again."

"I shall never be well," said Elodie; "but I shall be happy. It will be like another life. How wonderful it all seems! And you were strong enough to do that—to leave him—to give up Rowan? I wish—oh, how I wish that I had been more like you. Tell me about Rowan. I loved the place so much."

Audrey talked to her until the golden head drooped and the tired eyes were closed in slumber.

CHAPTER XIV.

The burning summer heat had passed, the corn had been gathered in, the fruit had been plucked from the trees, and the lovely earth lay resting in the sunlight of autumn. The sea was full of deep melodies.

Elodie spent whole hours in listening to its music. One bright morning she was lying quite still, watching the waves.

She was so changed that she looked like another Elodie. The despair and unrest had left her; her face was calm, sweet and sad. She was worn to a shadow, but her eyes were still bright.

Her true and faithful nurse—the one sincere friend to whom she owed everything—stood by her side watching every look.

No mother could have been kinder—no sister more tender. Suddenly the dark eyes opened and looked at her.

"Audrey," she said, "I should like to see him once more—just to tell him that am sorry for the past, and hear him say that he forgives me. Would he come if you asked him?"

There was something so wistful in the pleading voice that Audrey's eyes filled with tears.

"I am sure he will not refuse," she replied.

Lest there should be any error, she went herself at once to the telegraph office and sent a telegram to him. It ran thus:

"From Audrey Brooke, Rookdene, to Sir Roche Villiers, Rowan Abbey, King's Wynne: Come to me at once, without fail; you are particularly wanted."

She knew that he loved her so well that if she had asked him to go to the other end of the world for her he would have done it.

The moment Sir Roche read her summons he started for Rookdene. He did not know why Audrey wanted him, but he had some vague idea that it was in relation to unfortunate Elodie.

No matter what it was, he must obey her. He traveled incessantly, yet it was evening before he reached Medina Villas.

He had never seen Audrey since that terrible hour in which she had parted from him, when they had stood face to face with the story of his first marriage between them. His heart beat, his strong form trembled, and his face blanched as he stood in the little drawing-room waiting for her.

She came in, tall, slender, and graceful, with the same pure face, the same sweet smile, and he could have knelt and kissed the hem of her dress. When the clear light of the pure eyes fell upon him a great fearless sob rose to his lips, a great shudder passed over him. She held out her hand to him in kindly greeting.

"You are very good to come so quickly," she said; and then there was a few minutes' embarrassed silence. Audrey, with her quick woman's tact, was the first to break it.

"You will have guessed, perhaps, why I sent to you," she said; "Elodie is dying, and she wanted to see you once more.

"Are you staying with her?" he asked.

"I have been here since June," she answered.

"How good you are, Audrey—how noble, how unselfish. Your father wrote me and told me whither you were going, and with what idea you had begun another life."

"We will not talk about it," she said gently. "Elodie was alone in the world and quite forgotten. I found her in despair; now she is calm and tranquil, and ready to die. That is better than to have worn away my life in useless lamentation or in sullen gloom; there is something in it that fits my notion of justice. Roche, you will be very kind to her; I have learned to love her very dearly."

He looked slightly embarrassed.

"I do not see what is to be gained by seeing her, Audrey," he began, "unless you really wish it."

"I do really wish it," she said firmly. "She will die happier for having seen you and heard you say that you forgive her."

"I will do it," he said, "no matter what it costs me."

He sat down, and Audrey told him all about Elodie's illness, and how the doctors said she was really dying of a broken heart.

At first there was no definite malady; it was the fret and fever of the unhappy soul, the grief, the despair, the baffled love and pride, the lost ambition, that wore the fragile body away. Lately a nervous fever had set in, and of that Elodie was dying.

Sir Roche was not ashamed of the tears that rained down his face, of the sobs that he could not conceal, when Audrey told him all the pathetic details of the lonely life, and how Elodie had been hoping always that he would forgive her. There was a light not all of earth on her face; her words were sweet and wise.

When she had finished speaking she said to him:

"It is too late for you to see her this evening, Roche; come back in the morning, and I will take you to her."

Without another word he took her hand, kissed it, and left her.

Rest and Comfort to the Suffering.

"BROWN'S HOUSEHOLD PANACEA" has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures Pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and Heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixir or Liniment in the world, should be in every family, handy for use when wanted, "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 6-1y

Mothers! Mothers!! Mothers!!!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere. 25 cents a bottle.

GREAT BONA-FIDE CHEAP SALE OF

FANCY AND STAPLE DRY GOODS

FOR ONE MONTH

At THOMAS KELLY'S,

CORNER OF SIMCOE AND GEORGE STREETS.

We respectfully direct attention to the above announcement, and have to say that in consequence of the general appearance of trade, the near approach of a seemingly dull winter, and the fact of having an enormous stock—ONE OF THE LARGEST AND BEST IN THE TOWN—we have determined to commence a Great Bona-fide Cheap Sale

ON SATURDAY NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR ONE MONTH

Surplus Stock will not be carried over, no matter what the sacrifice. The prices will tell, and the goods will move out quickly as they must be sold. In order to make this Sale a GRAND SUCCESS, we have decided to make the reductions on the whole stock. The Reductions will be general, and not confined to a few leading articles. BARGAINS IN SILKS. BARGAINS IN DRESS GOODS. BARGAINS IN HOSIERY and GLOVES. BARGAINS IN UNDERCLOTHING. BARGAINS IN BLANKETS. BARGAINS IN LINENS and SHEETINGS. BARGAINS IN COTTONS. BARGAINS IN PRINTS. BARGAINS IN TWEEDS and CLOTHS.

BARGAINS in Every Line, and ONE PRICE to All!

Other dealers have asked us to postpone our annual sale this year until after the usual holiday trade was over, so as not to spoil their profits. Profits or no profits, the sale must go on. The people must have a benefit. ☞Parties Buying by the Piece Liberally Dealt with. These Goods are not shop worn nor bankrupt stock, but this season's purchases. We have too many and must unload. The Superior Quality of our goods together with the prices at which they are sold are inducements of especial interest to every buyer.

☞Call and Inspect. No Trouble to Show Goods. THOMAS KELLY.

A LEAP-YEAR VISION.

Can I forget that winter night
In eighteen eighty-four,
When Nellie, charming little sprite,
Came tapping at the door?
"Good evening, miss," I blushing said.
For in my heart I knew—
And knowing, hung my pretty head—
That Nellie came to woo

She chaped my big red hand, and fell
Adown upon her knees!
And cried, "You know I love you well,
So be my husband, please!"
And then she vowed she'd ever be
A tender wife and true—
Ah, what delight it was to me
That Nellie came to woo.

She'd lace my shoes and darn my hose,
And mend my shirts, she said.
And grease my comely Roman nose
Each night on going to bed.
She'd build the fires and fetch the coal,
And split the kindling, too—
Love's prejudice o'erwhelmed her soul
When Nellie came to woo.

And as I, blushing, gave no check
To her advances rash
She twined her arms around my neck,
And toyed with my moustache:
And then she pleaded for a kiss,
While I—what could I do
But coyly yield me to that bliss
When Nellie came to woo?

I am engaged, and proudly wear
A gorgeous diamond ring,
And I shall wed my lover fair
Some time in gentle spring.
I face my doom without a sigh—
And so, forsooth, would you,
If you but loved as fond as I,
And Nellie came to woo.

EASTERN DAIRYMEN.

NEXT CONVENTION IN PETERBOROUGH IN FEBRUARY.

The executive committee of the Eastern Dairymen's association met in Belleville last Thursday afternoon. Present—D. Derbyshire, President; D. Vandewater, Thos. Walker, Joseph Rousell, Ira Morgan, D. Macpherson, P. Hinman, and Henry Wade, Toronto. The arrangements for the annual convention were made. It was decided to hold the convention in Peterborough on the third Wednesday in February at 10 o'clock, one week later than that of the Western Association.

The programme adopted for speakers includes the following: Hon. Harris Lewis, President of the New York State Association, on "The Manufacture of Dairy Butter;" Prof. L. B. Arnold, Rochester, N. Y., on "The Manufacture of Fancy Butter and Cheese;" Prof. Roberts, of Cornell University, on "Butter, Cheese, and Beef;" Prof. Brown, of Guelph, on "The Dairy Cow and Feeding." The finances were shown to be in good condition, $500 being on hand. Much satisfaction is expressed at the success of the system of employing two traveling instructors, and they will likely be re-engaged. About 92,000 boxes of cheese were made in the Belleville district this year.

A GRAFTED SKULL.

A girl employed in a New York button factory had her entire scalp torn off by accident, and is now in St. Luke's Hospital, where she has had a new scalp grafted on. The process has occupied six years and the house mother says she has suffered more than any other three persons ever in the hospital. Bits of flesh the size of a grain of rice were cut from the arms of physicians, nurses or whomsoever would volunteer, and these were plunged into the raw head to root and grow. Frequently these grafts would not take root, when the process was repeated. The girl supplied from her own limbs many hundred grafts. It has required 14,263 of these to cover her head. Of course the hair will never grow again, but with a wig "Lucy" looks very well.

Highly Agreeable.

One very valuable feature of Dr. Dow's Pleasant Worm Syrup is, that it is highly agreeable to take, and all varieties of Worms, tape worm included, can be expelled by it, without recourse to harsh and sickening drugs. 1-2t

Ready-made Mantles, only $2.50. At Turnbull's.

"HE HAIN'T EAGER FOR THE CONTEST."

"Mr. Smith do you know the character of Mr. Jones?

"Wall, I rather guess I do, Judge."

"Wall, what do you say about it?"

"Wall, he ain't so bad a man after all."

"Wall, Mr. Smith, what we want to known is: Is Mr. Jones, a quarrelsome and dangerous disposition?

"Wall, Judge, I should say that Tom Jones is very vivid in verbal exercise, but when it comes to personal argument, he hain't eager for the contest."

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle by Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Taylor & McDonald.

A MAN WHO ROSE EARLY

Old Mr. S——came sauntering down to the front gate a night or two ago, and interrupted a long conversation between his daughter and a very intimate male friend.

"Why pa," inquired the damsel, "ain't you up late?"

"Just got up," said the old gentleman, shortly; "thought I'd come out and see the sun rise!"

And then the son rose from the rustic bench and sadly hied him home-wards.

Honor to Whom Honor is due.

Honor the name of Dr. Scott Putnam, inventor PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR. Many less deserving men have their names enrolled among those considered benefactors of their race. Why not his? Ask those who have used Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor what they think of it? Their thankful hearts cannot sound his praise to high. Safe, sure and painless. Beware of cheap substitutes. Sold everywhere by druggists, etc. N. C. POLSON & CO., Kingston, Proprietors.

GLADSTONE.

Saturday next, if Mr. Gladstone lives, will close the 74th year of as brilliant a career as any in history. No man in England or out of it has done so much for the human species as Mr. Gladstone. In the face of a system the most conservative of any in the world, he has striven for and achieved reforms which will send his name down the ages with far more acclaim than that of his great departed rival. The Army Bill, the Disestablishment of Irish Church, and the Land Act, are three monuments to his genius which will make him long remembered as a true friend of the people; who, when he dies, will have lost the greatest leader they ever had.

Be Careful What you Eat.

The best medical authorities declare that worms in the human system are often induced by eating too freely of uncooked fruit and too much meat, cheese, etc. Whatever may be the cause, Freeman's Worm Powders are speedy and safe to cure; they destroy the worms, and contain their own cathartic to expel them. 1-2t

The 2-year-old son of Mr. Bladen, of St. Thomas, obtained possession of a razor in a room of one of the boarders and attempted to shave himself, cutting a gash through his cheek five inches long. Its mother found it with the razor in its hand, covered with blood. It will probably die.

John B. Vert, Hamilton, says: McGregor's Speedy Cure for Dyspepsia and Indigestion is cheap at fifty times the price asked for it. I am a commercial man, and travel continually, and would no more think of leaving home without a bottle of McGregor's Speedy Cure in my valise than I would of leaving my team at home and going on foot." Free trial bottles at J. McKee's Drug Store. Regular Size, fifty cents and one dollar. 1.2t

It is stated that a syndicate, with Mr. Senecal at its head, has made overtures to the government for the purchase of the Intercolonial railway, with a view of selling it again, as in the case of the North Shore.

One of the most notable properties of Dr. Wheeler's Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya is its sustaining power during active mental and physical exertion. Business men, editors, clergymen, lawyers physicians, and all classes engaged in any occupation requiring great application and consequent fatigue, will find this remedy invaluable, as it will enable them to accomplish their work with comparative ease. Phosphates of Lime is an active agent of nutrition, constituting more than fifty per cent of the system: Phosphorous, a powerful Nerve Tonic; Phosphate of Iron, a blood maker; and Calisaya an agreeable supporting Tonic. Sold by all Druggists.

At the meeting of the police commissioners of Hamilton Chief of Police Stewart requested that the Police might be armed at night. He said there are at present over seventy professional thieves and burglars in Hamilton who practiced their nefarious business principally at night, and usually they went armed.

"Some time ago my wife took a severe cough which, in spite of all we could do, grew worse and worse. She soon began to raise blood every day. It was apparent to everybody that she was in a decline and her days were short amongst us. I obtained medical advice and tried one prescription and another, but they did no good. When all hope had gone we heard of some wonderful cures by Dr. Wilson's Pulmonary Cherry Balsam, and a friend drove several miles to get several bottles for us. In two weeks she was entirely cured." This testimony given by Mr. C. A. Black, of Sweetsburgh, Pa., is that of thousands of others in this country.

Emma Coverdale, of Nelson township, Ont., sold a note for $52, purporting to have been made by John Colling, farmer, to Hemstreet & Bastedo, of Milton, and left for the west. Mr. Colling repudiated the note, but the girl's father paid up. She was found in Detroit.

Dear Sirs,—For over twenty years I have suffered greatly from Nasal Catarrh; sometimes being unable to smell or taste properly. The disease caused a severe pain over the eyes, and frequently stopped my writing on account of dizziness. The phlegm in my throat gave me much annoyance, especially in company, balls of which would occasionally fall down into my throat, and I could seldom breathe through my nose. I have taken quarts of various medicines without any apparent benefit, until I was induced, by your agent of 69 Muter street, to try your Fountain of Health. After using five bottles I am prepared to give it as my honest opinion that for the cure of Catarrh it is a grand success. I have recommended it to many of my friends, one of whom encloses his testimony with mine.

Wishing you deserved success,
I am gratefully yours,
JOSEPH BROWN.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞Price in a sealed envelope, on 6c. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Accepted a Call.

We understand that the Rev. Mr. Tovell, who has been laboring in Toronto for the past thirteen years, has accepted a call from the George Street Methodist Church, Peterborough, subject to the approval of conference.

The Bands' New Year Serenade.

On Tuesday the two town bands serenaded our citizens. We believe they were substantially rewarded. A member of the Fire Brigade Band says they were never before received so liberally, and the boys wish to publicly thank the people for their hospitable and generous appreciation of the music supplied them on New Year's day.

A Venerable Fowl.

The other day Mr. Andrew Davidson, of Ashburnham, witnessed an event that is perhaps unprecedented. A hen belonging to him that had reached the ripe age of 25 years passed away from her terrestrial roost. Mr. Davidson positively asserts that the venerable fowl was actually 25 years of age. She must have had an immense store of lay-tent vitaliy to draw on.

Merit Appreiated.

A few days ago Rev. Mr. Joliffe, Bible Christian Minister, was made the recipient of a substantial New Year's gift from friends on his circuit, who presented him with a handsome fur coat. The lady friends on the circuit also kindly remembered Mrs. Joliffe in tokens, having regard to both pleasure and comfort. Both recipients are worthy of such kind appreciation, and both are very "highly esteemed in love for their works' sake."

A Good Sale.

A sale was made at one of our business establishments, last Saturday, which reflects credit both on the town and the enterprising proprietor, Mr. Macfarlane Wilson, of "China Hall and Silver Bazaar." Mr. D.A. Wilcox, of Chatham, who was in town for the holidays on a visit to his daughter, Mrs. J. E. McIntyre, of the Oriental, made a purchase of a silver set of fourteen pieces, costing $198. It is creditable to the commercial position of the town, that a gentleman should pass by cities like Toronto and Hamilton, and give his order for such valuabe goods in Peterborough.

A Lynx Laid Out.

The lynx, catamount or wild cat, is becoming rare, but an enterprising employe of THE EXAMINER the other day secured one. Mr. T. G. Wilson, the canvassing agent of THE EXAMINER, while on his rounds on the fourth line of Dummer, left his horse and proceeded on foot, "across lots," to a farm house. On his return, with the instinctive desire of a printer to have a "stick" in hand, or from the habit of "getting up clubs," he picked up a bludgeon and carried with him. His shortest course lay through a swamp, where there was a trail. Suddenly he came across a lynx, crouched for a leap, and at the moment the brute looked the size of a Christmas steer. The lynx made a spring, and the printer, acting promptly, brought him a blow across the neck that stunned him, and he afterwards dispatched him outright. The animal measures about four feet from snout to the termination of his rather brief caudal extension. The skin is now in the taxidermist's hands. The lynx-hide reporter is no longer a myth.

The "Sporting" Seance.

The unusual event of a boxing, sparring and wrestling contest attracted a fairish assemblage at the Opera House on Friday night last. Paddy Bain, the professional pugilist, was the leading spirit of the enterprise, and his little stroke of business had very fair financial results. The entertainment was opened by a fine display of club swinging by Mr. T. McNaughton. This was followed by some clever feats on the horizontal bar by Mr McFadden. Then came a "set-to" with the gloves between Harrison, of Lindsay and Toronto (according to circumstances), and Graham, of Oshawa, which was good enough pour passer le temps. This was followed by another glove-banging bout between Reynolds, a local sport, and Jack Smith, "of New York," in which the local man had rather the best of the fun. Reynolds and Harrison then had a brush, in which the former lost the laurels he had gained in the first contest. The stalwart athlete from Lindsay (and Toronto, according to circumstances), had the best of the bout. The wrestling match, best two out of three falls, was "won in a canter" by Harrison. The entertainment was brought to a close with two rounds and the "wind-up," between Bain and Harrison, which was supposed to be the best display of scientific boxing ever seen in Peterborough.

Thanks.

The carrier boys of the EXAMINER wish to return thanks for the handsome reception they received from their patrons while making their New Year's calls.

Fairweather & Co.'s supply of Mantles is pronounced to be the finest in the town. All sizes and styles for ladies and children. Mantle Cloths sold by the yard very cheap. Sole agents for Butterick's patterns. 42

Russian and German Felt Boots already at the Wholesale and Retail Establishment of R Stenson & Son.

Cheap Carpets

and House Furnishings are selling fast at W. Fairweather's. Men's and Boys' Clothing are very cheap. Overcoats, stylish and good quality at very low prices. 42

Furs! Furs!

W. Fairweather & Co. have the finest stock of Furs ever shown by them. Astracan and Dogskin Jackets and Mantles. Ladies' Silk, Satin and Brocade Circulars, Fur Lined, are elegant, and are selling fast. Their prices are right. 42

The Pulpit.

Rev. Dr. W. N. Clarke, of McMaster Hall, Toronto, will occupy the pulpit of the Baptist Church of this town on Sunday next, both morning and evening. The Rev. Mr. Munro, having accepted a call, will commence his pastoral work on the following Sunday.

Neaneah! Washing Compound

Is unlike any of the ordinary crystal preparations in its composition and action. It is the only compound, we believe, that will without any injurious effect thoroughly cleanse all fabrics. Its use dispenses with the great labour and fatigue incident to washing in the ordinary way. It never fails to satisfy. For sale by all grocers. 49-52t

Time is Money.

Time and money will be saved by keeping Kidney-Wort in the house. It is an invaluable remedy for all disorders of the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels and for all diseases arising from obstructions of these organs. It has cured many obstinate cases after hundreds of dollars had been paid to physicians without obtaining relief. It cures Constipation, Piles, Biliousness and all kindred disorders. Keep it by you.

Remember, at R. Stenson & Son's is the only place you can buy Rock Island Hand-made Boots and Shoes, the best in the market for fall weather.

George Street Church.

The anniversary services of George Street Methodist Church took place last Sunday and Tuesday evenings, and were attended with great success. Dr. Carman preached two splendid sermons on Sunday to overflowing houses. On Tuesday evening he delivered his great lecture, "Trade and Get Rich," at the tea-meeting, which was largely attended, and was throughout a most gratifying success. The special music supplied by the choir on both occasions was worthy of the high appreciation it received.

Accepted.

We are pleased to see that Mr. Melville Millar has complied with the request of the large and influentially signed requisition from the electors of No. 2 Ward, wishing him to accept of the nomination as Councillor. Mr. Millar served the town as Councillor previous to his removal to Orillia, and while a resident of that place he was honored by occupying the Mayor's chair for three years, and the office of Reeve for another three years. We hope to see Mr. Millar elected, as he will make a valuable addition to the business ability of the Council.

Dynamite Explosion.

On New Year's day a gang of men were working at a culvert on the O. & Q. R. R. at the west side of the foot of Lake street, Ashburnham. It was necessary to blast the frozen earth, and for this purpose twenty one-pound cartridges of dynamite were thawing before a fire, where Mr. Nicholson, foreman, was superintending the work. In some manner one of the cartridges took fire, and the fire reaching the cap, a terrible explosion took place. Mr. Nicholson, who was nearest, was badly cut about the face, but it is hoped his injuries are not fatal. Two other men were also badly, but not fatally, injured. The concussion broke all the windows in the south front of Mr. J. J. Lundy's residence, some of the sash being smashed. Damage to the extent of $50 was done. The south side of Mr. H. T. Strickland's residence was similarly affected, but the damage is not so great. It is a mystery how the explosion took place without producing more terrible results and loss of life.

The Firemen's Hop.

On New Year's eve the annual Ball of the Peterborough Fire Brigade passed off with brilliant success. There was a very large attendance, about 250 having taken supper. Bradburn's Opera House was beautifully fitted up for the occasion. The seats were all removed, the floor well waxed, and the hall itself beautifully decorated. Decussating festoons of red, white and blue bunting, depended from the ceilings across the room. Evergreens were tastefully disposed, illuminated with Chinese lanterns, and pictures were liberally hung. Appropriate mottoes, such as "A Happy New Year," "A Fireman's Welcome," (which, to do the boys justice, was such as they generally get at a fire, a warm one), "Our Band, &c., &c. The gallery was hung with festoons of hose, ornamented with helmets, and other insignia of the fireman's calling. The ornamentation throughout was appropriate, and the effect very fine, and exceeded all previous attempts. The utmost harmony and enjoyment prevailed and everything passed off most agreeably. The music was supplied by "Our Band," and was of the very best. Supper at the "Little Windsor," at which 125 couples sat down, was in keeping with the first-class arrangements that marked all the preparations. Messrs. Thos. Rutherford, chief, and A. T. Smith, masters of ceremonies, acquitted themselves to universal satisfaction, and great credit is due for the completeness of all preparations and the unqualified success of the hop of 1884, to the committee of management, Messrs. Rutherford, (T.) Clegg, Marks, Gibbs, Haggart, Rutherford, (C.) and Evans. THE EXAMINER congratulates the boys on the great success of their annual ball and wishes them, personally, a happy new year, and professionally, an idle new year.

The Voice of the People. No family Dyes were ever so popular as the Diamond Dyes. They never fail. The Black is far superior to logwood. The other colors are brilliant. Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

SCHOOL ELECTIONS.

SEPARATE SCHOOL.

No 1 Ward—C. Halpin; his opponent, Mr. Laplante, having retired, he was elected by acclamation.

No. 2 Ward—J. O'Meara and T. B. McGrath were the candidates. There was considerable excitement in the contest in this ward, the voting resulting in a tie. [According to statute, the secretary shall, when declaring the state of the poll, give the casting vote].

No. 3 Ward—M. Quinlan and Timothy Giroux were candidates. Mr. Quinlan polled nine votes, and an hour having elapsed without another vote being recorded, he was declared elected.

No. 4 Ward—John Harvey was elected by acclamation.

PUBLIC SCHOOL.

In No. 1 Ward G. B. Sproule was elected by acclamation. In No. 2 Ward R. W. Errett was elected. No. 3 Ward, Melville Miller was elected. No. 4 Ward, Henry Denne, re-elected. Up to the hour of going to press we have not received the figures, but the result is as indicated above.

SPECIMEN BRICKS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

SIR,—As I was frequently present at the meetings of the Town Council when Mr. Cox was a member thereof, I can assert without fear of contradiction that Mr. Cox's conduct in the chair and at the Council board was such as to entitle him to the respect of the community. As to the manner in which Mr. Sawers has conducted himself in the Council Chamber, I refer you to the opinions expressed by our several newspapers:

EXAMINER.

"Mr. Sawers followed up his motion by a most violent speech, in which he flung broadcast the most dishonourable insinuations against various members of the Council, using language of so unparliamentary a nature that if it had been uttered on the floor of a house of parliament, the member so far forgetting himself would have been liable to receiving the attention of the Sergeant-at-Arms."

THE REVIEW.

"After a violent speech from Councillor Sawers, and much confusion and disorder, the Council broke up abruptly, without formal adjournment."

TIMES.

"There occurred one of the most disgraceful scenes we ever witnessed at this board. The lie was given by Mr. Sawers * * * One of the Councillors threatened to pound Mr. Sawers. Councillor Sawers commenced again to speak. The chairman ordered him to sit down. He refused, and the meeting then broke up in disorder."

Yours, etc.,
OBSERVER.

THE PEOPLE SAY.

That the electors will do their duty next Monday, and elect Geo. A. Cox for Mayor.

That Handel's "Gloria in excelsis," as sung by St. John's church choir last Sunday night, was magnificent.

That, if the sales of the merchants on Christmas week were as great as the "sell" in the opera house last Friday night, their bank account must be healthy.

That No. 1 Ward won't get the Post Office if Sawers is elected Mayor.

That every horse in Peterborough was tired on New Year's night.

That both bands played well on New Year's day.

That both had more instruments after their rounds than before—carried more horns home, as it were.

That thirteen out of the twenty-six candidates will be ashamed to go home next Monday night.

That a good many hats were too small on January 2nd.

That C. W. Sawers won't uphold the "dignity of that chair" this year.

That in "swearing off," stick to it, is a better ingredient than "stick in it."

That the girls value leap year privileges more highly than they do the ballot.

That they would'nt be surprised if Mr. Cox has 500 majority.

That there's nothing certain but death, taxes and candidates for councillors.

Miss Begley, of Peterborough, assisted as a vocalist at a concert at Hastings on Wednesday night of last week.

Fresh Dress Goods just received at Turnbull's. Ladies wanting a dress in January, will be able to get a length of any color at a decided bargain.

AN ORANGE PROCESSION FIRED ON.

On Wednesday last, while an Orange procession was passing Ship's Head, Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, it was suddenly fired on from the crowd. first the Orangemen thought that the firing was from powder guns carried by their friends until they saw their men fall. Four men were killed, and some ten or fifteen wounded. The police despatched from St. John at 4 o'clock Wednesday reached Harbor Grace at 9. The horse police followed part way by train and arrived next morning. The night, however, passed quietly. One hundred special constables were sworn in. There is much pent-up excitement in the neighboring villages while waiting for the arrest of the guilty ones.

MURDER IN QUEBEC.

AN OLD MAN FIFTY-TWO YEARS OF AGE, KILLS A MAN.

Patrick Murphy, aged 52 years, a patient of the Beauport asylum for 23 years past, and sent there from the Montreal jail, killed F. X. Thouin, aged 52 years, coming from St. Hyacinthe, by beating him on the head with a small wooden tub. The deceased had been accused of hiding himself under Murphy's bed where he had found him. Murphy does not feel sorry for his terrible deed.

THE ONTARIO AND QUEBEC RAILWAY.

Track-laying on the Ontario & Quebec railway is in the following state at present: From Perth the track is laid to within ten miles of Tweed; from Tweed the track is laid to Norwood, within twenty miles of Peterboro'; from Peterboro' the track is laid to Myrtle, in the Township of Whitby, and there is a gap of only fourteen miles to lay between Myrtle and Toronto. This left last week forty-four miles to be laid between Perth and Toronto.

Of those passing, 30 are from the Union School, 6 from the Separate School and Convent, 4 from Lakefield, 2 from Dummer, 1 from Douro, 2 from Ashburnham, 1 from Smith. Of the 19 who failed to take requisite marks in all the subjects, 2 are from the Separate School and Convent, 2 from Ennismore, 2 from Smith, 1 from Ashburnham, 12 from the Union School.

Of the 19 who have not sufficient marks, 6 (indicated in list by an asterisk prefixed) have been recommended, having failed only in one subject. Very many of the candidates were perfect in dictation. Reading of all was above average—of many very good. Penmanship; a marked improvement, on the whole, was visible. English grammar was their weakest subject; but the papers were unduly difficult.

The number of marks required was: one-third in every subject, and 50% or one-half of the whole marks in total. Where the first conditions were secured, 280 marks would be sufficient to pass.

Our New Watchmaker, Mr. Hughan, comes well recommended, and we are sure any work entrusted to him will be done in good style. Office lately occupied by Elias Burnham, Simcoe Steet. 18-tf

TESTIMONIALS.

Rev. R. Large says:

Being for years afflicted with Dyspepsia, and finding my health greatly improved by only a little of the Crowfoot Bitters, I am pleased to recommend it to those in like manner afflicted.

R. LARGE,
Minister of the M.E. Church, Meaford, Ont.

A St. Vincent Farmer says:

This is to certify that I have used the Crowfoot Indian Bitters, and can recommend it as a first-class medicine for the blood. Was very bad with Dyspepsia for ten years. After using the above Bitters I could eat anything I wished without feeling any discomfort after, and feel thankful for the good health I am enjoying through them.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

George A. Cox, Esq., Elected Mayor.

The Result of the Election for Councillors—Six New Members in the Board—Five of Them Councillors—A Pacific but Brisk Contest—A Large Vote Polled—Results of Other Elections.

The elections for Mayor and Councillors for 1884 took place on Monday, resulting in the triumphant return of Geo. A. Cox, Esq., as Mayor, and of five new members to the Council board. The contest for Mayor was actively fought, the despicable and underhanded tactics to defeat Mr. Cox, that were carried out during the contest having been persevered in to the last. The contest for Councillors was conducted very sharply, in number one and three wards especially. Horse-flesh was freely used, and a very full vote was polled. After five o'clock, the hour of closing the poll, the people began to gather in the neighborhood of the Town Hall, and there was a good deal of betting indulged in, chiefly on the amount of Mr. Cox's majority. It is estimated that were staked in bets, on his majority, in the interval between the closing of the polls and the receipt of the returns. At last the returns arrived, and the result of the day's voting was found to be as given below:

A THOUSAND DOLLARS

FOR MAYOR.

	Cox.	Sawers.
No. 1 Ward	171	139
No. 2 Ward	174	114
No. 3 Ward	135	115
No. 4 Ward	151	66

Thos. Cahill	196
S. F. Allin	183
John McNaughton	176
N. T. Laplante	149

WARD NUMBER TWO.

R. H. Green	231
T. Kelly	259
M. Millar	241
R. W. Errett	214
A. P. Poussette	36

It must be recollected that Mr. Poussette, though nominated, refused to be a candidate, and the few votes given him were given by those who did not know of, or who ignored the withdrawal of his candidature.

WARD NUMBER THREE.

Wm. Yelland	208
A. Rutherford	174
John Douglass	170
R. E. Wood	161
John Lynch, sr	135
E. B. Wilson	118
Dr. Burnham	20
D. Bellegham	14
C. E. Starr	13

Dr. Burnham and Messrs. D. Bellegham and C. E. Starr were not in the field, having withdrawn before polling day, thus the small number of votes opposite their names is accounted for. The number of votes polled in this ward was unprecedently large—438—which was more than the number polled at the last general election. There were only thirty or forty votes on the list unrecorded.

WARD NUMBER FOUR.

J. J. Hartley	105
Thomas Menzies	103
James Kendry	100
Frank Mason	81
Thomas Gemmel	59
Dr. Fife	46

A FEW SHORT SPEECHES.

After the above returns had been received at the Council Chamber Mr. Walter Paterson, jr., was voted to the chair, and loud cries were made for Mr. Cox, who on ascending the platform was received with enthusiastic cheers.

He said that he thanked the chairman for retiring from the mayoralty candidature in his favor, and he warmly thanked each of the electors present who had assisted in his election. He had said at the beginning of the contest that he would not ask a single elector for his vote. He had said this, not from any lack of appreciation of the honor of receiving the franchise of his fellow citizens, but he felt it was the duty of the people to elect their officers, and no words could express his sense of appreciation of the spontaneous expression of public opinion that had placed him in the, to him, proud position of Mayor of Peterborough, elected by the unsolicited suffrages of the citizens. The honor was equally as great and equally deserving of his thanks as if he had made a house to house canvass. He would make no promises except that he would do his utmost to promote the interests of the town. He had been a citizen of it for a quarter of a century, and his worst enemies would admit that he had done something to build it up and it was not likely that he would now pursue a course tending to undo the work of a lifetime. He thought he could truthfully say that no portion of the success that had attended his past career had been purchased at the expense of any other person. (Cheers.) He had always tried to give another help on his way. If he had been elected after a thorough canvas, he repeated, he would not prize it nearly so highly as he did the unsolicited return with which he had that day been honored. He had not written one word to promote his success in the contest or against his opponent. With regard to the charges that had been made against him, he was satisfied with the answer that had been made to all insinuendoes and insinuations, by the electors.

Mr. Cox resumed his seat amid enthusiastic cheers.

Mr. J. J. Hartley, of No. four ward, was thankful to the electors for placing him at the head of the poll. He had in the past tried to do his best for the interests of the town. All he had made was invested in Peterborough, and he was therefore bound to work for the welfare of the town. (Cheers.)

Mr. Kelly thanked the electors for returning him for the fourth time for No. two ward. He would pursue the same course as he had heretofore, working not for the interests of his ward alone, but for that of the town at large. (Cheers.)

Mr. Millar, also of number two ward, said if any man to-day had a right to be proud it was himself. He had appeared before the electors as a comparative stranger, had not solicited a single vote, and his handsome return showed how high a place he held in the estimation of his fellow citizens. (Cheers.)

Mr. Allin, of number one ward, said it would be the object of his honest endeavors that the people should not regret having elected him in spite of the stories circulated against him. He would do his best in the public interests. He was very glad that Mr. Cox had been elected. (Cheers.)

Mr. James Keandry briefly returned his thanks for his election, and he would do all in his power to justify the confidence of the ratepayers. (Cheers.)

Mr. Cox took occasion to say that he first received the honor of being elected Mayor in 1872, but he did not prize it so highly as the honor conferred on him to-day, by the unsolicited support of the people. He had not asked for votes because he thought the intelligence of the electors would guide them in making a choice without any prompting. He believed every elector should be compelled to vote, and that any one refusing to vote or soliciting votes, should be disfranchised. He believed it would come to this. (A voice: Is there a respectable minority?) Mr. Cox said he believed there was. He had never shown any want of respect to any man. He never had reason to do so. He believed that every sober, honest and industrious man was worthy of respect and he should receive it at his hands. (Cheers.) The charges of extravagance, etc., that had been made against him would be answered in the course of the year.

Mr. Cahill said he was afraid that he was appearing so many times before the electors, that they would be getting tired of him. (No, no.) He was glad the ratepayers had had regard to the interest of the town in selecting a Mayor like Mr. Cox. He returned thanks to his supporters in No. 1 Ward, and had nothing to say against those who had opposed him. He thought the present council was an improvement on that of last year.

Mr. A. P. Poussette being called on, said he did not appear to thank the people for his election—he had been left at home. While he was grateful to the thirty-six, who, forgetting that he was not a candidate, had voted for him, he would have been better pleased if their votes had been distributed elsewhere. He said the people should be congratulated on having Mr. Cox for Mayor. They showed that they rightly estimated his abilities to help the town, and had a just appreciation of his worth. He thought the new council was a great improvement on the old one. The members of it would meet to legislate for the interests of the town, and not to convert the proceedings into a bear garden. There was no need to say anything respecting the defeated candidate for the mayoralty, more than to hope that the defeat he had suffered to-day would prevent him from troubling the people in a similar way again. (Cheers.)

In response to a vote of thanks tendered to him, the chairman called for three cheers for the Queen and the new Mayor, which were given with a right good will, and the enthusiastic yet orderly gathering dispersed.

Several of the Councillors failed to be present to thank the electors, owing to their having to entertain the band that serenaded them.

FRESH PORK.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

SIR,—I think the question of retailing fresh pork requires some ventilation, and a little information on the subject may be useful to both the council and the ratepayers of Peterborough.

You are probably aware, Mr. Editor, that I have erected a building in Peterborough especially for the purpose of packing and curing pork, and have opened a store for the sale of meat to accommodate my wholesale customers, as the packing house is some distance from the business part of the town, but I find that the store is within the limit prescribed by the by-law for the sale of fresh meat.

Now, I have no objection to a by-law regulating the sale of butcher's meat, but I think it a mistake to include fresh pork along with other meats sold by butchers. I consider fresh pork should be free for any one to sell without the necessity of scattering a little salt over it, and then selling it as salt pork when the hog has not been an hour out of the farmer's wagon. I have seen this done frequently in Peterborough last winter, and also this fall. Thus the law is evaded, and still the public do not get the full benefit of unrestricted sale of fresh pork. I will give you one fact on this subject which is worth many theories.

In the neighboring town of Lindsay the best cuts of fresh pork have been (since the 1st of October and are now) retailing at 8 cents per pound, while in Peterborough it has been selling part of the time at 12 cents and latterly at 10 cents. Last winter there was about the same difference and also for several years past.

I will explain the reason of the reduced price in Lindsay, and would first state that I do not sell any meat either fresh or salted at retail in that town, with the exception of heads, feet and trimmings from sides prepared for curing. Nearly all the retail fresh pork trade is done by the grocers. They either buy dressed hogs on the market or they buy backs of fresh porks from me. Last year I supplied them with fresh backs all the season at $6 per 100, and they retail at 10 cents per pound. This season I am supplying them at $6 per 160, and they retail at 5 cents per pound. I am satisfied with my price and the grocers are satisfied with their profits. In buying backs they have no waste meat, every part of a back is a choice roast. I think the same arrangements would suit the ratepayers of Peterborough, and I can give them some idea of the saving it would be over the present system.

I can form a very close estimate of the quantity of hogs used in the retail pork trade; in Lindsay it will take from 12 to 15 hogs per week for six months in the year, and from what I have seen of the trade in Peterborough, I should estimate that it would require 20 to 25 hogs per week to supply the town with fresh pork during six months, although fresh pork is used freely during eight months, still I will take the lower number of hogs for six months—say 20 hogs per week for 6 months—say 26 weeks—will give 520 hogs; take the average weight at 200 pounds each, it will give a total of 104,000 pounds. Now take the difference between the retail price in Lindsay and the retail price in Peterborough, which is 2 cents per pound, multiply 104,000 by 2 cents and it will give $2,080.00, which means that the people of Lindsay could buy the quantity of fresh pork required by Peterborough for $2,080.00 less than the same quantity could be bought in Peterborough. This amount appears large, but I believe it is under the actual quantity that is sold fresh, as there are 9 butchers in Peterborough, and 20 hogs per week would be only a trifle over 2 hogs per week for each of them, besides all that is sold by grocers with a little salt sprinkled on it.

Do the ratepayers receive any more than the license fees, which, I am informed, is ten dollars for each, or about $60.00 revenue to the town from that source, to put against $2,080.00 extra cost of this article of food?

I do not wish to set myself up as a philanthropist or anything of the sort, but look at this question as a business man.

My business in Peterborough at present is only small, not more than a tithe of what I hope and expect it to be in a few years, and as it extends and we have to put up the different cuts required for the shipping trade, it will often pay me to sell certain portions of the hog fresh at home at cost or less and I don't think the ratepayers of Peterborough want any by-law interposed between them and good fresh pork at low prices.

GEO. MATTHEWS.

AUBURN WOOLEN MILLS.

The Popular Secretary Honored.

On New Year's Day a deputation of the employees of the Auburn Woolen mills, waited on the late secretary, Mr. Roach Way, and presented him with a very handsome easy chair, a pair of Persian lamb gauntlets, and a complete copy of Chambers' Encyclopedia, handsomely bound in 10 volumes.

The following address was read by Mr. J. R. Smith:—

Mr. Roach Way:

DEAR SIR, On behalf of the employees of the Auburn Woolen Company, who, being desirous of showing their appreciation for your many acts of kindness and courtesy shown towards them during your many years of service as secretary of the Company, have requested us to present you with this address and the accompanying gift as a slight memento of the regard in which you are held by them, and to assure you that although you have now retired from the company's service, and your former position may have been filled to the entire satisfaction of the Company, yet the employees miss the courteous manner and generous spirit of which you were so well possessed. Such acts as these we can assure you have been appreciated, and for you a warm place is cherished in their affections.

Regretting that we had not taken advantage of a more seasonable opportunity of presenting you with this address, and wishing you a happy and prosperous New Year,

We are respectfully yours,

Signed on behalf of the employees, { WM. SOMMERVILLE, J. R. SMITH, JOHN DONEGAN, D. MCINTOSH, AND OTHERS.

PRESENTATION.

Miss M. E. Baptie, the popular and clever teacher of No. 4 school section in this township for three years, had her good qualities pleasantly recognized at the close of the school when a social and Christmas tree was held. After the general distribution of prizes the pupils presented Miss Baptie with a writing desk, inkstand, handbag and the following address:—

DEAR TEACHER,—We your pupils take this opportunity of presenting you with this small present, on the eve of your departure from among us, with our love, for the careful and earnest manner in which you have always tried to teach us. Hoping that you will have a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

And that each year that circles past
May with earth's sweetest joys be found.
And ever find you on this day.
With health and wealth and friends around.

Signed on behalf of your pupils,

H. BATHGATE,
E. WOOD,
L. MCCONKEY,
A. NICHOLS.

Miss Baptie made a suitable and feeling reply.

A WISE TOWNSHIP.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:—

SIR,—The wisdom of the Township of Ennismore in municipal matters is greatly to be commended. They have been looking for a good Council: one carsful of the finances of the township, with a due regard to the public requirements. The taxes of the township were gratifyingly low last year and the year before, and to the Council are these facts due. The ratepayers have improved on Captain Cuttle's advice—"when found, make a note on,"—by not only making a note of the good qualities of their Council, but also by electing them this year by acclamation. I am glad to predict that the Council, composed as it is, of Mr. P. Crough, Reeve, and Messrs. O'Connor Donoghue, McCarthy and Nurse, Councillors, will look as wisely and skilfully after our township affairs, as they have in the past, and he is extravagant who wants or expects any more. Long life to the Council of 1884.

Yours, etc.,
RATEPAYER.

CONTEMPTIBLE TACTICS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—It is much to be regretted that in a municipal contest the private affairs of electors should be brought under public notice and discussion, and it is more to be regretted that any respectable journal will step out of the usual course in order to give room to any letter referring in disparaging terms to the private business of private persons, and as gratify, not only the editor's but the correspondent's malice. In last Saturday's Review I noticed a letter of Mr. Sawers' attacking, in substance, the business conduct of an admittedly honorable and eminent firm of solicitors in town, and I wish to ask if it is the usual course of journalism to insert similar epistles. If it is so, it is a most dishonorable and contemptible method of injuring the credit and professional standing of private persons.

Yours, etc.

LITERARY.

THE FOUNDER OF THE SPIRITUALIST PHILOSOPHY.

We question if our readers generally have any knowledge of what has been termed "Spiritualistic Philosophy." Spiritualism, or spiritism, as its votaries prefer, has been so often set down as mere juggling, and its curious phenomena as simply humbug, that possibly very few, even among learned men, know that it possesses a very extensive literature and even a monthly journal, the Revue Spirite.

In the list of authors whose names are famous among the table-rapping fraternity, Leon-Hippolyte Rivail, better known as Allan Kardec, has a foremost place. His chief work is entitled "The Spirit's Book," and it professes to be the result of two years steady conversation with invisible intelligences on all problems relating to human life and the universe in which we live. A perusal of it shows clearly that the wide spread notion which prevails respecting spiritist doctrine is somewhat erroneous. In many respects the book contains much that is really good and useful, although this is mingled certainly with a great deal that is frivolous and absurd.

Allan Kardec's life was a busy and a useful one. He was born at Lyons in 1803, and his family had been distinguished for many years in the magistracy and at the bar. At the age of 14 he devoted himself to teaching, and his spare hours were spent in the pursuit of botany, a study of which he was passionately fond. While a mere lad he was engaged in a project for uniting men together in one religious belief, and to this question he devoted himself for years without, however, reaching any practical result. In 1824 he determined to devote himself to the law, but the idea he very shortly renounced, owing, it is said, to some acts of religious intolerance which he suffered from his confreres.

He then began to translate French books into German, and in 1828 he purchased a seminary for the education of boys, and to this work of teaching, for which he was peculiarly fitted, he gave many of the best years of his life. From then until 1850, and indeed later, he brought out many useful educational works, chiefly on grammar and arithmetic, which had a large sale, and which are still used in several French schools. For a considerable period he was interested in the practical investigation of trance, clairvoyance, and other phenomena connected with mesmerism and magnetism.

About the year 1850, when the question of table-turning was exciting general attention, his thoughts were directed into this channel. A friend of his had two daughters who acted as "mediums" and through whom he received, it is asserted, many communications from the spirit world by means of table-rapping and planchette-writing. The views communicated to him in this singular way, were, he was informed, "to enable him to fulfil an important religious mission." After the lapse of many months he conceived the idea of publishing the replies and knowledge thus obtained as a true basis of the spiritist theory, and on communicating the notion to his unseen interlocutors they agreed, advising him as to the title "The Spirits, Book," warning him to publish it, not in his own name, but under the pseudonym of Allan Kardec.

The book thus produced sold with great rapidity, making converts in many lands and establishing spiritest doctrine in many new centres. Fifteen years afterwards Kardec enlarged and completed the spirit's book, still under invisible direction as he said, merging with it all the new information he could obtain from various sources. He also compiled four additional works, the last entitled "Genesis," having been published in 1867. These form mainly the best books of opinions which are now held by millions and which are making converts every day.

Kardec was not a medium himself, nor does he assume any previous knowledge of the theories he has set forth. In person he was of middle stature, strongly built, with a fine massive head, clear grey eyes and well defined features. His appearance was much more German than French. He was of a calm, cautious temperament, a clear reasoner, persevering in habits, and strange to say, free from mysticism. He devoted his life and fortune to the propagation of the movement which he originated, and lived in the simplest manner in the very heart of Paris. He was grave and slow of speech, quiet, unassuming in manner, and so sober in demeanor that he was never known to laugh. Hundreds of persons high in rank and fame visited him, among others Napoleon III, who firmly believed in many spiritist phenomena. Allan Kardec died March 31st, 1869, and his remains were interred in the cemetery of Montmartre, where hundreds assemble every year on the anniversary of his death to speak in glowing words of his worth and fame, and to bestrew his grave with flowers.

As an example of the spiritist doctrine we give the following from "The Spirits' Book":—

"The moral teaching of the highest spirits may be summed up like that of Christ, in the gospel maxim, "Do unto others as you would they should do unto you;" that is to say, do good to all and wrong to no one. This principle of action furnishes mankind with a rule of conduct of universal application from the smallest matters to the greatest."

"They teach us that selfishness, pride and sensuality are passions which bring us back towards the animal nature, by attaching us to matter; that he, who in this lower life, detatches himself through contempt of worldly trifles and through love of the neighbor, brings himself back towards the spiritual nature; that we should all make ourselves useful according to the means which God has placed in our hands for trial; that the strong and the powerful owed aid and protection to the weak; and that he who misuses strength and power to oppress his fellow creatures violates the law of God."

PRESENTATION.

On the evening of January 2nd a great many of Mr. Jas. Donaldson's friends assembled at his residence and had a very enjoyable time, the house being well filled. After all had arrived Mr. and Mrs. Donaldson received the following address and presentation, the address being read by A. J. H. Strike, and the presentation made by Misses Stewart and Baxter. The presentation consisted of one doz. of silver knives and forks, a beautiful cruet, a silver sugar bowl, accompanied with one doz silver spoons and other valuables, which amounted to about fifty dollars. The following is the address:—

To Mrs. and Mr. Donaldson:

DEAR FRIENDS,—We have assembled this evening for the purpose of spending a few hours together in social conversation and enjoyment, and while we take pleasure in doing this, we also experience a feeling of sadness and regret when we remember that you have decided to remove so soon from our midst.

Our feelings are but faintly expressed when we say that we shall miss you, not only as a neighbor, but as a good friend. We then, as your friends and neighbors, ask you to take these presents as a memento of the deep friendship existing between you and us, hoping that as in the future you use them, you will be led to recall many pleasant hours together with the few we now are spending, and may your motto be in the future as in the past, "Onward and upward," remembering the command and promise, "Weary not in well doing, etc., etc.,

In conclusion allow us to wish you success and prosperity in your new home; also in behalf of your numerous friends in this vicinity and elsewhere allow us to wish your esteemed lady and yourself "a happy New Year, and many happy returns.

After partaking of the dainty repast provided by the ladies, and participating in other equal enjoyments the party dispersed, all acknowledging the pleasantness of the evening.

MUNICIPAL.

Wise men are being led to perceive the honor there is attached to one who surrounds the municipal table, that is if we judge by the number seeking such a position. Almost every man in South Monaghan imagines to himself, "I am fit to run," and its about ditto in North Monaghan, and why shouldn't it be, when we learn of the innumerable (almost) host seeking office in our flourishing town, Peterborough, and, by the way, if Peterborough ranks first as a business town in the province, undoubtedly for office seekers she cannot be beaten in our fair Dominion.

TEA MEETING.

The great annual tea held here on Christmas day was financially, and as far provisions were concerned, a success. The as programme was not such as to obtain an orderly meeting, notwithstanding money was what they wanted and they got it. We believe it was decided to hold no more teas, at least annual ones here. Oh! what a wise resolution.

The Agony of a Cough.

Let any person with a fresh cough imagine it gaining on him day after day and year after year. Let him couple with it the dread of consumption, the long years of weakness, the months of acute suffering, the agonies of death. He will then not hesitate to obtain the best cough remedies at the first appearance of this evidence of disease. Mr. B. Dickson, of Danville, Que, says, "I have been for several years alarmed by an affection of the lungs. After a time I obtained and used several bottles of Dr. Wilson's Pulmonary Cherry Balsam. Before the first was finished I had raised a number of hard gluey globules and my troubles left me entirely."

Application may be made to Mr. Dawson Kennedy, Valuator for the Company.

WHAT SHALL I GIVE HIM?

Is a puzzling question. It is easy enough to find things for the "hers," in fact the variety is embarrassing; but the selection of a present for the male sex is more difficult. We have known Ladies to present their Husbands with useful Household Articles and it is not a bad idea, but if you wish to give the man something for personal use, the list to choose from is rather short. CLOTHES are Staple—always in demand. Why not a new OVERCOAT or SUIT? A SET OF SHIRTS, some fine HOSIERY, HANDKERCHIEFS, or NECKWEAR? or, if that is not appropriate, give the Domestic Man a HOUSE COAT OR WRAPPER. While to the Gay Young Man, SHIRT STUDS, SCARF PINS, SILK TIE or SCARF. Now that you have the hint what to get, we will modestly add that a good place to get everything of this sort is right here, where we are making a Special Holiday Display of Useful and Ornamental Wearin Apparel for Men and Boys.

OVERCOATS! OVERCOATS!

Owing to the backwardness of the Season, OUR STOCK will be SOLD REGARDLESS OF COST prior to Stock-taking.

APSLEY.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

TEMPERANCE FESTIVAL.

The annual festival on behalf of the Apsley good templar s society was held on 'Xmas evening in their own hall, in the village. The day being fine and the sleighing good the attendance was large, filling the hall sufficiently for comfort. The tea provided was abundant, and of the best quality. The home choir furnished some excellent music; also, the Reynolds family enlivened the occasion, displaying considerable musical talent. The chair was occupied by J. W. Ratcliff, an address being given by the father of the same; also a brief lecture, and readings by Mr. R. Walton and others. The proceeds of the tea and social resulted in extinguishing the debt on the organ, and leaving a surplus in the treasurer's hands.

PRESENTATION.

On 'Xmas eve the parlour of J. W. Ratcliff, merchant in Apsley, gave pleasing evidence of the Christian unity and benevolence of the inhabitants of that district. A party of friends, representing the several Christian denominations of the community, having assembled, an address was read, and a very liberal purse of money presented to the Rev. F. Ratcliff, who for several months has preached the Gospel in four different stations, which would otherwise have been almost entirely destitute of Sabbath services. The address was read by Mr. Rowland Walton, who (as he has opportunity) is at present kindly assisting in this work and labor of love.

Wisely Adopted by Dairymen.

The adoption by most of the promient dairymen and farmers of the United States of the Improved Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt, is a proof of their wisdom in their business point of view. Nearly all winter butter is colored in order to make it marketable, and this color is the best, in regard to purity, strength, permanence and perfection of tint.

AMONG THE LAKES OF NORTHERN PETERBOROUGH.

Having often heard of the romantic and picturesque country among the lakes of Northern Peterborough, I determined to explore forest and stream with the view of becoming thoroughly acquainted with the country, its physical features of which I had heard much, also the inhabitants and their present and future prospects. I secured a good team at Lakefield, hitched to a upon which were loaded two bags of oats, and I was soon on my way. After driving a short distance one bag slipped through the strap with which it was tied and was hanging under my rear axletree. My team being high-spirted, I reined them up by the fence, and after making them secure and strapping the bags snugly together shoving them lengthwise under the seat, I resumed my journey through the township of Douro along the east bank of Katchewaneka Lake to Young's Point (six miles distant.) About one mile from Lakefield stands the residence of the late Col. Strickland, who located there in 1830.

SUBSTANTIAL BUCKBOARD

THE OLD LOG HOUSE,

the first one erected in that locality was removed several years since. A tree rises near the spot where it stood, around which memory will love to linger for generations yet to come, it being the birth place of a numerous family of descendents, some of whose names have been connected with the historical scenes of the old and new world.

Having a short time previous had the pleasure of reading the life of Col. Strickland, written by himself, entitled "Twenty-seven Years in Canada," I doted much upon seeing the old log house from which so many useful lives emanated. But it had passed away as well as the hand that carved it out of the forest. A new gothic stone structure his been erected by the roadside, surrounded by a beautiful grove of many varieties of forest trees, with walks and flower beds laid out by the Colonel's own hand. There is something mournfully sad in contemplating the or other objects which are green in the memory with fond association. The heart goes out in sorrow when they are gone as if some loved friend had been laid aside in the "grassy grave." The old house was our home in childhood and memory paints its scenes again as it was of yore. We see our mother's kind face and run to her to be comforted. We listen to her words and our childish clouds are dispersed by the sunlight of her loving smiles. We hear our father's voice in patient and repeated admonition and can now realize a parent's earnest solicitude for the welfare of his child. Here are our dear brothers and darling sisters again, and in our imaginations our childish plays are revived, in the old ruined house. It is sweet, though sad to recall the scenes—sad because the picture is unreal, and will pass away like the mist of the morning.

THE OLD LANDMARKS

of Smith and Douro are passing away with those who reared them. A few objects here and there along the pathway of life are preserved and cherished, but the greater number are allowed to perish to the sorrow of living descendents. Few people there are who see beyond the narrow circle of their own time, or who, seeing, care for the joys of those who follow them. The Stricklands, Hulls, Harveys, Waltons, Garbutts, Nelsons, Casements, Fitzgeralds, Reids, Davidsons, Sanderson's, Nugents, Bells, Milburns, and a score of other pioneers of Smith and Douro, who were the original landmarks are nearly all gone. Every stream knew them, every hill and dale felt the pressure of their feet. Their rude "dug outs" swept silently across the wood-fringed lakes. The old latch string, which hung out so many long years to denote to the wayside traveller that the occupant was at home, has been pulled in for the last time. The old andirons are gone. The great crane from which swayed the noonday meal no longer turns upon its hinges. The ashes from the old stone fire place have been scattered by many an autumn wind; and to-day only a are standing as monuments to mark the spot where, like a blossoming vine, morning, noon and night for half a century around that rudely constructed board where clustered youth, beauty, virtue purity and old age. Waving fields of grain now stand upon the hillside and line the sloping dale o'er which their feet trod. The busy hum of human lives has taken the place of silence and shadow.

About one and a half miles north is "The Grove," established 1871, being a preparatory school for young males from eight to twenty years of age, founded by Sparham Sheldrake, son of Edward Sheldrake, late of Ixworth Prior, Suffolk, England. The building is a good substantial two story structure with a verandah along the front, situated on the bank of the lake in a beautiful grove. The grounds are laid out with walks and shade trees of different varieties. The interior is all that could be desired in point of cleanliness, comfort and home-like accessories. Under the very efficient management of Mr. Sheldrake, who was educated at Cambridge, England, it cannot fail to be a success. There was a large number of young men in attendance upon whose faces was pictured health and contentment. Success to the "Grove."

The next two miles was made through a fine farming country, while to the left in the lake was plainly visible "Polly Cow Island," where the

BEAUTIFUL INDIAN GIRL

"Polly Cow," (a daughter of "Handsome Jack," a Chippawa Chief) was buried, and which circumstance I shall subsequently allude to. Two companies of men with teams were repairing the road, moving great stones, stumps, logs, etc., which had made it for a long time almost impassable. The portion passed over was such a decided improvement, I could not refrain from giving one of the boys a quarter at his own suggestion; he seemed very thirsty, and started for the hotel near by. The day was cold and a blinding snow storm had set in. The next three miles I made over the new road through a barren, sandy, rolling country entirely destitute of inhabitants. It had evidently been the home of the lumberman in years gone by. Only a few dead pines with their dry trunks stand as monuments of what was once a proud forest, while in many places can be seen a new growth of young timber springing up to replace the old. Young's Point was soon in sight. The bridge over the Otonabee rivier, also the Government locks and Trent Valley Canal were crossed, and after sheltering my team and getting warmed at a hotel, I lost no time in seeking out

THE FOUNDER OF THE PLACE,

Patrick Young, who resides on the west bank of the canal in a neat little white cottage. In answer to a gentle rap on the door I was ushered into a spacious sitting room where my business was made known. He proved to be one of the four hundred and fifteen families that came to Canada with the Peter Robinson emigration colony in 1825, he being the first one your correspondent had ever had the pleasure of meeting. He is a native of Tipperary, Ireland, born 1812, and is living upon the same spot where his father located with his family fifty eight years ago, at what was then called Stony Lake, subsequently changed to in honor of its founder. When Mr. Young came to the place the only residence between Peterborough and his present home was a small log hut in the township of Smith on the hill near the residence of John Harvey. It was owned and occupied by "Sandy Morrison," and was used as a stopping place and for the accommodation of travellers. Mr. Young's first night in the township of Smith was spent in that shanty. For the first few years his father plied a small boat between Young's Point and Lakefield, transporting supplies to the settlers in his immediate vicinity. He soon after began the erection of a saw and grist mill and the

YOUNG'S POINT

NUCLEUS OF A VILLAGE

was formed. A post office was subsequently opened and he received the appointment of post master, which office he still holds. During the Mackenzie rebellion he served as a volunteer in Capt. Kilpartrick's company commanded by Col. McDonald. On the 16th of March, 1838, "St. Patrick's eve," Mr. Young was present at Peterborough at the burning of the Roman Catholic Church, there being about 300 soldiers stationed there, who turned out and went to the fire, which was supposed to be the work of an incendiary. Mr. Young relates the fact that which was erected in 1820 on the present site of Peterborough, had no "bolt" and the bran and flour ran in together and was sifted by hand by the settlers with seives brought from Ireland. Jacob Brumwell ground the first grist in his new mill, north of Peterborough, April 8th, 1827, on the birthday of his eldest daughter.

ADAM SCOTT'S MILL,

Mr Young has been for many years a magistrate also a lock master. The mills he erected he subsequently sold to Geo. Chalmers, who is doing a large business. Young's Point although established at an early day has never grown to be a city. No doubt hopes were kindled into a flame in the breasts of the owners at one time that their names might be sung by unborn millions like Romulus and Remus, but they like other of earth's children, have been doomed to disappointment.

"Their hopes, like the lilies of the morn,
First blossomed into life, and then
By bitter winds,
And icy rains
Were scattered to the earth again."

Whenever the

TRENT VALLEY CANAL IS COMPLETED

Young's Point will no doubt become an important place as a lumbering town. At present it contains two hotels, two churches (Roman Catholic and Bible Christian), school house, one store (kept by James Stewart, who does a large business), post office, saw and grist mill, and about a dozen private residences. The place is beautifully situated on the west bank of Katchewaneka Lake.

The Humber Railway Horror

A Freight Train Crashes into Crowded Passenger Cars at Full Speed.

The Boiler Bursts—Twenty-seven Persons Killed and others Terribly Mangled—Heart-rending Scenes at the Dead-House.

One of the most terrible accidents that has visited Ontario since the Desjardins canal accident, occurred on Wednesday morning on the Great Western Division of the Grand Trunk, just west of Toronto. The suburban train, conveying a number of empoyees of the Bolt Works, which are situated a little west of High Park, left the Union Station, Toronto, at 7.40, a. m. and proceeded at a brisk rate until it turned the curve at the Parkdale boundary. Then it was observed that a freight train was approaching rapidly from the west, and although "brakes down" were sounded from both, the impetus was too great to prevent the collision. The result was terrible. In a few seconds the previous peaceful spot was a scene of death and suffering. The freight train seemed to drive the engine of the passenger train into a car occupied by the unfortunate workmen, crushing a number to death, and the bursting of the boiler added to the horror of the slaughter. The picture was heart-rending. One little boy with his dinner-pail in his hand was not only crushed under the boiler, but was scalded from the hips down. Near him lay a poor fellow whose intestines were literally squeezed out. Others as the debris of the mutilated car and engine were removed by slow degrees, were extricated in a dead or dying condition. Twenty-two were killed on the spot and five died soon after, and about forty were badly wounded. The train hands jumped, but the fireman of the passenger train is terribly wounded and may die. The wounded were brought to Toronto and conveyed carefully to the hospital. Two of them died on the journey. Drs. Bowe, Riddell and Lynd, of Parkhill, were at the scene of the disaster shortly after it happened, and were assiduous in their attentions to the sufferers. The conductor of the freight train, Geo. Barber, aged 29, living on Esther street, has been placed under arrest. He had orders to avoid the passenger train and his only excuse is that he "forgot." The bodies, many of them unrecognizable masses of crushed humanity, many with the flesh roasted or scalded into shreds, were removed to the dead house Toronto. A vast crowd gathered outside the morgue, and the cries and wailings of bereaved woman and children were heartrending. The applications of anxious wives to view the remains were many, but they invariably returned sick and uncertain. Even the clothing was burned off the majority of the bodies, which rendered the task of recognising all the more difficult. The killed were all mehcanics and labourers and most of them leave wives and families. One poor woman's load of agony and bereavement drove her insane. Her husband was brought home a crushed and shapeless corpse, and her two sons, frightfully mangled, but still alive, were taken to the hospital. At the very moment when the husband's dead body was being brought home and while the two sons were being taken almost corpses, too, to the hospital, a third son was receiving in a court of justice, a sentence of two years in the Penitentiary for highway robbery. The poor woman's cup was too full and she became a raving maniac. It is supposed that the Grand Trunk will have to be held responsible and make good as far as money can do, the loss the widows and orphans have sustained by the death of their bread-winners.

THE "GENTLEMEN'S" JOURNAL.

ELEGANT EXTRACTS AND HIGH SOUNDING EPITHETS.

The ordinary coarse, insolent vulgarity of the Mail is notorious. At election times that organ discards all pretence of reverence for decency, and seems to lose the sense of the ridiculous. Here is a batch of elegancies which were flung at Mr. Mowat in one days Mail, to wit that of Monday (previous to the elections.)

"Mr. Mowat has admitted his hypocrisy."

"Has confessed his dishonesty."

"Has earned for himself the just contempt of every honest man in Ontario."

Mr. Mowat confesses that for three or four years he has "been inciting people to rebellion by false pretences."

Has been asking for votes "on forged grounds." Has been arousing public passion by "coined falsehoods."

Has been inciting even to the "pitch of murder" the partisans "whom he meant to betray."

Has been engaged in correspondence "disgraceful, damaging, and penal, for which "personal action will be taken against him."

He was certainly guilty of corruption in Algoma." "The facts will disgrace the whole Grit Administration in a pack."

"Possibly may consign some of them to the gaol for which nature evidently fitted two or three of them."

"Mr. Mowat does not dare to appear upon any platform just now—he would be hissed from it by indignant citizens."

He is consistant "in his dishonesty." He dishonestly concealed from his own friends," &c., &c.

"He dishonestly concealed from the Legislature," &c., &c.

"His duplicity."

"He is now doubling, twisting, shuffling, and deceiving."

"He is a second-rate schemer."

He is a transparant imposter." (Even not only that, but spelled with a he!) It must be something awful, far worse than impostor.

His demands on people's credulity are "outragous and insulting."

He is "disloyal" to the Dominion. He has been "guilty of a gross outrage on the public peace at Rat Portage."

"He has spent $40,000 of the public money on gaol-bird special constables, needless 'roads,' still more needless whiskey and criminal bribery."

"He has violated and outraged the license law in the very vilest way."

Mr. Mowat has been known to the people of Ontario for more than thirty years; has been Premier of the Province for more than eleven; has been tested in every possible way and by all sorts of people, and will not suffer from any quantity of such foundationless abuse and blackguardism.—Globe.

PETERBOROUGH, JAN. 10, 1884.

The Mayoralty.

The election of Geo. A. Cox, Esq., to the Mayoralty on Monday last, by the handsome majority of 225, must be a matter of congratulation to all citizens, who have the good government, credit and good name of the town at heart. It shows that the good sense of the people has triumphed, and that the desperate efforts of embodied buncombe, rant and false issues have not, though the most unscrupulous means were tried, been able to divert the public mind from placing due weight upon the fact that the selection of a mayor for a town of the size and importance of Peterboro', was an event far above the petty and narrow-minded issues that were sought to be imported into the contest.

Mr. Cox, after much solicitation, placed himself at the service of the town, with the understanding that he appeared as a candidate willing to be chosen by the people; he had so great a respect for the electors' right of freedom of choice, that he resolved to approach no man to induce the latter to exercise his franchise in his favor. He thus showed that he had no personal ends to promote, but that he was willing to serve the town to the extent of his ability in the capacity of mayor, if the town should select him. And the town has honored itself by electing to avail itself of the services of a gentleman, than who, none other is better fitted to be its civic representative, whether in point of administrative ability, depth of interest in the progress of the town, or any other necessary consideration.

As mayor, Mr. Cox enjoys the proud distinction of being the spontaneous choice of the people, uninfluenced on his part by the solicitation of a single vote—a position unprecedented in the history of this town, or perhaps that of any other town in Ontario.

The most unscrupulous means were used to compass his defeat. His position was misrepresented, his motives distorted, his record as a citizen blackened, his past career misquoted, and every endeavor made to fasten upon him baseless charges. Yet so great was the public confidence in his integrity and ability, that the electors emphatically gave the lie to all these charges, by triumphantly electing him as mayor. That the choice made is a good one, no one can for a moment doubt, even those whose minds were poisoned into opposing his election, express their pleasure at his return, and with the citizens generally, congratulate the town on the possession of a mayor who will duly maintain the dignity of the office, and wisely direct the deliberations of our representatives for the year 1884.

The protection policy of the United States has thoroughly paralyzed its shipping interests. Of millions of bushels of grain exported from the United States last year not one cargo was carried by an American bottom. By way of contrast: in nine months of 1883 there was launched on the Clyde nearly 300,000 tons of shipping, while the protected ship yards of the United States, in comparison with these figures, have nothing to show. "Jug-handled free trade" doesn't injure British shipping at any rate.

Conservative Morality.

Our Tory friends can on occasion, be wonderfully moral and upright. They had no words of condemnation for Sir John's selling the Pacific Railway charter for purposes of political corruption. They saved all their indignation for the men that exposed the most gigantic act of political corruption ever perpetrated in Canada. On the same principle they do not condemn the fact that Weekes, a West Middlesex vice-president of a Tory association, received $100 from the bribery fund of the Tory party with a list of the electors to be corrupted That, as far as any express condemnation of it by Tory newspapers is concerned, is all right. But the heinousness of the sin comes in where a Reformer finds the briber out by a cunningly devised tale, such as any detective would use to unearth a similar criminal. From our own point of view Rowland did a very wicked thing. He represented himself a Tory, to gain Weekes' confidence, and thus worm the whole story out of him. Weekes acknowledged that envelopes, containing Tory bribery money lay scattered around the Tory committee rooms, ready for the hand of the briber, and that he got one containing $100, and he was tricked into giving Rowland a receipt for the money, and into showing a list of names whose owners were to be bribed with it to vote for the Tory candidate. But our Conservative friends find no fault with Weekes and his corrupt intentions; their indignation is only for Rowland, the Reformer, who outwitted Weekes and got the damaging facts out of him. They have no word of reproof for the thief, but the detective who finds him out is a dastard and a villain, while the detected briber is a much abused and very worthy man. If Weekes got $100 for bribery purposes, there is no knowing how much money must have been spent in other parts of the riding to attempt the defeat of the Minister of Education, which, happily for the interest of good government, failed most gratifyingly.

Sir John's Other Elephant.

The repeated and constantly accumulating evidence of the failure of a protective policy to keep all the promises of perennial prosperity, constant employment, high wages, a total immunity from business failures, and an elevation of the condition of all classes of the community, makes the N. P. elephant a very troublesome animal to Sir John, and his keeper, Sir Leonard Tilley. But Sir John has another elephant on his hands in the shape of the McCarthy License Act. The recent decision of the Privy Council, the highest judicial tribunal in the British Empire, confirms the constitutionality of the Crook's Act beyond a doubt. It has decided that the regulation of licenses is a municipal matter entirely and exclusively within the province of the Local Legislature; therefore Sir John's McCarthy Act is ultra vires. It is unconstitutional, vexatious, and to retort Sir John's cocky opinion of the Crook's Act, "not worth the paper it is written on." It was a vile attempt to deprive Ontario, against which Sir John, at the bidding of Quebec Bleus, is making repeated and vindictive attacks, of the privilege guaranteed us by the Act of Confederation. It was forced through Parliament against the most solemn warnings of Mr. Blake that it would be an unconstitutional measure. The country was put to the enormous expense attending the passage of the Bill, it caused no end of anxiety to those engaged in the liquor trade, and was to all intents and purposes a most maliciously michievous act of high handed intermeddling. It was a carrying out of Sir John's unmanly and undignified threat to show "Mowat that little tyrant, etc." It is safe to say that not a single license in Ontario will be issued under it provisions. Sir John's admirers will hereafter be less lavish of their praise of the first constitutional lawyer of the Dominion, and will bend their endeavors towards relieving Sir John of the care of his other white elephant, the McCarthy Liquor License Act.

The Second Pacific Scandal.

Some time ago the Globe made some startling exposures, showing the details of a corrupt compact between John Shields and Sir John Macdonald, in reference to Section B. contract on the Pacific Railway. The Globe made the most pointed, specific and unequivocal charges, which, on being threatened with a libel suit by Shields, that paper, secure in the strength of its position, reiterated, challenging Shields to enter suit. Then Shields must play a bluff game and bring a libel suit, or failing, virtually admit the truth of the charges. The suit was brought, but the trial has been delayed from time to time, and on Monday the case was dismissed with costs for want of prosecution. The fact is that there was truth in the Globe's charges, and Sir John and his ministry were so deeply involved in the corrupt compact with Shields that he dare not allow the suit to come to trial. A more emphatic assent to the truth of the charges, outside of explicit admission, could not be made, and since Sir John and Shields have shirked their only chance of having the damaging charges disproved, the public must hold them guilty.

The Hamilton Tribune has run a brilliant but rocket-like course. It is financially in deep water, so deep that the right, title and interest in the stock, plant, machinery and books of the paper are advertised for sale by the sheriff. A short life and a merry one seems to have been the motto of the Tribune, and its fate is another proof of the folly of an attempt to "run out" well established newspaper concerns.

Editorial Notes.

The meeting of the Ontario Legislature is called for Wednesday, Jan. 23d.

The decision in respect to the trial of the North Victoria election petition, in which the seat of Mr. John Fell, member elect, is attacked, is to be given at Osgoode Hall on January 8th.

There is no pleasing the Tories, especially when they are out of office. They raised a continuous howl because the Education Department, Toronto, authorised two sets of school readers. Now the howl is kept up because it is proposed to have only one set.

In spite of the bitter hostility of the Tory party, the people's rights are rapidly being recoganized, which is another way of saying that Liberalism in England is making great advances. Hon. John Bright expresses his belief that within the next year every householder in England will be a voter. He regards the franchise question as one that particularly bears on the most important interests of the empire.

The protest entered against the return of Mr. Allison, of Lennox, is clearly a "put up" job, intended to effect a compromise whereby the Reformers might be induced to drop the proceedings against Roe, the Tory organizer and present M. P. P., for corrupt practices. But the game doesn't work, and a full exposure of the tactics of Mr. Pruyn's party, and of the operations of such bribers as Boultbee and Macintosh will be made.

The National Policy was to make everybody rich, at least full of employment. Yet we hear doleful accounts of the increase of pauperism and vagrancy. A western county has closed the doors of the house of refuge against outside paupers, having more than enough of its own. Toronto has become so flooded with paupers that the papers are discussing a means of reducing the evil. Eight young Englishmen asked the police magistrate to send them to jail as they could not get work. These things ought not to be. If the Tory Government members at Ottawa are not mere "flies on the wheel" they will devise some means of bringing the N. P. around to its work.

Lord Lorne is not treating Canada as some persons do their friends—"out of sight out of mind." Although not a salaried immigration agent, he is doing more than Sir Charles Tupper, our Canadian Commissioner, does for his easily earned ten thousand a year. Our late Governor has been busy ever since he reached England making speeches on Canada, in which this country is highly recommended as a grand field for immigration. And, in a recent speech before the Colonial Institute, he strongly emphasized his belief in the principle of non-interference of the general government in local affairs, evidently referring to the high-handed means taken by the Ottawa Government to destroy the effect of local legislation, in Ontario especially. If the policy of wholesale disallowance is continued by the Ottawa Government the federal union cannot stand the strain.

CRUEL CONVENT CALAMITY.

FIRE, PANIC AND PERISHING SISTERS AND PUPILS.

In the Institute of the Immaculate Conception Sisters of Notre Dame, Belleville, Ill., destroyed by fire last Friday night, were sixty pupils—all girls from 10 years to adult age—several teachers, and other inmates. After the fire started an attempt was made by the Sisters to extinguish it, and failing efforts were made to remove the pupils. The flames spread so rapidly that no order could be preserved, and a panic seized both children and sisters with wild confusion, and a rush to escape. Forty or more pupils are known to have got out, but several in their fright jumped from the windows, and were killed or badly injured. Miss Mary Campbell, teacher, leaped from the third story and died in a few minutes. Another climbed to the roof of the portico, and either fell or was blown off and was fatally injured. The fire department was of little avail against the flames, and in an hour the entire building was a mass of ruins. It is reported that the fire started from the furnace in the basement, and flames spread upwards cutting off most of the exits. When the ruins sufficiently cooled, a volunteer corps went to work to bring out the bodies. At times the searchers found two or three charred masses huddled close together, seemingly seeking protection in one another from the advancing flames. Two bodies were found in the rear part of the building, burned into an unrecognizable mass, but the majority were found beneath where the dormitory was situated. The number of the deaths is 17, 22 of which are of pupils and five sisters among the latter. Extreme cold retarded the work of the firemen. There were no ladders in the fire department, and no provisions for such an emergency made by the managers of the institution. The loss by the burning of the convent is $160,000. It is believed that 30 persons perished. There is not the least probability that any of the missing will be heard of alive. The Mother Superior and Sister Edward lost their lives endeavoring to arouse the inmates of the dormitory. James Stout, watchman of the Harrison machine works, the first to see the fire, says when he arrived the whole building was roaring in flames, and the inmates were at the windows shrieking and crying for help. Many of the pupils live in the towns near by, and the suspense and agony of their friends is terrible.

THE END OF A BLUFF GAME.

The case of a libel entered by John Shields against the Globe was dismissed with costs by Master Dalton yesterday. Some time ago plaintiff threatened all sorts of things against the paper, on account of its having made some exposures in connection with the section B contract but he staved the issue off, time and again until at last the court has dismissed the suit for want of prosecution. Similar judgments may be expected in the cases against Hon. T. W. Anglin, J. D. Edgar, James Cotton and Gen. Hewson. — World.

LAKEFIELD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Voting for school trustees took place on Wednesday, the 2nd inst. The election passed off very quietly, not much interest being manifested; all the men in the field being well qualified for the position. The [illegible] candidates nominated were Messrs. Dench, Thos. Casement, G. J. Galvin, Grieves and D. Hilman. The former two were elected; Mr. Dench by a large majority. Messrs. Grieves and Hilman took no interest in the matter, not desiring the office.

At the close of the poll Mr. Isaac Garbutt, sen., was elected to the chair. Mr. Dench was the first called on. He thanked the electors for the confidence they had placed in him, and would serve their interests to the best of his ability. He concluded by making some humorous remarks, and resumed his seat.

Mr. Thomas Casement then briefly thanked the electors for the honor conferred on him.

Mr. Galvin was then called on, and came forward. He (Mr. G.) said that after a long service of nine years he had thought of retiring from the board, had spoken to Mr Dench and others to ascertain if they would not be willing to assume the position; still, under the circumstances, he must say he very much regretted his defeat. He was aware that he was partly responsible himself; he had not asked a single vote, while others were actively canvassing. He, therefore, could hardly expect to poll a large vote. He did not consider he merited his defeat, however. He had served them faithfully for a long term, and would still have a personal interest in the school for the next ten years. A few years ago, by his exertions principally, the rural part of the section had been prevented from separating and forming a new section, thus saving Lakefield over $200 annually. But his defeat had been due principally to the fact that it had been circulated that he had used Mr. Dench meanly; that he had been the first to bring him out, and that at the eleventh hour he, himself, came into the field for the purpose of defeating Mr. Dench. He denied this. With all his faults, he challenged any man to say that he had ever been guilty of a treacherous act. While he did not accuse Mr. Dench directly of doing him so great an injustice, he did accuse certain parties who had interested themselves in behalf of Mr. D., who must have been aware of the fact. It was in this manner that many of his (Mr. G.'s) best friends were influenced to vote against him. But at some future time he might, perhaps, have the privilege of serving them again, and better than he had done before.

Mr. Dench, in reply, stated that he had not accused Mr. Galvin of using him meanly. He had acted in perfectly good faith towards Mr. Galvin, and entertained the best of feelings towards him.

The meeting broke up with three cheers for the Queen.

[The whole difficulty between Messrs Dench and Galvin arose out of a slight misunderstanding, which would certainly have been avoided had they both been present during the hour of nomination, and which was magnified by different parties who took an active part in the contest. It seems to be the general opinion that Mr. Dench acted in perfectly good faith; while to say that Mr. Galvin had any wish to have Mr. Dench as an opponent for the purpose of defeating him is as absurd as it is unjust. Mr. G. has been a member of the board ever since the incorporation of Lakefield into a village. He has been chairman for about five years, and so far as we have heard any expression of public opinion it has been unanimous in giving him credit for being one of the most, if not the most, active member of the board; and, had he not at different times expressed his desire of retiring, would without doubt have been re-elected without opposition. The section has, we believe, elected two competent men, and the efficiency of the board will be fully maintained.

ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS.

In your issue of last week you give Lakefield credit for passing four pupils. Lakefield school sent five candidates, all of whom passed creditably. This speaks well for the efficiency of the school under our new headmaster, Mr. F. August.

The school opened on Monday last. Miss Hare, who had been engaged, failed to put in an appearance.

SCHOOL BOARD.

A special meeting of the P. S. Board was held on Saturday evening in the Council Chamber. Present,—Messrs. Sanders, Gordon, Casement, Armour and Caldwell.

Mr. Sanders was elected chairman, W. H. Casement re-appointed secretary, and Messrs. Gordon and Dench were appointed managing committee for three months.

The secretary was instructed to advertise in the Globe and Mail for a teacher to take charge of the junior department at a salary of $200, Miss Hare not having been heard from.

Miss Tanner was engaged to teach for a month, she having kindly consented to take charge of the school for that length of time.

HON. ADAM CROOKS.

DECLARED A LUNATIC—A VALUABLE LIFE FAST EBBING AWAY.

Before Mr Justice Ferguson, at Osgoode Hall last week, a motion was made by Mr A. J. Cattanach for an order declaring Hon. Adam Crooks a lunatic, and for the appointment of a committee of his person and estate. Mr Cattanach [illegible] motion was made stated that the application was made under section 65 of the Ontario Chancery Act, which provided that upon proof by affidavit of the lunacy of any person, the court might make an order declaring the same, and might appoint some person or persons to look after the person and estate of the lunatic. He went on to say that notice of the present application had not been given to Mr Crooks himself, who is now confined in an asylum known as "The Retreat," in Hartford Conn, because his physicians considered that knowledge of it might prove fatal to him. He read the affidavits on this point of Dr. Stearns, medical superintendent of "The Retreat," and of Dr. Sprague, of Toronto, both of whom consider it extremely perilous to allow notice of such an application to be given him. The material in support of the motion was then read, commencing with the petition which purported to be presented by Mr G. C. Cunningham, Civil Engineer, setting out that Mr Crooks had been seriously ill in January last, and that since that time had become weak in mind, debilitated in intellect and wholly unable to look after his affairs. The petition wound up with a prayer that he be declared a lunatic, and that Mr R. H. Bethune, his nephew Major R. J. Evans, his brother-in-law, and Mr J. D. Dawson be appointed a committee of his person and estate. Affidavits were then read, made by several gentlemen friends of Mr. Crooks, showing some of the extraordinary delusions under which he has been laboring. The chief of his his hobbies were sworn to be that a new world was to be formed, of which he was to be Prime Minister. He conceives himself enormously wealthy and is constantly pondering over the gifts of office and benefits he will confer on his friends. A telegram was produced from Mr Crooks to the Lieutenant-Governor, telling him not to accept the resignations of Messrs Mowat, Hardy and Pardee, but to dismiss them, and he would be Premier of Canada. Other instances were given in the affidavits showing the weak state of mind to which the unfortunate gentleman has been reduced. Medical affidavits in testimony followed, showing the peculiar nature of the disease, describing it as contraction, not softening of the brain, technically known as paresis. The disease, it was shown, must have been culminating for some years past, and would end in paralysis of the brain, causing death before the expiration of two years at the outside. In the opinion of the medical gentlemen Mr Crooks is insane with no reasonable probability of recovery. The last affidavits read showed that Mr Crooks had first been taken to an asylum at Canandaigua, near Buffalo; that the accommodation there was insufficient and that he had been removed to "The Retreat," where he would remain until the new asylum at Guelph was completed, when he would be finally taken there. Mr Cattanach concluded the motion by pressing the appointment of a committee. He showed that Mr Crooks' financial affairs were in a most unfortunate condition, his ascertained liabilities amounting to $20.000. Of his assets, his real property in Flamboro', his farm at Niagara, and his houses in Toronto are all mortgaged. There is however, an estimated surplus of $11,000.

Mr Justice Ferguson gave his decision at once, stating that it was impossible to hear the evidence without being convinced that Mr Crooks is insane. His Lordship, therefore, made an order declaring him a lunatic, and appointing the gentlemen named a committee of his person and estate. All despatch is to be used in taking out the order, so that the estate can be administered and freed from debt.

THE FALSE PROPHET AND GUM ARABIC.

HOW THE REBELLION IN THE SOUDAN IS CAUSING A RISE IN THE PRICE OF CANDY.

The toothsome gumdrop and the rubber-like marshmallon will soon be an expensive luxury, and all because the "False Prophet," thousands of miles away, is stirring up a rebellion in the Soudan. Pure gum arabic composes over thirty per cent. of all the best confectionary and comes almost exclusively from the Soudan. Khartoum is its chief market. It is brought there by the natives and bartere to merchants from Cairo and Suakim for guns, cartridges, trinkets and other articles dear to the heart of a savage Once a year, during October and November, when the Nile is at its highest, the yield is floated down on barges to Cairo, and thence shipped to the four principal markets of the world—London, Paris, Marseilles and New York. A small part is taken overland on camels to Suakim, about a three months's trip. The unit of commerce is a bale containing 500 pounds. The European consumption every year is 12,000 of these bales, while America consumes half as many.

Since El Mahdi has been disaffecting the Soudan the price of gum has steadily been going up, and from the usual price of eight or ten cents a pound it has now risen to twenty, and there is little to buy at that. No crop was brought in this year, and unless the insurrection is quelled within the course of three months there will be none next. The Cairo merchants of course will not send their money into the Soudan in its present state, even could their agents get there safely. Besides this, there is very little to bring out, as none has been gathered this year.

The Soudan negroes, having very little of honest thrift, will not work unless they can see an immediate return for their labor. As El Obeid is already occupied and Khartoum is likely to be soon, there is no chance of bringing the crop out by water, and an overland freightage would be most expensive, taking a caravan nearly a year to make the trip between Khartoum and Cairo. Even then a bale would be a heavy load for a camel.

Nearly all of last year's crop was destroyed by the Egyptian army while they were in Khartoum. The bales of gum were piled in large pens waiting for the fall rise in the river to be shipped to Cario. The army being short of grain bags dumped the gum on the ground and appropriated the bales. Of course the next rain washed thousands of dollars into the soil of Khartoum. A Cairo merchant writing to a firm in New York says that the price of gum is almost fabulous, and that there are three buyers to every invoice. Several London and Marseilles firms have already made fortunes out of its sudden rise. In a few weeks gum arabic will probably be quoted as high as 50 cents a pound. At that rate candy will be worth almost its weight in gold.

MAGISTRATES' COURT.

On Saturday evening a magistrates' court, composed of Messrs. T Fraser, H. Drain and T. Eorke, was convened at the Town Hall, when Timothy Morairty was charged by Wm. Rimmer, both O. & Q. Railway employees, with stealing $20 from him. Complainant said that he [illegible] night at the railway camp, with $60 carefully put away under his head, and on counting his "pile" next day there was only $60, and from the fact that the prisoner, previous to the robbery, had no money, and after it was missed was very liberal in treating his comrades, he was convinced that Morairty was guilty of the robbery The prisoner pleaded "not guilty." Evidence was adduced to show that Morairty was "flush" of money for several days since the money was missed, but none was given to show that the money was honestly or dishonestly obtained. The magistrates therefore dismissed the case.

OBITUARY.

Quite a gloom has been cast over our neighborhood by the sudden and unexpected death of Mr. John Stewart, lumberman, of Asphodel, which sad event took place at his late residence on Sunday morning. But a few days ago he was vigorously attending his lumber camps in the Muskoka District, when he was unfortunately taken ill with inflammation of the bowels. Becoming somewhat relieved he returned home, when the disease again prostrated him, and although all was done for him that medical skill could do, the second stage of his illness proved fatal. He was only in the prime of life, and so successful had he been in business of late years that he had made arrangements to lease his farm in Asphodel and reside in Norwood, where he intended to erect a large and costly residence. His funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon, and was one of the largest and most respectable that has ever passed through our village.

BLOOD-POISONING.

Your readers in this vicinity will regret to learn that Mr. James Bibby, of Asphodel, is in a very low state of health by blood-poisoning, caused by one of his horses biting him in the hand, the virus of the animal's teeth affecting an old wound. The hand and arms have swollen to a considerable extent, and it is feared the swelling will extend to the body. It is to be hoped, however, that the ravages of the malady will be stayed ere more serious consequences will result.

BAND SERENADE.

Our band, following the example set them by larger musical organizations, serenaded a number of our moneyed citizens on New Year day, and were liberally and substantially treated by all whom they favored with a musical treat. Both their pockets and their paunches were considerably benefitted by the "New Year call." It was noticeable that the band is improved in its playing, and, under the tuition of its new bandmaster, Mr. Stickles, is making praiseworthy progress.

ENCOURAGING.

It is a proverbial fact that our High School always ranked high as a schoolastic institution; but it is safe to say that at no period of its existence has it reached as high a state of perfection as it enjoys at present. This happy state of affairs is mainly due to the excellent staff of teachers in charge of the school; but particularly to the marked ability of the Principal, Mr. John Davidson, who is most zealous in his attention to every department of his school. As a guarantee of this statement we give the following extract from the report of Mr. J. E. Hodgson, High School Inspector, submitted to the Educational Department since his last inspection of the Norwood High School:

"The attendance of 'Upper School' pupils in this school is larger than in some of the Collegiate Institutes. The headmaster's teaching of mathematics is characterized by more than usual excellence."

Ready-made Mantles, only $2.50. At Turnbull's.

BENSFORT.

(From an Occasional Correspondent.)

Having noticed some Bensfort items in your paper before, I thought I would like to add my mite also:—

Somewhere between the hours of one and two o'clock on New Year's morning, while the residents of the village of Bensfort were peacefully sleeping the "sleep of the just," they were awakened by loud and doleful wailings, which very much resembled a funeral dirge sung over the grave of some buried hope, but upon a closer examination it proved to be three young gentlemen, headed by the village blacksmith (who is a very noted and popular singer), engaged in ushering the old year out and the new year in, by singing a Christmas carol. The villagers never had the pleasure of such a rich musical treat before, and it is to be hoped they fully appreciated it. It is more than probable that they will continue the practice, which is a favorite one among the Scotch. But "may sweet sleep their eyelids close" next New Year morn, is the fervent desire of

ONE WHO HEARD THEM.

A Special Invitation.

We especially invite a trial by all those sufferers from Kidney and Liver complaints who have failed to obtain relief from other remedies and from doctors. Nature's great remedy, Kidney Wort, has effected cures in many obstinate cases. It acts at once on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleaneing the system of all poisonous humors and restoring a healthy condition of those important organs. Do not be discouraged but try it.

An Answer Wanted.

Can any one bring us a case of Kidney or Liver Complaint that Electric Bitters will not speedily cure? We say they can not, as thousands of cases already permanently cured and who are daily recommending Electric Bitters, will prove. Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Weak Back, or any urinary complaint quickly cured. They purify the blood, and regulate the bowels, and act directly on the diseased parts. Every bottle guaranteed. For sale at 50c, a bottle by Taylor & McDonald.

GRIGG HOUSE, LONDON, AUGUST, 1883.

To the Manager Merchants Co.

DEAR SIR—I have pleasure in reporting on the merits of "Nonsuch" which has received a thorough trial in my establishment. "Nonsuch" does all that you claim for it. It thoroughly cleans the clothes without the usual labour and trouble; the washboard is not needed, and boiling and wringing are about all that are necessary to bring out the clothes a beautiful white colour. Please send me one gross for use at my hotel. I am, dear sir. Yours, etc, Samuel Grigg. For sale by all grocers. 49-52t

ENNISMORE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

WEATHER NOTES.

December expiring with the year has not any particular events to record though some occurences to the observer have taken place to furnish ample recreation for the thinking mind. The month has been of very low temperature the highest reached only being 42° at sunset on the evening of the thirteenth, while once it stood at zero and 7 times below, [illegible] on the morning of the 23rd, falling to 18° below zero, the mean temperature of the month being 18°. Rain fell on seven days to the depth of one inch and 6-100 of an inch. Snow fell on fifteen days to the depth of 14 inches, making the total depth of waterfall about 2½ inches. On the morning of the 28th the thermometer stood at 10° below zero, but gradually rising till a little after sundown, when it reached 6° above. One of the prettiest Gothic arches appeared in the east directly opposite the sun and as if resting on large supports apparently turned to the square of the arch, and which continued for some time, so I had a full opportunity of carefully viewing the loveliness of the scene. Not a cloud was in the sky and I believe the shape of the arch was caused by the sun shining on the convex side of the haze. After a time the phenomenon passed away leaving the evening in its yellow shade, for which it has been conspicuous during the fall.

"Upright Pianos."

A few extracts from the numerous endorsements by the leading artists of the World as to their Superiority:—

The pianoforte of your make used at my last concert is the most admirable instrument I have ever seen. Please send to my address in London one of your Upright Pianos. This, I think, is the best endorsement of your instrument I can give you. CHRISTINE NILSSON.

Neither in Europe or America have I seen an Upright to equal yours.—EMILIE GERBIER GARDINI.

In all the qualities an artist can require your Upright Pianos surpass anything I have ever seen.—SOFIA SCALCHI.

It is superior in quality of tone and evenness of action to any instrument I know of. CLARA LOUISE KELLOGG.

Having had an opportunity of using your New Concert Upright Piano at the concerts given by Her Majesty's Opera Company, we beg to compliment you upon your great success. You can justly claim a superiority over any piano we have hitherto seen, for concert purposes and accompanying the voice.—ITALO CAMPANINI, ANTONIO GALASSI, ANNA DE PREOCCA, EMIL AMBRA.

The successful manner in which your Upright Piano has stood the severest tests, is such as heretofore has been applied to the Grand Piano only, and it commands our unqualified endorsement.—OLE BULL, EMMA THURSBY, ALFRED H. PEASE, MAURICE STRAKOSCH.

Naught but Death Divorces;

OR,

LADY AUDREY'S SACRIFICE.

The sun shone brightly the next morning when Sir Roche found himself in the little drawing-room at No. 4 Medina Villas. He was startled when Audrey came in to him.

She had been sitting up all night; her face was pale, her eyes had a worn look. She seemed weary, yet she held out her hand with a smile to Sir Roche.

"I am so glad you are come," she said. "Elodie has been talking about you. She has not many hours to live. Come with me to see her."

They went together. Sir Roche had never seen the hapless lady since the night of the ball at Qnorn House. He remembered his last glimpse of her—her bright, beautiful face with its defiant look; the lustre of her diamonds; the sheen of her brilliant dress. Now he saw her again—a pale, shadowy, dying creature, whom the weight of her own sin had crushed.

He was deeply touched; all memory of his own wrong died away. He went up to her, and kneeling down by her side, uttered her name softly.

She was startled at first. She raised her thin hands, and tried to hide her face from him; but Audrey drew them away.

"Be kind to her, Roche," she whispered; "see what she has suffered."

He did as she wished. He stooped forward and kissed the thin, wasted face.

"Elodie," he said, "I am sorry to find you so ill."

"My sin has killed me, Roche," she answered. "How good you were to come to me! I want to hear you say that you forgive me." Her face flushed as she continued—"I should like to get up and kneel down before you to beg your forgiveness; but I cannot. Listen to me for a moment, Roche. I never meant to do wrong. I had never even thought of it. It was not deliberate or intentional—it was not indeed. I was thoughtless, but I was not wicked, and I have repented until my sin has killed me. Say you forgive me, Roche."

He laid his hand on the golden head.

"I forgive you, even as I pray Heaven to forgive you."

"Will you call me 'wife' once more, for I love you very dearly?"

He looked at Audrey, and there was a moment's silence. Then Audrey went up to him, with the same bright light on her face.

"Do what she asks you, Roche," she said, gently. And he, bending gently over the white face, said:

"My dear wife!"

The two that stood near her will never forget the flush of startled joy on her face.

"Thank you, Roche. May I die with my head upon your breast?" Then she took Audrey's hand, and kissed it. "It is to you, oh, true and dear friend," she said, "that I owe all!"

Two hours afterwards the noon-day sun was pouring a flood of light into the room, and the music of the waves was borne on the wind.

The end was very near. The doctors had gone away; and Elodie lay dying, with the truest friends woman ever had near her.

Once they had bent over her, thinking her eyes closed forever; but a sunbeam fell across her face, and she opened them.

She was dying as she had asked to die, with her head on her husband's breast, and Audrey by her side. Suddenly she looked up at him and smiled, and with that the spirit took its flight.

Sir Roche was not ashamed to weep bitter tears over her—to accuse himself of being hard and cold—to fold the tired hands over the quiet heart—while Audrey stood by weeping. Presently he looked at her.

"I should like to thank you in her name, Audrey," he said. But she held up her hand.

"I will have no thanks," she returned. "I have simply done my duty."

She took her place by the side of the dead.

"Roche," she said, gently, "I want you to give me your hand."

She took it in her own and laid it on the still breast.

"I want you," she added, "to promise me two things."

"I will promise you anything you ask," he replied.

"Promise me, first, that on her gravestone you will place the name of your wife, Elodie Villiers."

"I promise," he answered.

"Secondly, here in her presence, promise that you will send back to that man his miserable money; that you will tell him that the woman whose life he blighted is dead; and that, fearing his money might bring a curse with it, you have sent it back. Will you do this?"

"Most assuredly I will," he replied. "You are right in this, Audrey, as you are in everything else. I will do it at once."

Then Audrey bent down and kissed the dead face.

"My work here is done," she said; "I will go home. And you, Roche, who have recognized her in death, you will give her the last honor you can pay her. "Elodie," she cried, laying her fresh, sweet lips on the dead ones, "Elodie, now I shall not fear to meet you hereafter."

She went home—her work was done—and Sir Roche remained. He paid all honor to Elodie. He did not take her back to the stately mausoleum where so many women of his race slept.

She was buried in the pretty churchyard by the sea at Rookdene, and on the white marble monument was inscribed the simple words:

"In loving memory of Elodie, Lady Villiers, aged 25."

In death, though not in life, she found her lost name again.

A year passed. Audrey spent it at home, Sir Roche in restless wandering, wondering always whether he should ever win for himself again that precious pearl of womanhood.

He was afraid to ask Audrey to return to him. During the year he had written to her but five or six times, and they were mere friendly letters: yet his whole soul was longing for her—he could find no rest by night or by day thinking of her.

At last he summoned up courage, and went to Holmesdale. The rector and his wife received him kindly; but he looked grave when he asked to see Audrey, and to see her alone.

She must have expected him: for she betrayed no surprise—she offered no comment. She went to him in the library, where, so many years before she had read the words of the marriage-service. She looked up at him with a smile that seemed to him unusually sweet.

"You have come for me, Roche," she said. "I am willing to go back with you."

"Mamma," she said, a few hours afterward, "will you give me my wedding ring? I shall want it to-morrow morning."

And on the morrow they went through the solemn service together again.

Audrey wished that the whole story should remain unrevealed; but it did not, on the contrary, it found its way into the newspapers, and all England was touched by it.

For the newspapers told it all—how she had given up wealth, home, love and luxury for conscience's sake; how she had devoted herself to one who was more unhappy than herself; how she had nursed the hapless lady through a long illness, had soothed her death, had reconciled her to Sir Roche, and thus had, humanly, saved her. They called her a pearl amongst women—they wished that more were like her.

Then she took her place again in the great world. A good influence seemed to emanate from her—the spell of goodness and purity lingered round her—only kind words and thoughts could live in her sweet presence. Before her evil and wickedness seemed to fly.

Bright-haired children grew round her; but neither she nor Sir Roche ever forgot Elodie. They went every year to her grave, and the only time that Lady Villiers ever thought her husband harsh was one July morning when they stood by Elodie's grave together. The man who had charge of it had planted white Ascension lilies on it.

"Take them away," said Sir Roche; "you may have roses, or passion-flowers, or any other flowers that bloom, but not these."

She looked up at him.

"Why do you say that, Roche?" she asked.

"They are out of place, for one thing, Audrey. Another reason is, they are your favorite flowers, and I do not like to see them there."

So the white lilies were taken away. But Audrey soon forgot that one instance of sternness. No husband was kinder, more devoted, better than hers. They loved each other with a true and perfect love that no man could put asunder.

THE END.

Advertising Cheats!!!

"It has become so common to write the beginning of an article, in an elegant, interesting manner,

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible,

"To induce people

"To give them one trial which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

"Religious and secular, is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness

"And ability

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

Did She Die?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years,"

"The doctors doing her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A Daughter's Misery.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"But no relief,

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters, that we had shunned for years before using it."—THE PARENTS.

Father is Getting Well.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters." A LADY of Utica, N. Y. 51-4t

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them a name of their own, and not try to sell them on the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back. 2-tf

The Shade of Merecombe Hall

CHAPTER I.

A pair of wondering eyes—a pair of bright cheeks pressed against the bars of the iron gate—a slender figure, clad in cotton garments, with a faded hat pushed back upon the bright hair.

"Gyneth, come; I see a head at the lodge window.

The girl turned with a start, roused suddenly from her long thought.

"It is only the lodge-keeper, Bertie. There is no one else here, you know, or we should not have the privilege of making ourselves at home in the woods, as we are going to do. Oh! is not this a beautiful place?"

"I could almost say too beautiful, if all the tales we hear are true, dear," the mother answered quietly

"No place can be too beautiful, surely. And I love Merecombe already. Does not this air bring roses, mother?" Gyneth asked, touching her little sister's face with a gauntlet glove in which there was a great deal of room.

"Indeed, yes, love," Mrs. Marshbrook answered, looking into the two faces beside her. "It has swept away all the neutral tints of our London life."

"Of which you have had twenty years, mother dear."

"Twenty years this very summer."

"Was it just such a summer as this when you married and went with my father to London?" inquired Gyneth, meeting her mother's smile with one that deepened in her own eyes and made them very beautiful.

"Yes, but, though the country at home was very beautiful, from the first London was as dear a home to me."

"But," interposed Bertie, as she took her mother's arm, "it is rather a dismal house, mamma, where we live."

"If there are any more gates, you must open them, Bertie," interposed Gyneth. "Remember I am five years your senior"; and, while Bertie ran laughing on, Gyneth gave her mother her arm, whispering, "Mother, dear, bright as these summer days are for us, for our father they are far, far brighter, you know. You always longed for his happiness, even in those times when it could not be perfect as it is now."

"That was not my sad thought, darling," returned her mother. "There is much in your keen enjoyment of this holiday life which makes me mournful—even against my will."

"Then I will go back to London at once, and study for the next term"; and in spite of a wistful shadow in her eyes, Gyneth's laugh rang out prettily.

"It tells me so plainly," her mother went on, without a smile, "that your teaching is hard and wearisome."

"But no one could enjoy a holiday if they never worked," said Gyneth, looking with learned abstraction into vacancy.

"Some girls like teaching, dear, and choose it for themselves. But you never liked it until you were obliged."

"O mother! hush. It is the greatest blessing for me—that power of being your help and support. Besides which," Gyneth added, with a laugh, "I get a great deal of praise—and I like that; and when a pupil of mine gets beyond a pupil of another person's, I can hardly contain my pride. No," she declared, when they reached the open gate, and, as she laid her hand upon her sister's shoulder, they all walked together, "I am indolent enough to leave you all the trouble of Bertie, mother; and I like to have pupils who in my presence are too timid to say that even the fingers they play with are their own."

"You say that, Gyneth, only because you know I like to feel I am useful in teaching Bertie, and because you know you are benefitting us more by earning money all day."

"But chief of all," supplemented Gyneth, balancing her book on Bertie's hat, "because I don't know more than Bertie does herself—and she's always inclined to trip me up by asking awkward questions just at a moment when I was particularly anxious to enforce my authority. Here is a good specimen of the Devonshire stile! Now, Bertie, show your skill. Oh! isn't this delicious!" and Gyneth, leaning against the stile, looked with delight along the valley before them. "How many more days have we to stay here?"

"Twenty."

"Twenty days more?" repeated the girl, with intense enjoyment.

Sauntering on, they reached at last a smooth, green slope on the outskirts of Merecombe Park. At the foot the river was shallow and rugged, large stones lying only half hidden in the water. At the top of the bank, on the opposite side of the stream, a high hedge bounded a thick plantation.

"If I were a great man, and had a beautiful house in which I did not live," said Gyneth, soberly, as they stood looking at the old house among the trees, "I would lend it to some friend. It's a shame to have it shut up."

"But Mr. Suttleton does live here sometimes," observed her mother, "and surely we need not grumble that he is not here now; for, if he were, we should not have these privileges."

"It is such a waste of his privileges and of his splendid home," laughed Gyneth. "He ought to marry, and have all his wife's relatives here, and bring life into the great house, and into this magnificent park."

"Well done, Gyneth! And why not his own relatives?"

He has none. Do you not remember that they said he had no relatives, and that no friends ever come to see him when he is here?—that he spends most of his time abroad, and is proud and reserved, and indifferent about his people? Shame upon him!"

"But he is generous, they say."

"Carelessly generous, I suppose, as well as carelessly indifferent. What an unattractive picture of a young English squire! And I think this beautiful place ought, by some wise law, to be taken from him, and given to a man who would value it, and do some good with it."

"Sit here while I cross the river!" cried Bertie, and then she ran down, and, springing across the stepping stones, passed through a gap in the high hedge, and was lost to sight in the wood opposite.

The mother and daughter had sat for many minutes, dreamily watching the sunshine sparkling on the water, when the silence was broken by a quick rustling, and, as they simultaneously turned their eyes towards the entrance to the plantation, Bertie—hatless, and with her lips tightly pressed together—rushed to the gap in the hedge and sprang down the bank. But, either through the earth giving way, or through being too much alarmed to steady herself, she came down in a heap upon the grass and lay there motionless.

In one moment Gyneth, springing lightly from stone to stone, had crossed the river, and was kneeling beside her sister.

"Bertie, speak to me, dear. What has frightened you?"

But the child's white lips never opened, and a shudder of pain passed over her face as Gyneth laid her sister's head on her shoulder.

"Don't cross, mother," she called, gently, as Mrs. Marshbrook hesitated timidly at the river-side. "Wait until we come over."

"Yet, if she could come and nurse her," thought poor little Gyneth, "I could run to the village for help, and now what shall I do?"

Help was nearer than she thought, for she had not seen that, as she ran down the field, the great dog which had so alarmed her sister had been held back and silenced by a few stern words whispered by his master. She had not seen the eyes that watched her cross the river, as she did not hear now the rustling of the bushes behind her.

"Lie there!" said the dog's master, angrily, as he looked down upon the dog's work. "Lie there, you coward!"

Gyneth, in her gladness at the sound, looked up to see a gentleman in shooting costume, an ugly felt hat in his hand, and with a face—but the face she could not just now criticise with her usual ease. It was a face she had not seen before—she was sure of that, for it was one she would have remembered had she seen it anywhere—a bearded face, the chief expression of which was a defiant carelessness, which was still half sorrowful.

"My dog alarmed her," he said, looking down on little Bertie. "I will carry her home, for no carriage can come round here."

"If you please," returned Gyneth, quietly raising her, and too sad, it seemed, to take heed of anything but her little sister.

He took the child in his arms and crossed the river. On the other side Mrs. Marshbrook joined him, while Gyneth ran on so fast that she was waiting at their lodgings with the doctor when they arrived.

An hour afterward, when Dr. Denne had left, Gyneth on entering their sitting-room, found the strange gentleman still there. He had been leaning against the window, and though he rose when she came in, he did not attempt to advance.

"Dr. Denne says it is only a strain," she said, making light of the accident, like a brave girl, to him who had caused it.

He saw less of the beautiful dark eyes than he did of the sorrowful shadows round them, and in a vague sort of a way he held out his hand.

"It will sound odd to apologize for a brute," he said, "but I must do so for Spring. He means well, I am sure, but he committed an unpardonable blunder to-day."

"I suppose my sister was trespassing?" interrogated Gyneth. "But we were told that Mr. Suttleton was away, and that we might saunter freely in any part of the grounds."

"Indeed you may," he answered hastily.

"Then Mr. Suttleton has returned?" she questioned, looking up gravely, while a certain instinct grew into a conviction.

"Unfortunately he returned yesterday," he said, a sudden cloud upon his face. "And this accident will prevent your ever caring to go near my place again."

"It will prevent our being able to do so, I fear," Gyneth returned sadly.

"Until you do," he said, "I shall never believe you have forgiven me. I will not keep you longer."

* * * * *

"It was Mr. Suttleton, Bertie," said Gyneth, as they sat together in her room.

"And what is he like?" the child asked, as she lay trying to bear cheerfully this spoiling of their precious holiday.

"I don't know. Knowing what he is, you can guess."

"Shall I like him?"

"Probably, dear," answered Gyneth tenderly, as she closed the window and kissed her little sister—"for you like everybody just as everybody likes you."

"You and mother won't like me now for the remainder of the holidays," said Bertie, smiling—"lying here, helpless and cross, for all the twenty days to which we have so looked forward."

"Never that, dear—never cross; and not lying here either, for we shall have you down upon the couch soon—shall we not, mother? I intend to make a personal friend of Dr. Denne, not simply because I like the old gentlemen, but because I want to get all the benefit of his private opinions"; But the unconscious young hypocrite, had she been able to give voice to certain vague feelings would have said that her friendly intentions were not altogether confined to Dr. Denne.

A LEAP YEAR DILEMMA.

Miss Jennie is a winsome girl—
The fairest lass of many;
And I would be a heartless churl
Did I not love Miss Jennie.
But when into my list'ning ear
Her tide of passion gushes,
I scream and run away, for fear
She'll see my tell-tale blushes.

Miss Susie is so sweet and mild,
And loves me, oh! so dearly,
I can't reject the little child—
'Twould drive her crazy, nearly,
But as she hangs upon the gate
And sings her hopeless sorrow,
I murmur; "It is getting late,
Please come around to-morrow."

And there is rosy, romping Belle—
And there is proud Ophelia—
And pensive, lofty-minded Nell,
And prattling little Delia;
And I am wooed by Eloise,
And courted too, by Jessie,
While Maggie falls upon her knees,
And ditto charming Bessie.

There's still another—homely she—
The gaunt, uncouth Eliza—
When first she came a-wooing me,
Oh, how I did despise her!
But as she fondly lingered near
There fell like dripping honey,
This sweet assurance on my ear—
That she had heaps of money!

So, though I sigh for Jennie's curls
And Delia so impassioned,
And hanker for the other girls,
So sweetly, grandly fashioned,
It seem decreed that I should part
From all these charming witches,
And sacrifice my manly heart
To gaunt Eliza's riches.

It is stated that no offer of mediation between France and China will be accepted by France until Hunghoa and Bacninh are occupied by the French. It is understood Premier Ferry inspired the statement.

It is not what you eat but what you digest that makes you strong. Unless the food taken is perfectly dissolved, assimilated and converted into pure blood, general nervous and physical prostration inevitably result: the whole system is impoverished; degeneration of the organs and tissue follows, and if there be hereditary predisposition to scrofula or consumption it will surely be developed and the constitution gradually broken down. The foundation of good health and a sound mind is a vigorous stomach and perfect nutrition. Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya is Nature's own remedy for derangements of the digestive organs, purely physiological, harmless, and positively certain to restore nervous and muscular force.

Dear Sirs,—For over twenty years I have suffered greatly from Nasal Catarrh; sometimes being unable to smell or taste properly. The disease caused a severe pain over the eyes, and frequently stopped my writing on account of dizziness. The phlegm in my throat gave me much annoyance, especially in company, balls of which would occasionally fall down into my throat, and I could seldom breathe through my nose. I have taken quarts of various medicines without any apparent benefit, until I was induced, by your agent of 69 Muter street, to try your Fountain of Health. After using five bottles I am prepared to give it as my honest opinion that for the cure of Catarrh it is a grand success. I have recommended it to many of my friends, one of whom encloses his testimony with mine.

Wishing you deserved success,
I am gratefully yours,
JOSEPH BROWN.

THE CAUSE OF HIS GRIEF.

"What are you crying about?" asked a kind-hearted stranger of a lad who was standing in front of a newspaper office weeping as if his heart would break.

"Oh, dad's gone up stairs to lick the editor."

"Well, has he come down yet?" pursued the gentle Samraitan.

"Pieces of him have," explained the boy, indulging in a fresh outburst of tears "and I'm expecting the rest every minute."

CONFIDENTIAL.

Thousands of young Men and Women—married and single—through the effects of vicious youthful habits, or excessive indulgence in later years, have so undermined their general systems as to induce almost every other disease, and the real cause of these troubles being scarcely ever suspected, they are drugged and doctored for everything but the right one. The ordinary modes of treating troubles of this nature do no good. The JERUBEBIN COMBINATOIN REMEDY is offered as A Speedy and Certain Cure, as hundreds afflicted with every form of disease have been restored to complete health by its use, after all other remedies failed. This remedy is adapted to every condition of nervous debility and weakness in either sex, but especially in cases arising from imprudence. Its recuperative powers are truly astonishing, and its continued use for a short time changes the languid, debilitated condition, to one of renewed life and vigor.

Forwarded to any address, on receipt of Price. $3 per package—sufficient for one month's treatment.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞Price in a sealed envelope, on 6c. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Acta Victoriana.

This clever college journal, published in the interests of the students, friends and alumni of Victoria University, comes to hand enlarged and greatly improved. There are many solid articles, with a very readable "hash" of college topics, well seasoned with Attic salt.

Oddfellowship.

The following officers of Otonabee Lodge of Oddfellows for the coming half year, were installed on Monday night by Bro. Dr. R. W. Bell, assisted by Bro. J. E. Murray, as Grand Marshall :

Bro. James Stevenson	N.G.
Bro. G. B. Sproule	V.G.
Bro. Jos. McClelland	R. and P. Sec.
Bro. John McKee	Treas.

Supplementary.

In our notice in last issue, we inadvertently omitted to mention among the names of those responsible for the success of the Firemen's New Year's ball, those of the chairman and secretary of the committee of management, Messrs J. D. Craig and R. Clegg. This was an unfortunate omission, for to these gentlemen was due a very large share of credit for the success accomplished.

St. Luke's, Ashburnham.

St. Luke's Parochial Association held its monthly concert on Monday night last. There was not the usual full attendance, due, perhaps, to the elections. The programme of songs and readings was carried out very creditably by Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Misses Heath and Grundy, and Messrs. Langford, Adams, and the Incumbent. The next entertainment of the Church Temperance Society will be held on Monday evening, January 21st.

Journalistic.

Mr. E. H. Fogarty, who has managed, for the Cobourg Printing Company, the Sentinel-Star, has purchased the plant, and will conduct the paper in his own name and for his own benefit. He has also changed the shape of the paper to the popular eight-page form. The paper, under Mr. Fogarty's management, has received new life and vigour, and there can be little doubt that he will be cheered with even greater success than has rewarded his past efforts.

Accident.

On Sunday morning of last week, as Mrs. W. Robinson, of North Monaghan, was driving to church in town, the horse became frightened on Charlotte street and ran away. The animal jumped over the south platform of the market, and Mrs. Robinson was thrown out and her arm broken above the wrist. Dr. Boucher's services were called upon. Mr. Robinson, who, some time ago, met with an accident by falling and hurting his side, is again able to be about.

Locomotive Axle Broken.

On Monday the breaking of an axle of the engine delayed the morning express from Toronto an hour or two. The break happened about three miles from town on the Link.

Poultry.

An important meeting of the Directors of the Midland Central Poultry Association will be held in the room adjoining the Council Chamber this (Thursday) evening, to make complete arrangements as to the exhibition.

Bivalvular Banquet.

A number of employees and train hands of the Midland, to the number of about two dosen, enjoyed an oyster supper at the railway men's rooms, on Wednesday evening of last week. After the "removal of the cloth," Mr. Brandrett, station agent, occupied the chair, and a list of toasts, appropriate to the occasion, mingled with songs, formed the staple of a very pleasant evening's amusement.

Vital Statistics.

A comparative statement of registrations in Peterborough of the three most important events in relation to civilized life, shows as follows :

	1883.	1883.
Births	168	139
Marriages	91	92
Deaths	83	118

During December there were registered fifteen births, eleven marriages and ten deaths.

Vick's Floral Guide.

Here it is again, brighter and better than ever; the cover alone, with its delicate tinted background and its dish of gracefully arranged flowers, would entitle it to a permanent place in every home. The book contains three beautiful colored plates, is full of illustrations, printed on the best of paper and is filled with just such information as is required by the gardener, the farmer, those growing plants, and every one needing seeds or plants. The price, only ten cents, can be deducted from the first order sent for goods. All parties any way interested in this subject should send at once to James Vick, Rochester, N. Y., for the Floral Guide.

Why do so many Ladies say : "I have so much trouble in getting the make of Toweling I like." If they call at Turnbull's first, they will find exactly what they want.

The Fiftieth Volume.

Last Monday the British Whig, Kingston, issued its semi-centennial number, that journal having completed the fiftieth year of publication. The special issue is a finely printed twelve page sheet, full as usual, of current news, as well as a large amount of special matter, chiefly reminiscences of matters of journalistic interest. The first page contains a portrait of Dr. Barker, the venerable founder, now in the 85th year of his age. The paper is still in the family, being owned and conducted by his grandson, Mr. E. J. Barker Pense. The Whig is a really wide-awake journal that publishes news, and it is a fine, thrifty sample of a well-conducted and live newspaper. If we might take the liberty, with so venerable a confrere, we wish the Whig continued prosperity for at least another half century.

Week of Prayer.

In compliance with the now universal custom in all Christian lands, the "Week of Prayer"—the second week in the new year—has been and is being observed in Peterborough. The prayer meetings have been held in the different churches as below :—On Monday night in the Bible Christian Church ; subject, "Praise and Thanksgiving." On Tuesday night in St. Andrew's Church ; subject, "Confession of Sin, and Prayer for Cleansing and Renewal." On Wednesday night, in the George Street Methodist Church ; subject, "Prayer for Families and Instructors of Youth." During the rest of the week the services will be arranged as follows : Thursday night, St. Paul's Presbyterian Church ; subject, "Prayer for the Church of Christ." On Friday night, in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church ; subject, "Intercession for the Nations."

Dry goods remain firm—"all wool and a yard wide." The people have "taken stock" of me four times and find the invoices O.K.

T. K——Y.

Those who took me for a green grocer were fooled. My brother chips put me at the top of the list.

R. H. G——N.

"I was a stranger and they put me in." I didn't seek votes, but the votes found me. It wouldn't do to "beat" the Golden Anvil.

M. M——R.

The people seem to think that a seat on the School Board, with the Division Court business, is enough for one man to attend to.

R. W. E——T.

Here I am again, the seventeenth time. They find out they can't turn the old war horse out to grass whenever they like.

A. R——F——D.

I'm here to stay :
"Come one, come all, this rock shall fly
From its firm base as soon as I."

JOHN D——S.

They tried in vain to shunt me off on the "siding." I'm still on the track.

WM. Y——D.

The people seem to prefer coal to wood.

R. E. W—D.

The electors are opposed to Lynch law.

JOHN L—H.

They think I'd better "attend to my knitting."

E. B. W——N.

Yes, Sir ! I'm elected again. I seem to be a fixture—stationery—don't you see?

T. M——S.

I'm a bricklayer, but number four seems to think I'm a brick—they put me at the head of the poll.

J. J. H—T—Y.

An even hundred in number four thought I was the right man.

J. K—D—Y.

I got distanced on my last "spin."

THOS. G—M—L.

The electors quoted Shakespere against me—"Throw physic to the dogs, we'll none of it."

DR. F—E.

The weather was too cold to plant me in the Council.

F. M—N.

We guess we've got a good Council—the arch obstructionist has been dropped and we hope now we wont have to blush after every Council meeting.

THE PEOPLE.

Turnbull's Grey Cottons are known North, South, East and West of Peterborough for their good value. See what he is offering during January, by the piece.

The Storm.

It is to be hoped that Vennor who prophesied an open winter and a sloppy January, is buried somewhere under the three feet of snow that covers the earth. Business was practically suspended in town on Wednesday; all trains were cancelled ; the walks were waist deep in snow, except on George street, where they were cleared and the snow piled up at the edges like earthworks around a beleagured city, and a single sleigh track in the middle of the street looked like a trail in the lumber woods. If this snow should, at the January thaw, go off with rain there would be, with the two hundred and fifty feet of dam formed by the railway bridge, a flood as great as that of 1870.

They Still Remember Canada.

The lack of Canadian national sentiment is often deplored. It seems that it exists, but it is not often observed at home, because nothing calls forth its manifestation. Yet it is a notable fact that Canadians, when they reach other lands, are clannish enough to suit the most exacting nationalist. In San Francisco the many exiled Canucks hang together and have actually formed an association. A number of the San Francisco Call gives an account of a ball and entertainment given by the "Canadian Association" in honor of Edward Hanlan, the champion, at the latter of which, Mr. John Elder, a former resident of Peterborough, delivered an address. The Call says :—

"The Canadian Association gave a ball last evening in honor of Edward Hanlan, the champion oarsman of the world, at B'nai B'rith Hall. The hall was prettily decorated for the occasion. The words, "Seventh Anniversary Canadian Association—Welcome to Hanlan," were strung across the stage in gilt letters, while the rear of the stage was artistically draped with Canadian and American flags. The galleries were trimmed with a variegated fringe and banners covered the walls. A literary programme of but a few numbers, but nevertheless well rendered, was presented. John Elder made the introductory address, and introduced Mr. Hanlan, who addressed the audience and declared it his intention to remain the champion oarsman. R. Guy McClelland followed in an address of welcome, which was humorously delivered. Mrs. Blake Alverson sang the ballad, "At the Ferry," and as an encore gave "Robin." Wm. H. Barnes next delivered an address. The duet, "How Dear to Me the Hour," was sung by Miss Hattie Cowles and Mrs. S. M. Parker, who sang "Some Day" as an encore. After the programme was concluded the floor was cleared and dancing indulged in till a late hour."

Five shearsmen at Bailey's nail works, Harrisburg, Pa, refused to continue work because the company desired them to pay the wages of two helpers out of their own earnings. As a result the works have been stopped and about two hundred men have been thrown out.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Cemetery Company will be held on Monday, Jan. 21st. In advance of the report Mr. Kelly will furnish at the meeting, he has kindly mentioned that the receipts this year were $2,860.40, as compared with $1,339.78 the previous year, leaving a credit balance in favor of 1883 of $1,520.62. When it is considered that there has been a large number of improvements made ; 200 lots reclaimed from a state of nature, improvements in connection with water works, office fixtures, etc., etc., this large surplus is very creditable to the management of the directors and to the economy and carefulness of Mr. John Kelly, the efficient and industrious superintendent.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

At the meeting held on Thursday last the following resolution was adopted :

Moved by Mr. Wrighton, seconded by Mr. Robinson, that this Board having counted up the votes cast for school trustees in the several wards in the town of Peterborough, on the 2nd day of January, 1884, as directed by the Act in that behalf, do declare the result to be as follows, that is to say :—

WARD No. 1.—Geo. B. Sproule, elected by acclamation.

WARD No. 2.—Votes cast for John McClelland, 21 ; for R. W. Errett, 110 ; and that R. W. Errett is therefore elected school trustee for this ward.

WARD No. 3.—Votes cast for Melville Millar, 73 ; for Edward B. Wilson, 33 ; and that Melville Millar is therefore duly elected for this ward.

WARD No. 4.—Votes cast for Henry Denne, 62 ; for Geo. Hilliard, 8 ; and that Henry Denne is therefore duly elected school trustee for this ward.

All of the said trustees are elected for the full term allowed by law.

PERSONAL.

Rev. R. N. Willoughby, a former pastor of George Street Methodist Church, spent a day or two in town the latter part of last week.

Rev. Dr. Clarke, of McMaster Hall, Toronto, occupied the pulpit of the Baptist church, last Sunday, at both services.

Rev. A. Munro, the lately called pastor of the Baptist church, will take charge of the church next Sunday, and permanently enter upon the duties of the pastorate.

Mr. J. W. Dunnett, a former business man of Peterborough, has been elected Mayor of Belleville. Almost as high an honor as being a resident of Peterborough.

From the Listowell Banner we learn the particulars of the induction of Rev. Isaac Campbell into the pastorate of Knox church of that place. Rev. Mr. Tully was present and assisted at the solemn ceremony, delivering the customary address to the people. The Banner states that Rev. Mr. Campbell assumes the pastorate under most favorable auspices and predicts a career of usefulness for the new minister.

Mr. C. E. Shaw, of the Bank of Toronto, and a well known and clever vocalist, whose services have been in frequent demand and always obliging rendered, has been promoted to a position in the Montreal branch of the bank. While congratulating Mr. Shaw on his promotion, we must add that he will be greatly missed at musical gatherings in town, and in the choir of St. John's church, of which he is a prominent member.

—The Scotch pig iron makers have published their annual report. The production for the year amount to 1,126,024 tons, being an increase over last year of 2,679 tons. Stocks in hand, 250,837 being an increase of 24,416 tons, while Connal's stores contain 583,728 tons, or a total decrease in Scotland of only 766 tons. This is considered disappointing, as a greater decrease was anticipated. The average number of furnaces in blast is 110.

THE OPENING CARNIVAL.

The Masquerade Season Opened at the Skating Rink.

The carnival season was opened at the skating rink on Friday evening last, very auspiciously. The intensely cold weather, while it made the ice first-class, rather frightened the public from attending in great numbers. The City Band Orchestra was present and supplied excellent music. The number of masks was very small but this was compensated for by their general superiority. There were several unusually good costumes and "get ups," among the laster was perhaps the best and without doubt the biggest thing on ice, the elephant Jumbo. The inclement weather prevented a good many good costumes that would otherwise have been on hand from being present. Many of masks neglected to leave their names and characters at the office, and therefore a complete list cannot be given. The following is as complete a list as could be got :—

Miss H. Johnston	A Bright Idea
" J. Logan	Highland Lassie
" Minnie Fawcett	Joan of Arc
" A. Stevenson, (Pt. Hope)	Peek-a-Boo
" L. A. Mayhew	Eastern Queen
" Josie Bradburn	Italian Street Singer
" Miss Ada Hughes	Apple Woman
" Ida Huston	Jack and Jill
Mr. Wm. Rutherford
W. R. Turner	Knight in Armour
L. Mayhew	Aunt Sally's Cook
A. Sutherland	Irish Landlord
A. F. Read	Jumbo
J. E. Hawkins
R. Tate	Elephant Trainer
J. Best	Lower Canadian
S. G. Wright	Conductor on Missing Link
Geo. Morris	A country Belle
D. Montgomery	and her Bean
Y. Eastwood	Peterboro' Bicycle Club
E. Thompson	Sawers' Canvasser
T. A. Choate	A Lower Canadian
G. Dawson	Shoo Fly
Wm. Rudkins	Peterboro' Lacrosse Club
J. L. Wood	Snow Shoer
Herbert Dawson	Sailor
F. Larose	Topsy
John Miller	Eugene Aram
Bert Bradburn	Snow Storm
Max Hamilton	Lawn Tennis

WHAT SHALL I GIVE HIM?

Is a puzzling question. It is easy enough to find things for the "hers," in fact the variety is embarrassing; but the selection of a present for the male sex is more difficult. We have known Ladies to present their Husbands with useful Household Articles and it is not a bad idea, but if you wish to give the man something for personal use, the list to choose from is rather short. CLOTHES are Staple—always in demand. Why not a new OVERCOAT or SUIT? A SET OF SHIRTS, some fine HOSIERY, HANDKERCHIEFS, or NECKWEAR? or, if that is not appropriate, give the Domestic Man a HOUSE COAT OR WRAPPER. While to the Gay Young Man, SHIRT STUDS, SCARF PINS, SILK TIE or SCARF. Now that you have the hint what to get, we will modestly add that a good place to get everything of this sort is right here, where we are making a Special Holiday Display of Useful and Ornamental Wearin Apparel for Men and Boys.

According to the Star, one of the candidates for municipal honors in Asphodel was so sure of being returned that he went to the returning officer after being nominated and insisted on taking the declaration of office.

OMEMEE.

Last week Messrs. Kincaid & Sandy commenced sawing lumber in Stephenson's mill. Already quite a lot of material has been turned out, and the hum of the saws make things seem livelier than they were last winter.

MILLBROOK.

Rev. W. C. Allan, rector of Shewley Herts, England, and son of Rev. Rural Dean Allen, of Millbrook, and his bride arrived here on Saturday of last week. The Rev. gentleman preached to St. Thomas' congregation on the Sunday following.

PICTON.

The preliminary trial of the prisoners Joseph Tompsitt and David and George Louder, who are charged with the murder of Peter Lazier, at the house of Gilbert Jones, which they were attempting to burglarize, near the village of Bloomfield, on the night of the 21st of December, closed here. The accused were committed for trial at the Spring Assizes.

BRIGHTON.

A motion was made at Osgoode Hall Wednesday to strike the name of Titus, of Brighton, off the roll of solicitors of the Supreme Court, for unprofessional conduct while acting as solicitor for Miss Wright, who was tried for the murder of Ryan and sentenced to a short term of imprisonment. The motion was allowed to stand over for three weeks, and the court solicitor to intervene and prosecute, so as to save Miss Wright further expense.

CAMPBELLFORD

The village council of 1884 is composed as follows:—Reeve, G. S. Gillespie Councillors—R. W. Turner, Frederick and Townsend.

At Seymour West cheese factory there were 981,803 pounds of milk received during last summer, from which the company derived 98,518 pounds of cheese. The cash received amounted to $10,177.77, and the value per standard $31.12.

The report of the Meyersburg cheese factory for last season shows that there were 9,904,877 lbs. of milk received, and that the total amount realized from the cheese manufactured was $4,710.89. The average price per pound was a small fraction less than ten cents, and the value per standard of 3,000 lbs., was $30.25, without expenses.

HASTINGS.

The Christmas collection in St. Mary's church amounted to $67.75.

The Separate School, which opened on Tuesday last, is presided over this year by Mr. Jas. Myles. The trustees could not have made a more judicious selection.

Mr. Harry Stewart, of this village, by an accidental slip on New Year's evening, broke his leg above the ankle.

Councillors for 1884:—A. Wilson, jr., H. Johnson, John Coughlin and A. M. Paton, the vote being in order named, the highest being 75 and the lowest 59.

The concert given by the choir of St. Mary's church on the evening of Wednesday, Dec. 26th, was probably the best ever given in Hastings, as regards merit and financial results. The gross receipts amounted to a trifle over $200.00. Scores who held tickets were unable to obtain admission; while hundreds even with the uncertainty of effecting an entrance could not procure one of the coveted bits of pasteboard for money or price.

TRENTON.

A drama in real life occurred here last week, which, though containing many humorous features, is not without its pathos. The guests were duly invited, the festivities provided for in the way of roast goose, etc., cakes and pies and things, at the house of the sister of the bride to be. The groom to be arrived from a neighboring county, only to learn that she had left with the intent of not being wed. The guests, however, assembled to eat the good things, and the would-be groom was persuaded to join the party. He made a heroic and philosophical speech at the table, saying he was glad she was gone, for it was better before than after marriage. She was certainly not the wife for him, as her conduct showed. The approving guests, one and all, then graciously presented him all the pretty and valuable presents intended for the bride, and he in turn gave the hostess a small sum of money to pay the expenses of the feast, and the company dispersed, the intended groom doubtless a sadder if not a wiser man.

LINDSAY.

The county buildings, having been supplied with the proper ramification of pipes, will in future be lighted with gas.

The festivities and extra ceremonies incident to the Christmas season having been got through with, the Salvation Army has settled down to the usual routine of service.

The bazaar in the Opera House Wednesday evening by the young ladies of the Sodality was well attended considering the unfavorable weather. The occasion was pleasant and successful and a credit to the young ladies. An election contest took place, in which Mr. Blake beat Sir John Macdonald by thirty votes. Sir John still holds on to office, however, and will require another notice to quit.

Our exports, says the Post, are increasing in magnitude. This week Mr. Samuel Cornell, of bee-keeping fame, shipped to Winnipeg several corpulent packages of honey. This speaks well for the excellence of Mr. Cornell's honey, and it is beyond question that if an invoice of the same saccharine luxury had been laid down at Rat Portage a few months ago the sweetness of the consignment would have been a powerful factor in modifying the political acidity of the situation.

FRASERVILLE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. Thos. Smith, formerly blacksmith with Mr. R. Stewart, concluded to quit blacksmithing, and by so doing has secured for himself a very suitable position on the O. & Q. Railroad. We believe he likes it well. His many friends here wish him success, and hope that honorableness will characterize his future career as it has his past.

Mr. Albert Goodfellow, who is a No. 1 mechanic, has again rented from Mr. Robt. Stewart his wagon and carriage shop; by their united efforts they intend in the future, as in the past, to do all of their work in first-class style. Mr. Stewart has been our village blacksmith for some time past, and the farming community have acknowledged him to be a superior workman; therefore, we have no doubt in saying a prosperous year is before them.

A few of the aspirants for municipal honors reside in this neighborhood, but, owing to certain disadvantages, were defeated. Though these gentlemen sweetly sing, charmingly converse, and prudently conduct themselves on all occasions, notwithstanding the majority of the electors thought it discretion to have them absent from the town hall this year. It may be because this is leap year and one of them is a bachelor, and apparently very backward in bringing forward such an important subject as the matrimonial one, and possibly some lady will be merciful and make mention of it to him, which would undoubtedly be more felicity to him than a seat at the municipal table. May such prove a consoling power to the gentleman referred to.

Mr. Geo. McDowell, son of the Rev. H. McDowell, who was the popular pastor on Fraserville circuit some time ago, was down on a visit spending his holidays with Mr. John Lightfoot, his brother-in-law. He is looking well, notwithstanding the very severe course he is taking at college. Left for Toronto a few days ago.

The people who reside in the village are lamenting greatly because of the defeat of their man as reeve, in S. Monaghan. We understand he promised to secure for them permission to attend the school in S. S. No. 9, Cavan, free of charge, while they reside in No. 3, S. Monaghan. But, alas! it is too bad that he was unsuccessful, for the children here will have to tramp about two and one-fourth miles, whereas, had he been elected, one mile of a walk to school would have been all.

Mr. A. Stuart's sale was a great success, as nearly everything offered went for its full value. Mr. R. Thompson's brother-in-law has purchased the farm and intends to move down immediately.

Last Wednesday, one of the days of the great snow storm, Mr. M. Halloran's team ran away; starting at Mr. Robertson's store, and, owing to the almost impassable roads, between running and walking, reached Mr. Halloran's yard. No damage done.

DOURO.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Considerable sickness prevails in this part of the township. There have been several cases of diphtheria and many cases of scarlet fever, some of which have ended fatally. Three members of the family of Mr. Wm. Leahey are down with the scarlet fever, and one—the eldest, aged about four years, succumbed to the dread disease. Mr. Wm. Leeson's family is also prostrated with the same scourge, but they still survive, with prospects of their recovery.

Everybody is pleased that Mr. Foley has been elected councillor again. He is a sound, practical, honorable and reliable man, whom we would not like to see off the council board.

Mr. Moloney's re-election is a tribute not only to his past services, but to his future usefulness. He has filled the position of Warden with credit, not only to himself and the township, but also to the county.

The snow is of an unknown depth, and moving about is a matter of difficulty. It it too deep to admit of lumbering operations, or moving cordwood, unless previously piled outside the woods.

ITALIAN DESPERADO.

On Sunday before last a vagrant Italian called at Mrs. Smith's hotel here and demanded that a pop bottle which he carried, be filled with whiskey. He was refused, of course, whereupon the thirsty son of sunny Italy drew his revolver and fired at the barmaid's trembling legs; the bullet missed and went boring through the door of the bar cupboard. The wretch left and hasn't been seen since. There are great numbers of Italians prowling about the country, dirty, idle and vicious, without work, money or honesty, and people should be on the lookout for their depredations.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Smith, Ennismore, Lakefield, &c., Agricultural Society, took place in the Council Chamber, Lakefield, on Thursday, the 10th inst, the President, Mr. John Garbutt in the chair. It was moved by Mr. J. C. Sherin, seconded by Mr. T. E. Bell, that the Auditor's report be received.—Carried. The report was then read, which showed that there was $11.35 of a balance due the Treasurer, exclusive of the members' fees retained for the ensuing year. There had been paid out for prizes $230.75. It was moved by Mr. R. Graham seconded by Mr. John Hull, that the report be adopted.—Carried. The following officers were elected:—Mr. John Garbutt, President; Mr. John C. Sherin, Vice-President. Directors:—Messrs. T. E. Bell, Geo. A. Elliott, Isaac Garbutt, jr., Alex. Fitzgerald, Dr. Caldwell, John Bickle, Geo. W. Fitzgerald, John Preston, and R. A. Strickland. Messrs. W. J. Wallace and John Hull, Auditors. A meeting of the directors was then held and Mr. M. S. Dean re-appointed Sec-Treas.

ROYAL TEMPLARY.

At a meeting of the Lakefield Council held on Tuesday the 8th inst., the following officers were elected:—

Their installation takes place next Tuesday evening the 22nd inst.

MUNICIPAL.

The last regular monthly meeting of the Lakefield Village Council took place on Monday evening last, January 14th. Members present, Mr. R. C. Strickland, Reeve, in the chair, and Messrs. Cox, Nelson, McWilliams and Urquhart Councillors. The minutes of former meeting were read and confirmed. On motion a deputation was appointed to visit Ottawa on February 5th to represent Lakefield in urging upon the Government the early construction of the Trent Valley Canal and the importance of the maintenance of navigation between Lakefield and Young's Point.

Moved by Councillor McWilliams, seconded by Councillor Nelson, that the following accounts be paid and that the Reeve's order for the several amounts be issued, viz:

John Cooper, drawing lumber	$1 40
Isaac Watson, salary as H. Inspector	5 00
" " wages	2 00
Jas. Richardson, wages	2 00
Geo. Rowe, wages	63
O. Rodgers, wages	63
Total	$14 66

(Carried,)

Moved by Councillor Nelson, seconded by Councillor Cox, that this Council grant the Collector the sum of five dollars for extra services.—Carried.

Moved by Councillor Urquhart, seconded by Councillor Nelson, that this Council do now adjourn sine die.

COLD SNAPS.

SOME EXTRAORDINARY FREEZING SPELLS OF PAST TIMES.

It is a bit of coincidence, says the Cleveland Herald, that the comet upon which Napoleon's soldiers gazed seventy years ago, when they were making their dreadful march from Moscow which resulted in the death from cold and exposure of 400,000 men, should be accompanied on its reappearance with a bitter cold spell of weather. When it swept out of sight the world witnessed an unusually severe winter. The incident, as well as the present cold snap, recalls other severe winters. In October, 753, and February, 754, the denizens of the cities of mosques and minarets, were astonished by a cold spell of weather, and the two seas of Constantinople were frozen for twenty days. In 1063 the Thames was frozen over for fourteen weeks. In 1407 the cold was so intense in England that all the small birds perished, and in 1433 the large fowl of the air were driven by the terrible cold into the towns and cities of Germany.

In 1468 the winter was so severe in Flanders that the wine distributed was cut with hatchets.

The year 1658 was noted for cold weather in England. Thousands of forest and shade trees were split by the frost, birds and stock perished, a line of stages ran on the ice in the middle of the Thames.

In 1691 the wolves were driven by the cold into Vienna, where they attacked men and cattle on the streets.

In 1810 quicksilver froze in the thermometer bulbs in Moscow.

One of the most remarkable changes of temperature was witnessed at Hornsey and Hammersmith, near London, 1767. The thermometer was three degrees below zero on the 4th of January, and seventy-two hours later it had leaped to 55 degrees above zero.

With respect to America, some of the remarkable cold spells were as follows: In 1730, and again in 1821, New York harbour was frozen over so that teams were driven across the ice to Staten Island. The neighbouring State of Indiana saw weather cold enough to congeal the mercury in 1855. The winter of 1881 was made memorable by cold weather. On the 13th and 26th days of January many deaths occurred from the intense cold, and the residents of Mobile saw the thermometer sink to zero.

A record of cold sieges would be imperfect without a mention of the terribly sudden storm that swept over the country in 1863, which has gone into history as the cold New Year's. A drayman was frozen to death in Cincinnatti while driving along the street; a man climbing a fence in Minnesota froze to death and toppled over into the snow, while the loss of human and animal lives in all parts of the country was immense.

Our New Watchmaker, Mr. Hughan, comes well recommended, and we are sure any work entrusted to him will be done in good style. Office lately occupied by Elias Barnham, Simcoe Steet. 18-tf

NORWOOD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

AGRICULTURAL.

The annual meeting of the Asphodel, Belmont and Dummer Agricultural Society was held in the town hall, Norwood, on Thursday last. The attendance was by no means what it should have been, only those few who take a lively interest in the advancement of the society. The treasurer's report showed that the receipts of the year amounted to $222.00, and the expenditure $262.55, leaving a balance of $9.53 in the hands of the treasurer. The following gentlemen were then elected officers for the current year:—Wm. Burgess, president; W. G. Patterson, 1st vice-president; Dennis Hurley, 2nd vice-president; W. E. Roxburgh, secy-treas. Directors,—F. Birdsall, Jas. Moore, Jas. Stephenson, Chas. O'Rielly, Geo. Elliott, Charles Nicoll, W. H. Stephenson, John Brecksridge and Walter Scott. Auditors—W. H. Stephenson and J. A. Butterfield.

A protracted discussion took place regarding the suit instituted by the society against the Village of Norwood, for the recovery of monies granted to purchase, in conjunction with the village, suitable grounds for the annual exhibitions, the result being that the president was requested to instruct the Society's lawyer to stay proceedings for the present.

THE FIRST LOAD.

The first cargo of merchandize per the Ontario & Quebec Railway, arrived for Norwood on Wednesday of last week, being a load of lumber from Deseronto for Mr. S. H. Brown. It may be interesting to know that the freight on the load was less than half the amount that the same amount of stuff cost on the Grand Junction from Belleville to Hastings, Mr. Brown also saving the carriage from that village to Norwood. Quite a revolution in freight rates. However, the Grand Junction had better make hay while the sun shines.

SNOW BLOCKADE.

This community has been completely snowed up during the past week, and consequently business has been almost at a stand-still. Roads in all directions are rendered impassable by the great depth of snow, and as soon as they were partially opened, they were either filled up at once by drifting or continued snow-falling. The construction engine on the Ontario and Quebec Railway here kept going over the line for a few days to keep the rails clear of the snow; but all to no purpose, the storm-king prevailed. For over a week the work of construction has been stopped, and on Monday last it was determined by the railway contractors to discontinue work for a month.

NOTES.

Several Norwoodites had to "roost" in the snow-blocked train between Birdsall's station and Hastings on Tuesday of last week.

Several deaths from scarlet fever occurred here last week.

Nearly all the railway navvies have left for their homes.

The Methodist ministers of Norwood and Millbrook changed pulpits on Sunday last.

The services in the Methodist church during the week of prayer were well attended.

The Rev. Mr. McCleary, formerly Anglican minister here, accompanied by his wife, is visiting his friends in this vicinity.

The trains from the east have been very irregular in their arrival at this point of late.

Mr. and Mrs. McGregor, (late Miss M. T. Cope) left here for their home in Winnipeg on Monday morning.

Ready-made Mantles, only $2.50. At Turnbull's.

HARRASSED EGYPT.

END OF THE KHEDIVE'S AUTHORITY IN THE SOUDAN.

The Times of Tuesday contains an important dispatch from Cairo. It is stated that the authority of the Khedive in the Soudan is practically at an end. Scarcely any of the Arab tribes now remain loyal to Egypt. The Egyptian government, finding itself unable to protect the people any further, has ordered an evacuation en masse of Khartoum and of the adjacent cities. It is estimated that there are eleven thousand Christians and Europeans who will be the victims of the Moslem fanaticism unless they can be immediately transported to Upper Egypt. It is thought that the government will send a flotilla up the Nile to assist their escape, the hopes of which are very slender.

A correspondent made a tour of the clubs to ascertain how far London public opinion endorses the government's decision as to the Soudan. At the Army and Navy a colonel of the artillery was met, who went through the Abyssinian campaign with Lord Napier of Magdala. He said that opinion in the army was on the whole favorable to the government policy in restricting British interference to Upper Egypt. The only question, he said, was whether the Eastern Soudan should not have been included where the troops could have a base for supplies. War in such a district, except at certain times, is destruction to European life, and Indian troops must be employed.

It is stated that the government has given orders to evacuate Khartoum. The guns will be spiked and the powder destroyed. It is believed that all efforts will now be concentrated in the defence of Massawah and Suakim.

Eli Mahdi, the False Prophet, demands two thousand pounds ransom for five nuns and four priests he holds in captivity. The Austrian consul is asking ing merchants to subscribe the amount.

The Porte has definitely decided not to interfere in the Soudan.

PETERBOROUGH, JAN. 17, 1884.

Socialism.

This term has at least two distinct and utterly opposite significations. As it is a subject which is very commonly referred to in papers and magazines at the present day, it is perhaps well that the varied views should be explained. The general impression that connects it with Communism and all kinds of terrorism is only partly correct.

It must be admitted that in the ranks of those who advocate changes in the present aspect of society, there are some whose tenets seem to indicate a complete mutuny against the established order of things. They are blasphemers and infidels, and their real desire is to set up Atheism instead of Christianity. That they are capable of the most awful acts of cruelty, history, especially in recent days, too plainly teaches. With such persons no decent man can have anything to do. No language that we can possibly use can express our detestation of men so full of rank diabolism as are such arch-agitators.

And there is another and a far different class of Socialists. For what is the doctrine of real Socialism? It is the philosophy which teaches that the social relations of mankind are capable of a better and more orderly and beneficial arrangement. True Socialists are those who seek to better the condition of their fellow-men. When thoughtful, earnest men look upon the oppressions, fraud, disease, poverty and wretchedness so prevalent everywhere, is it little wonder that they strive to find out both the cause and the remedy. There is enough created for the supply of all—enough for food and raiment and shelter. And yet many are without these necessary things. So it is concluded the methods of distribution are deficient. And the great end of social science should be to give to each person "the fullest satisfaction of his wants, the most complete guaranty of his rights, and the amplest scope for the exercise of all his faculties, physical, intellectual, moral and religious.

Perhaps among the writings of Socialists, ancient and modern, the name of Plato stands out not only as one of the first, but considering the age in which he lived, the most remarkable, His celebrated work, "The Republic," is simply an outljne of what his imagination conceived as the most perfect state of socity. His work gives real evidence of a grand imagination of wonderful sagacity. But he certainly admitted two rather singular inconsistencies—a community of property and a community of wives. At any rate his work was theoritical rather than practical.

The disorders of existing society were also attacked by a famous Englishman. Sir Thomas More in his Utopia, a work whose name is now applied to all absurd or chimerical projects. This writer assigned all domestic labors to women, permitted slavery as a punishment for crime, and provided for all excesses of his imaginary kingdom by planting colonies composed of his disaffected ones.

Robert Owen, another Englishman, so long as he endeavored to put his principles into practice was the most successful Socialist in accomplishing his purposes of any who have ever lived. In his manufacturing colony at New Lanark he set afoot many improvements for the benefit of the working classes, all of which were excellent and met with marvellous success. He strenuously upheld perfect justice in the payment of labor, thorough education for old and young and rigid economy in domestic matters. But, as a philosopher and teacher, he was an utter failure, and, though he labored incessantly to indoctrinate people with his ideas, his once widespread popularity rapidly waned.

At present many otherwise excellent men, in talking with about socialism, make serious and stupid blunders. There is a great deal of want and a great deal of misery, it must be admitted. But it is an error to assert, as prominent socialists do, that class is more bitterly opposed to class than formerly. It is equally absurd to argue that the rich are getting richer and the poor poorer. The facts are all the other way. Professor Levi states that the wages of the workingman have risen fifty-nine per cent. since 1851. On the other hand in the same period the average income has sunk from £324 to £544. Such estimates cannot be answered by any amount of cavil. They prove conclusively that the workingman is not half so badly off as patronizing agitators and demagogues strive to make him appear. And they agree consistently and perfectly with other statistics. People are now much more extravagant in their use of luxuries. In 1840 the quantity of sugar used per head in Great Britain was a little over fifteen pounds; now it is over sixty-seven. There is a similar increase in the use of such dutiable articles as tea, tobacco and spirits. Bank depositions have increased enormously within the present century. Fifty years ago the number of depositors in the savings banks of the United Kingdom was 429,000; now they number over four millions. At that time the aggregate amount of their deposits was a little over sixty-five millions of dollars; now it reaches the surprising sum of four hundred millions! If the people could only be induced to lead sober, upright lives, there would be even less than there now is, of visionary philosophers with their countless nostrums for the grievous ills to which all human flesh is heir. In many such cases agitators do evil rather than good.

LEAP YEAR LIBERTIES.

NO CAUSE FOR BACHELORS, ALARM.

The question naturally arises why the gentler sex have elected, nominally at least, to reverse the established order of the relations of the sexes every fourth year? The question may be answered in this way. In the olden time when the custom originated, women were under much greater restraint in social matters than at the present day. Then they were kept in the house almost constantly, and never allowed to stir out at all, except in the company of some old duenna in the pay of stern parents, who would no more hear of an innocent flirtation than they would cut their own heads off. The maids were not even allowed to receive a proposal of marriage, except through their guardians; much less to make one. It was not then, as now, when if a girl wants to marry a dude, even though she cannot ask him, she can give him to understand quite plainly that any proposition he may have to make in that line will be received, the customary and decent confusion ending in assent. It was the state of seclusion in which marriageble girls were kept in those days that probably incited them to extra privileges for leap year and they probably selected that time on the strength on their knowledge that men generally spent about three-fourths of their earnings on themselves and the remaining fourth on their womankind, and so reasoned that perhaps they might give up one fourth of their privileges with respect to courtship. Though the imperceptible encroachments of time and custom have so changed the social structures that leap year rights are not necessary to the fair sex, since they now practice what amounts to nearly the same thing in all years, yet ancient traditions are not forgotten, if not observed, and efforts to revive them in some degree are frequently made. Thus it happens that on New Year's day in leap year some people try to have the ladies make the call of the season, while the gentlemen remain at home to entertain. Society, however, is very conservative and regards its custom, if not its regard to whom its admits within its charmed and gleaming circle. There is really no cause for bachelors' alarm for all attempts to introduce leap year practices have ended in failure. There is a class outside the sacred pale of what is self-styled "society," but, nevertheless, quite as good as that which sparkles in Vanity Fair, who are not so ultra formal but that they can enjoy a little innocent fun, and in this circle leap year parties are sometimes indulged in, but rarely; and take the year all round, the bachelor's liberty is about to secure as in any other.

LONDON RAILWAY TRAINS.

London, England, has fourteen terminal railway stations, from which no fewer than 2,202 trains depart daily. Nearly 1,600 of those leave between 10 a.m. and 10 p.m.; 320 trains leave daily from one station. Referring to the underground railway, this wonderful line forms a complete belt or inner circle, around the whole of the inner part of London. Between Farrrngdon and Moorgate streets 568 trains run every week day—nearly twenty-four trains an hour, or one nearly every three minutes. The Metropolitan Underground Railway Company conveys about 70,000,000 passengers annually, or 1,500,000 per week. Great and mighty are thy works, oh London.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Special Meeting.

A special meeting of the Board of Education was held last Friday night. Present,—the Chairman, Mr. Stevenson, Messrs. Rutherford, Kendry, Sawers, Wrighton, Burnham, Weir, Dumble, Cox and Sproule. Messrs. Errett and Miller, new members, also took their seats.

The minutes of the special meeting to consider returns of the election and to give effect to the result of the same, were read, as also those of the last meeting in December, which were both confirmed.

BUSINESS OF THE MEETING.

The Chairman stated that this meeting was called to deal with a vacancy in the South Ward School, caused by Miss Ross' retirement, and to consider the Secretary's statement of receipts and expenditures.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

Mr. Dumble said, as Chairman of the Finance Committee, he had instructed the Secretary to call a meeting to consider the financial statement as prepared by the secretary. The statement had been examined by the committee and appeared to be correct, and the report was submitted as follows:—

COMMUNICATIONS.

From W. H. Schofield, in reference to school fees.—Received.

From Miss Eliza Johnson, asking leave of absence in February to attend Ottawa Normal School.—Request granted, the Board to find a substitute.

From the Inspector of the Public Schools, stating that there had been harmony of action between the teachers of the West Ward School, all of whom were careful of their work and desirous, perhaps over-desirous, of securing progress. The progress of the pupils of the South Ward School was all that could, with reasonable exceptions, be expected. In the Central School, in a few instances, a little more individual attention would be in the interest of all concerned. The Peterborough Public School Pupils had acquitted themselves very creditably at the entrance examinations. About eighty per cent. were successful. His visits had disclosed a neglect of penmanship, resulting from inattention to pupils while writing. Too frequent examinations for promotion resulted in a system of "cram," not to be encouraged. The Inspector closed his report by calling attention to the imprudence of long "home lessons" to pupils of tender years.—Referred to the Comittee on School Supervision.

ATTENDANCE OF PUPILS.

Mr. H. Kay Coleman, headmaster of the Public Schools, submitted a report of attendance in December, as follows:—

	On Reg.	Av. Att
Central School	535	475
South Ward	213	173
West Ward	157	137

Received.

From the Janitor of the West Ward School, requesting the Board to send the wood to the school, ready for the stove.—Referred to the Property Committee.

From the Janitor of the South Ward School, asking an increase of salary of $52.—Referred to the Property Committee.

From Miss Kate Ross, through Mr. Kidd, tendering her resignation as teacher in the South Ward School.—Referred to the Committee on Appointments.

Mr. Stevenson said that Miss Sim had been appointed temporarily—till the vacancy could be permanently filled.

Mr. Kendry moved, seconded by Mr. Cox, that the appointment of Miss Sims be made permanent, at the same salary as Miss Ross.

Mr. Errett moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Wrighton, that the applications of teachers be referred to the Committee on Appointments, with power to fill vacancies.

The original motion was carried.

MODERN LANGUAGES MASTERSHIP.

Mr. W. J. James, Modern Language Master of the Institute, tendered his resignation, to take effect on February 1st.

After discussion, Mr. Dumble presented a report of the special committee, which, being subsequently withdrawn, is not here published.

Mr. Dumble moved, seconded by Mr. Sproule, that the report be adopted.

Mr. Errett moved, seconded by Dr. Burnham, that the report be not adopted, but be referred back to the incoming Committee on Appointments to be appointed by the new Board.

Mr. Dumble said it was no quite courteous to refer the matter to a committee and then take it out of their hands.

Dr. Burnham said it was not more discourteous than for the Board to take the matter of the Readers out of the hands of the committee.

Mr. Sproule pointed out the advantages of a lady teacher in the Institute, both in point of economy and for social reasons

Mr. Errett remarked that he had, in the capacity of a candidate, been pretty freely among the people, and he had heard nothing of a desire for a lady teacher in the Institute.

Mr. Rutherford approved of the appointment of a lady teacher. He approved of the report of the committee in view of Mr. James' resignation.

Mr. Cox was surprised that Mr. Errett said he had heard nothing in the course of his election canvass of a lady teacher being wanted in the Collegiate Institute, when the fact is, he owed his election to his opponent's opposition to a former female teacher.

Mr. Millar asked to have the matter delayed, because he was not sufficiently acquainted with it to vote intelligently.

Mr. Errett also advocated delay on the same grounds.

Mr. Dumble withdrew the report, and the motions, depending thereon, of course fell to the ground.

Mr. James was heard, and stated his surprise that, after being assured by individual members of the committee that his position was perfectly safe, he had practically received his dismissal. He said he felt very strongly on the subject.

Mr. Sproule explained that the committee simply considered the matter of economy.

Mr. Dumble said that it did not look very seemly for Mr. James to impugn the honor of the Board, when he came with a telegram and told the Chairman of the Board that he had an offer of an appointment at $900 a year, and stated that an answer must be given at once and that unless an increase was granted he would resign. Mr. Dumble referred to the deliberations of the committee, which led to a change of policy of the school, by securing a lady teacher, and it was agreed that Mr. James' services should be retained till July. Mr. James had completely misunderstood the action of the Board.

Mr. Errett said the committee had individually assured Mr. James that his position was safe, and that he thought it was equivalent to a promise of $900 a year.

Mr. Kendry said the present complication arose from not dealing promptly with such matters.

Mr. Cox said that there was no action or intention on the part of the committee to do an injustice to Mr. James. But he claimed for the Board the right, even after promising Mr. James $900 a year, to change its policy and dispense with his services if it saw fit.

Mr. Sproule said that if Mr. James had solicited his Walkerton position without any intimation from the Board that his services were unsatisfactory, he was in a very peculiar position.

Mr. Weir said the feeling in favor of a lady teacher for the Institute was prevalent. He could not understand why some members of the Board should oppose at one time an increase of Mr. James' salary to $900, and be so strongly in favor of it now. He thought if we could save $400 or $500 by employing a lady teacher, it was the duty of the Board to do it.

Mr. Rutherford said that Mr. James was given to understand that he would receive the $900 salary on condition of performing additional duties (Mr. Dumble—No, no—the fact was only mentioned of his ability to take classics). Mr. Rutherford said Mr. James had put the matter in a very peculiar position.

Mr. Dumble proposed that Mr. James' resignation be accepted.

Mr. Errett advocated leaving over the matter till the appointment of the new Committee on Appointments.

Mr. Sawers said that if Mr. James could teach classics better than Mr. Campbell, then appoint him in place of Mr. Campbell.

Mr. Sproule asked Mr. James if he made application for the position in Walkerton, or was it offered?

Mr. James said he understood from a proposal made at the Board, to abolish the Institute, that he would have to seek another situation, and in consequence of that he had applied for the Walkerton appointment. In respect to his present resignation, he made it under the impression that he was under a stigma, and if the Board saw fit to remove any chance of such an imputation he was willing to accept the $900 and remain.

Mr. Dumble moved, seconded by Mr. Rutherford, that if Mr. James elects to continue in the service of the Board till the end of the present term, that his salary be $900 from the first of January.

The motion was agreed to and the Board adjourned.

"I have been for eight months unable to work, and felt as though I would as lief die as live, through Dyspepsia and Indigestion. I weighed at the time of getting a bottle of McGregor's Speedy Cure 130 lbs; used 3 bottles, and now weigh 163 lbs. and never was better in my life. FOREST PRESERVATION.

An Important Letter on an Important Subject.

We cheerfully give place to the following letter from Mr. R. W. Phipps on the important subject of forest preservation and restoration;

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

Sir,—Perhaps you will allow me the use of your widely circulated journal on a topic not uninteresting to many who view with concern the too complete disforesting of settled Ontario.

At present, according to much correspondence I receive on the subject, very many of our farms have no forest left; while a great number have but a few acres. These are notes of warning in these letters it might be well to re-echo. Some farmers who, out of wood, are using coal, find the annual bill greater and the comfort less than they anticipated. Some complain that over-clearing now exposes them to wintry tempests, severe to cattle and consumptive of fodder, blowing the snowy covering of the winter wheat from the centre to the sides of the field, freezing out some portions of the crop and drowning others, rendering all human life less comfortable, and that of the drift-impeded traveller peculiarly so. Many, too, state that in consequence of the same operation the living springs on the farms—once their greatest comfort and satisfaction—are fast drying up.

THE ONTARIO TREE-PLANTING ACT

of last session is being adopted in many sections, and the resultant lines of trees will do much to provide their timber. The roadside wind-break grows well, indeed—densely branching of head, and excellent of shade—but the forest is the genial birth-place of the forest tree, which grown upwards by the forcing process of its own attempts to reach the light above the high, over-shadowing foliage, raises rapidly, tall, straight, and almost branchless, till you will often see healthy and beautiful young trees sixty or seventy feet in height, while but five or six inches through at the ground. These tall columns, then in a few years your cord-wood, your rail-cuts, your anything that the forest will give you. But the tree of the roadside would have never done this.

ENLARGE INTO YOUR BARN-TIMBER,

There are yet small patches of timber dotted over the whole of Ontario, and every one of these, or a portion of them would from an excellent nursery for forest re-production. It is but a small matter, it is but, if it could be done, to induce farmers to fence in and utterly exclude cattle from a portion of their woodlands, and a young growth will presently cover the soil.

Though every leaflet be now bitten to the ground, in four years you will have a miniature forest, perhaps a couple of yards in height—little basswoods with trunk of red and olive, small beeches, white and blue, black ashes, now beautiful stems of yellow-grey, white oaks, now rods of mottled whalebone, elm, hickory, maple, and many another one, all crowding together, emulously rising to the light above. These also preserve the older forest for at the edge these trees will be like those of the roadside, grown in the sun, immovable by the wind, and acting as wind-breaks to the inner trees.

For the continuance of the forest in a re-productive state, the presence if this

UNDERGROWTH IS ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY.

Without it, grass gets in, overspreads the earth, injures the larger trees and prevents the growth of any small ones. The drying winds sweep through the bush, the roots are loosened, the soil appears to shrink from them, and many trees die.

If every farmer could be induced to preserve rigidly in forest but ten acres of his hundred, besides what bush (it need not be much) he wishes for his cattle, the good resulting to himself and to the country would be incalculable; for a few acres of a dense forest thickly undergrown holds and distributes much moisture, and is of more climatic benefit, especially to the surrounding farms, than a far greater surface of woodland dried almost to provincial by the destruction of its undergrowth. For his own benefit, too, in the face of necessity, especially in the too probably coming scarcity of timber, it should be remembered that this patch will yield yearly a of many descriptions which may be taken from it, tree by tree, as needed, and yet the remaining bush be all the better.

Yet, in the face of this knowledge, we find many farmers, instead of preserving, destroying their last patch. In this state of affairs it is probable that legislative aid could do much. It is indeed the farmer's own interest to preserve a portion of the forest, but he is apt to think that the principal benefits to be obtained can only be secured by co-operation of many individuals—a co-operation which legislation, even if only permissive, would give him.

A REMEDY SUGGESTED.

Let us think of the matter in which this might be secured. A suggestion has been made that a government enactment might permit any farmer to say to the assessor, "I intend to fence and keep cattle from this piece of bush, five, ten, fifteen acres or so, as he might choose." Let it be then, the duty of the assessor to look at this portion every year. As long as it is properly fenced and cattle excluded let that portion be free of taxes; but if the farmer choose not to preserve it, or to clear it down, let it be understood that he is to pay the back taxes which were remitted to him. As years pass on each owner of such a portion would find himself bound, under penalty of a considerable sum, to preserve this portion properly, and yet he could by no means grumble, for he would actually have received the money. He would in fact have accepted a certain amount on condition that he should do himself good with it.

This would, of course, slightly reduce the amount of assessable property in each township, but nobody would, at this day object; in fact every one who understands the matter would be well pleased if the Government had in each township for this very purpose, which reserved land would not have been assessable. Then, in the newer and better forested sections, the assessment on wild land is light; while in the older counties, nearly, at the end of their timber (for how they could replace their barns, many people write to me, they do not know), the benefits resulting would almost immediately be very great. We should shortly have on every farm, a reservation closely resembling the original forest, retentive of moisture, prolific of timber, and of great climatic benefit to the country at large.

RESERVED SOME TIMBER LAND

GENERAL BENEFIT.

These reservations would answer another purpose, which would please many who remember former Ontario, who like life in a landscape, and do not care to see the country becoming destitute of every untamed thing, game, and many birds beneficial to the farmer would live there, a thing which, in the absence of undergrowth, but few of them can do.

I would be much obliged if any persons throughout the country would write me their views concerning the suggestion, or any changes they think might profitably be made in it, and I would be much gratified to see the subject discussed at the various county councils, as I intend shortly to take the liberty of asking the various county authorities their opinions on the matter.

The various departments of the Government are busily engaged in preparing their annual reports for presentation to Parliament.

All the men on the Canada Pacific railway works at Winnipeg, Man., are now working over time. The engineers have all returned except five.

It required two engines to take the newspaper train from Toronto to Hamilton Wednesday morning, and slow time was made at that.

A little daughter of J. H. Smith, a saloon keeper at Montreal, was fatally suffocated by smoke. She died on being taken into the air.

Robert Edgar, tried at Hamilton for manslaughter, was sentenced to five years. He had ill-treated his wife, from the effects of which she died.

Another Montreal company, La Compagnie de Prets et Credit Foncier, has been forced to go into liquidation. Mismanagement is the cause. The liabilities are heavy.

A huge leather medal hangs in the post-office at Preston, Ont., which is to be presented to the retiring council of that town for its mismanagement of work on the streets.

The gas suddenly gave out in Guelph on Monday night at 9 o'clock, the pipes being frozen. There was great confusion at the rink and other places where large bodies of people were gathered.

It is thought that the choice for the command of the Wimbledon team lies between Lieut-Col. Ouimet, M.P., of the 65th Batt., and Lieut.-Col. Bond, of the Prince of Wales Rifles, Montreal.

Protests are to be entered at London, Ontario, against the return of C. S. Hyman, mayor-elect, and Messrs. G. S. Birrell, John Labatt, and C. B. Hunt, aldermen.

Wm. Tweedle, an old and respected farmer of Stoney Creek, got up sick, and reaching for his medicine got hold of a bottle of ammonia instead. He suffered great pain, and his recovery is not looked for.

Despatches from various parts of Canada show that the snowstorm is very general. Most of the railroads running north are blocked, and the others experience great difficulty in running, all being hours behind time.

The Dominion Government is communicating with Earl Granville in respect to arranging a basis for the negotiation of a reciprocity treaty with the United States Government, including a settlement of the fisheries question.

The annual report of the chief emigration agent has been forwarded to the Department of Agriculture. The information contained therein is kept from the public until such time as it appears in the minister's annual report.

The new Canada Pacific car shops at Winnipeg, Man., have just been completed. The machinery is constantly arriving, and as soon as it is fitted up 200 men will find employment. The works will be lit by electricity.

A London telegram to a Winnipeg capitalist announces the floating of the Red River Valley Colonization Company's stock. The company was chartered the last session of the Local Legislature, for the purpose of settling vacant lands in the vicinity of Winnipeg.

Wm. and John Sherock, brothers, last week started from Clayton for their home on Howe Island, near Kingston. On the way they became separated. The next day William's dead body was found frozen stiff, and John is so badly frozen that his life is despaired of.

The premises of Samuel Cheer, oyster dealer, Day & Weller, butchers, P. G. Komp, harness maker, and Mrs. Sutherland, at Brighton, Ont., were visited by fire on Tuesday. Loss, $3,000. Mrs. Sutherland's daughter had a very narrow escape.

A traveller gives some experience he had in the Ottawa district. He took five hours to drive seven miles to a station on the Canada Pacific railway, and then the railway took ten hours to do a journey to Montreal that is timed to take an hour and three-quarters.

The volume of civil service statistics just issued shows that salaries paid to private secretaries of ministers vary from $200 to $800. Hon. John Henry Pope only allows his private secretary $200, while Sir Charles Tupper's receives $800. Mr. McLelan also authorizes his son to draw a like sum.

On Tuesday morning No. 1 express coming eastward on the Grand Trunk railway dashed into the rear end of a freight train at a place east of Point Edward, wrecking nine freight cars and badly damaging the express locomotive. The accident occurred through the engineer not being able to see the order board, owing to the blinding storm.

A boy aged twelve has just been returned to the Guthrie Home, London, Ontario. He was sent to Windsor to work for a milk dealer, who set him sawing wood and kept him out of doors until both his hands and feet were badly frozen. The lad can neither touch anything nor stand upright, and perhaps will have to have his feet amputated.

Several tests of electric light have been made in the House of Commons and Senate, and were witnessed by Sir Hector Langevin, Minister of Public Works, and others. Both companies, the United States electric light company and the Edison light company, were willing to give a public test, but the Government objected.

Dear Sirs,—I have been a sufferer from Costiveness, Sick Headache, and Loss of Appetite for many years. felt always tired, so that life was a burden and seemed dark to me. I have had medicial attendance, and have tried almost all the advertised remedies, but without effect. A number of my neighbours, who had used your Fountain of Health, urged me to give it a trial, three bottles of which made me feel like a new woman. MRS. BALL, 547, King street, Toronto. 3-2t

WHAT A HUSBAND SHOULD DO.

He should resolve, when intending to take a friend home to dinner, to send word to his wife about it in time.

He should try to walk with the baby at night, and not be discouraged by a cooling sense of spottiness.

He should resolve to eat his dinner pleasantly, even if it is a little cold through his having kept it waiting half an hour.

He should resolve to give his wife a ten dollar bill occasionally, and insist that she spend it on herself as she pleases. Cut this one out.

He should resolve to kiss his wife occasionally and compliment her. A wife is never too old or too plain to appreciate such courtesies from her husband.

He should resolve, when in difficulty, to consult his wife about the matter, and in nine cases out of ten he will wonder that he allowed himself to be so troubled.

He should resolved to curtail his liquor and tobacco expenses one-half, and give the saved amount to his wife for certain little things which will add so much to her comfort and happiness.

He should resolve to speak pleasantly to his children when arriving home at night, and if he should indulge in half an hour's romp with them before they go to bed he and they will sleep all the better for it.

Mothers! Mothers!! Mothers!!!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere. 25 cents a bottle.

Plain Truths!

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible, if disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known and the highest medidical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the Iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS will thoroughly and quickly assimulate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth cause headache or constipation and is positively not injurious.

St. Johnsbury, Vermont Oct. 21st 1883.

For six years I have been a great sufferer from blood disease, dyspepsia and constipation, and became so debilitated that I could not retain anything on my stomach, in fact life had almost become a burden, and when hope had almost left me, I was induced to give SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS a trial I am now taking the third bottle and have not felt so well in six years as I do at present.

MRS. S. L. MOORE.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS effectually cures dyspepsia, indigestion and weakness, and renders the greatest relief and benefit to persons suffering from such diseases as kidney and liver complaints, dyspepsia, indigestion etc.

PETERBOROUGH, JAN. 17, 1884.

Hawkins Hoisted.

After long delay justice has been done. The election court has declared James Hawkins not entitled to the seat in the House of Commons, as representative of Bothwell, in which James Stephens placed him. Judgment was given last Saturday, and Judge Galt decided that Hon. David Mills had a majority of nine votes, and that he is the member for Bothwell. He is now entitled to take the seat which James J. Hawkins has usurped during one session of Parliament. The Tory journals rejoice in the fact that the Judges, during the trial exonerated the returning officer, who practically gave the seat to Hawkins, from any blame in the matter. They and Mr. Stephens are welcome to all the comfort derivable from their Lordship's decision, which must have been a great surprise to Stephens himself. The Judges had only the evidence presented before the election court. It is hard to prove to a Judge's satisfaction, that the man's intentions were corrupt, but being satisfied to a moral certainty is quite different. It can be no contempt of court to say that the Tories of Bothwell believed that Mr. Stephens acted corruptly, for, did they not make him a present of a valuable watch in recognition of the "great services he had rendered the Conservative party?" If he had returned Hawkins because he had a majority of votes, he would not have been entitled to a watch and chain for doing what the electors gave him to do. But it is plain that the Tories made him the present because he had gone out of the way of his official duties, to do the party a service by returning a man who had not a majority of votes, and keeping out of his seat the man who had. The whole act of the presentation was an imputation on Stephen's honesty in the matter, and was in as execrable taste as would be the presentation by the Liberals (if they were fools enough to do it), of a testimonial to Judge Galt for the "great services," he rendered the Reform party by declaring Hon. David Mills the legal representative of Bothwell. The decision of the Court is another snub to Sir John, who did all in his power to keep out of the House, Hon. David Mills, whose ability, debating power, and knowledge of Sir John's department at that time, made him a thorn in the Premier's flesh. Mr. Mill's constituency was disgracefully gerrymandered, and a pliant and subservient tool of Sir John's was selected as returning officer; but the voice of the people has been heard in spite of these efforts, and Hon. Mr. Mills has for the rest of the Parliament a place on the floor of the House, which was usurped last session by J. J. Hawkins, who had no more right to it than if he had never been a candidate.

Dominion Parliament will meet on Thursday, 17th inst., and the Ontario Legislature, on Wednesday, 23rd inst., It is said that the Quebec Legislature will meet on the 15th February.

Dr. Samson has been nominated in the Reform interest to contest the representation of Kent in the House of Commons, from which Mr. Smith, the Tory member, was removed by the Election Court.

Failures and the Panacea.

In spite of the boasted power of the so called national policy, the failures of the past year are the greatest known since 1879. In 1878 the number of persons who failed was 1,667, and the amount for which they failed was $23,-908,677. In 1879 the number of failures reached 1,902, and the amount $29,-347,937, the largest amount known in the history of this country. It was the first year of the high tariff, which no doubt aggravated the evils which depression had occasioned. In 1881 the failures were 635 and the liabilities $5,-751,000. This was the lowest point reached, and during the present year, the first year of a depression, the amount has increased nearly threefold. It will not be said that the present Tory Government aimed to bring this state of things about, but there is no doubt that they are chiefly responsible. They told so plausible a "yarn" respecting the perennial prosperity that would follow the adoption of their fiscal policy, that the people were gulled—assurances that were repeated only last session by Sir Leonard Tilley, who madly prophesied seven years of continuous prosperity. Believing the false prophets the business men of Canada have indulged in mad speculation, all the while encouraged by the government, and the result is that we are brought face to face with a financial outlook that gives grounds for the utmost uneasiness. If the Tory leaders, can, as they asserted was in the power of any government, bring good times, now is the time for them to act. Next spring a large amount of paper given by merchants and business men will mature, and they will be saved a great deal of worrying and anxiety respecting their ability to meet it if Sir Leonard Tilly will wave his wand and beckon back business to the channels from which it has departed. The N.P. has had a fair trial, and the people would like to see fulfilled one of the promises made by its advocates in 1878, and reiterated in 1882. Amongst the many failures that startle the country the failure of the N. P. is the most conspicuous.

A Political Dodger.

The Review with its usual servile fidelity to its party, and in anxiety to hide the results of the mischievous policy of the Government, in a recent issue sought to belittle the grievances of the farmers of Manitoba, and calls the demands of the people for their rights a "political dodge." The Review made such insinuations in face of facts that could not be ignored, and to show how little it knew of the situation, or how little it cared to present the facts in their real light, we quote the words of one of the Review's own friends. In a public speech Hon. Mr. Norquay, Tory Premier of Manitoba, says:—

"At present we are on the verge of a crisis from which we must emerge in better or worse condition. Not, however, until the masses were made aware of the situation would they stand up and maintain their rights. The time had arrived when Manitoba must be placed on a level with the other provinces of the Dominion.' He then referred to the cry that Manitoba was petted and pampered, and said:—'Not one new arrival had been in the Province three months, before he who was before loud in its denunciations was equally loud in demanding its rights. The eyes of the farmers had been opened, and they were alarmed at the prospect. These matters would shortly engross the attention, not only of the Provincial, but also of the Dominion Parliament.'"

Will our contemporary accept Mr. Norquay as authority, and recall its insults to the farmers, whose attempts to get redress are denounced as "a political dodge?" No, our down street journalistic political dodger will continue to defend the mistakes and mischief of its political masters, that are retarding the settlement of the great North-West, and are provoking discontent and hardship where peace and prosperity should reign.

Forest Preservation.

To every reflective mind, the subject of forest preservation and restoration will present itself as one of most vital importance. Believing it is one that should receive the immediate and practical attention of every farmer in the country, we publish elsewhere in this issue a letter on the subject from Mr. R. W. Phipps. The arguments advanced by Mr. Phipps to show how seriously the destruction of our forests affects our climate, our crops and, of course, our general prosperity, are worthy of being seriously pondered. Old settlers can bear testimony to the great changes that have taken place in the climate and condition of the country, along with the destruction of the forest. How the rainfall has become more scarce and more uncertain; how high winds have become more prevalent; how springs and water courses have dried up, and how, with as careful tillage, crops are less certain than they were years ago. That these changes are due to destruction of forests is undeniable. The mischief has been already done, and now it is to be seen that it goes no further, and that what has been done may be repaired. Mr. Phipps suggests a remedy, which seems to have the double merit of economy and simplicity. We earnestly commend it to the attention of the County Council at its coming session, and to all possessing woodlands capable of restoration and improvement.

When the Mail condescends to inform THE EXAMINER that Sir Charles Tupper, as High Commissioner, has "other and more arduous duties to perform than making speeches," we stand corrected; the drawing of his "arduous" salary of ten thousand, is the chief of "his arduous duties" in connection with his office.

The Reform Boom.

Macdonaldism is on the wane, and Reform is receiving substantial encouragement. Within the past few months the Reform party has enjoyed a series of triumphs, gained at the expense of the Tory party. A few instances will show that the Liberal star is in the ascendant. The decision of the Privy Council, sustaining Mr. Mowat's contention in the Hodge liquor license case, is a great triumph for provincial rights, as championed by the Reform party; and another triumph, a little before, was the decision in the Mercer Escheat case. Both decisions upheld Mr. Mowat's contentions as a constitutional lawyer, and both were dead against Sir John. The redemption, by a Reformer, of Lennox, a constituency where Sir John, in 1882, got 250 majority; the seating of Mr. Mills for Bothwell, and the unseating of Mr. Hawkins; the redemption of West Middlesex in the Local, and the retention of it in the Federal Legislatures; the unopposed return of Sir Richard Cartwright in South Huron, and the unopposed return of Hon. Mr. Ross, Provincial Treasurer, show that Liberal principles are progressing, and that the departure of the Mowat Government from power is farther away than ever. These omens of success are cheering, and indicate that the reign of corruption, favoritism and false promises cannot be permanent.

The Second Pacific Scandal.

The Globe formulated its indictment of the Tory Government and the Section B. contractors of the Pacific Railway in no hesitating nor uncertain terms. It boldly asserted:

"We can prove that this engineer (Jennings) was sent off accordingly to the Pacific coast; and that, while he was away the public interests were grossly sacrificed by having classifications of the work made, under which an unjust loss to the country will arise of $280,000.

"We can show it up any time, that on settling up last spring the Government took $300,000 of work off the hands of these favorite contractors, and allowed them fifteen per cent. or $120,000 for prospective profits on it, when at the same time the contractors claimed that, by reason of bad management, they were losing money on the rest of the work. On the same occasion these lucky contractors were provided with $70,000 for their old plant, and had a claim for unliquidated damages left open against the Government as a useful mine to be worked at election times in the interest of the Government candidates."

These are strong words, and any Government that will passively lie under them and make no attempt to deny or disprove them, must have a terribly guilty sense of their truth and a terrible dread of having them investigated, lest more damning details be brought out.

Editorial Notes.

Mr. Devine, who was defeated in the last contest in South Refrew, has been again nominated for the Local Legislature by the Conservatives to oppose Dr. Dowling, the Reform candidate. A gang of bribers and corruptors of the electorate, loaded with bribery funds, similar to that which operated in recent by-elections, is swarming South Renfrew already; but it is to be hoped that the vigilance of Reformers that defeated their base tactics elsewhere, will be effective in promoting a free choice of a representative by the electors.

In 1882 Sir John was in a tremendous way to hurry on the general elections—which he did do a year before the regular time. But a change has come and now he is afraid to open a constituency. The Lennox and Middlesex elections going against him have opened his eyes. Mr. H. M. Gault, one of his supporters and member for Montreal west, wants to resign; he has made two trips to Ottawa to get Sir John's consent, but that has been withheld. Sir John dare not open a constituency even in a manufacturing centre, and court a defeat of his protective policy.

The revenue for the last six months of 1883 was $2,000,000 less than for the same period of 1882; and yet, the burden of taxation remains the same, while the expenditure is increasing. With a decreasing revenue, an increase of expenditure, hard times coming on apace, grinding taxation crushing the the people, business failures growing, and reckless extravagance and corruption infesting every department of the administration, it is time for the people to seriously consider whether the present Government has not out-lived its usefulness, if, indeed, it ever had any.

Judge Ross, of Ottawa, has decided that the Government employees cannot be compelled to pay municipal taxes on income. The decision has created a good deal of dissatisfaction. According to this ruling members of the civil service can by their votes have a voice in the spending of the people's money, while they are relieved from paying a cent towards the revenue of the city. This is a monstrous injustice to the poor man, who has to pay taxes to the utmost farthing, to support municipal institutions for the benefit of those with fat offices, light work and immunity from taxation. The law should be changed.

Alderman Boyd, of Loudon, Ont., says that there are 1,400 mechanics out of employment in the city. Taking five as the average household this means that 7,000 mouths are to be filled while no money is being earned. If the Government at Ottawa are not "mere flies on the wheel" they will see that this state of things is remedied. The N.P. advocates promised perpetual prosperity, high wages and constant employment, and that the voice of the pauper should not be heard in the land. The beginning of the end is coming, when the hand of an outraged people will sweep away the refuge of lies, by which the present government imposed themselves and their taxationist policy on a deluded people.

Sir John Macdonald seems determined to force his License Act on Ontario in spite of the decision of the Privy Council that it is worthless. Sir John knows that he is wrong; but he does not like to acknowledge that he is beaten; therefore, he makes a show of intending to enforce the McCarthy License Act. Little cares Sir John how much he unsettles the business of Ontario, how much trouble and anxiety he puts hotel-keepers to. He wants to let himself down easy in spite of whom may suffer. He is playing a bluff game. But he will find that Ontario is not the only Province that objects to being deprived of its rights. Quebec also sees that Sir John's attempt to enforce his License Act is an attack on its rights. Now, Quebec, figuratively speaking, holds Sir John in the hollow of its hand—that is, holds the balance of power, and when it kicks against the McCarthy License Act, as it is certain to do, Sir John will back down.

DELUDED AND STARVING IMMIGRANTS.

There are 88 men, according to the Winnipeg Times (Tory), literally starving in the immigrant sheds in that city. If the local organ wishes the photograph of a starving workman to gloat over it, an application should be made to that quarter. The idea of working people being at starvation's door may be fine merriment for a government newspaper, but, we would imagine, the question is too serious a one to talk so flippantly about. Let the organ get a ring and fatted calf to make merry over, while the poor mechanic and laborer must in many cases be content with a plate of soup made from the crumbs that fall from the tables of the tariff-fed lords.

Perhaps Sir Chas. Tupper, our plenipotentiary at the Court of St. James, who, a few short weeks ago, had it inserted in every paper of importance in the United Kingdom, that there was abundance of employment for workmen of all classes, and great want of railway laborers in Canada, can explain how these men came to be in such a condition in Winnipeg. The Conway street immigrants in Toronto afford another sample, while people would smile at the idea of there being a dearth of workers anywhere. The Canada Pacific must have wanted labour cheap, when they advised Sir Charles Tupper to offer inducements to immigrants, backed by the natural suggestion of the truth of the statements, coming from one in official authority and a member of the Government of Canada. It has been well known for some time, that there was not enough of work for the wage earners already here, and having induced people to leave the comforts of home on false assurances, the least the Government can do is to step in and render these people assistance, even though the whole country has to pay for the stupidity, or something worse, exhibited at headquarters.—Brantford Expositor.

THE KILKENNY CAT STORY.

The story has been so long current that it has become a proverb, "As quarrelsome as the Kilkenny cats," two of the cats in which city are asserted to have fought so long and so furiously naught was found of them but two tails. The correct version of this saying is this: During the rebellion which occured in Ireland in 1798, Kilkenny was garrisoned by a regiment of Hessian soldiers, whose custom it was to tie together in one of their barrack-rooms two cats by their respective tails, and then throw them face to face across the line generally used for drying clothes. The cats naturally became infuriated, and scratched each other in the abdomen until death ensued to one or both of them. The officers were made acquainted with the barbarous acts of cruelty, and resolved to put an end to them. For this purpose an officer was ordered to inspect each barrack-room daily and report its state. The soldiers determined not to lose the daily torture of cats, generally employed one of them to watch the approach of the officer. On one occasion he neglected his duty, and was heard ascending the stairs while the cats were undergoing their customary tortue. One of the troopers seized a sword from the arm-rack, and with a single blow divided the tails of the cats. The cats escaped thro ugh the open windows of the room, which was entered instantly afterward by the officer, who inquired what was the cause of the bleeding cats' tails being suspended on the line, and was told in reply that "two cats had been fighting in the room; that it was found impossible to separate them, and they fought so desperately that they had devoured each other, with the exception of their two tails."

Sweeping Remnant Sale at the Golden Lion!

A REMNANT SALE, TWICE A YEAR, WILL BE ONE OF THE ESTABLISHED CUSTOMS OF THE GOLDEN LION.

All live, pushing Dry Goods Houses must of necessity find themselves with a large per-centage of REMNANTS at the close of each season, which are always valuable to, and eagerly sought after by, housekeepers and Dry Goods consumers generally.

FAIR, VAN EVERY & CO.

Instead, therefore, of keeping these Remnants on our shelves and carrying them over from season to season, we intend turning all our "left-over" goods into cash, and propose offering them to our customers twice a year AT PRICES FAR BELOW their regular Market value.

OUR FIRST JANUARY SALE OF REMNANTS

Is now going on, previous to Stock-taking, and we strongly advise all interested, by all means, to come and secure some of the Cheap Lines before they are all sold.

WE HAVE A GREAT VARIETY, INCLUDING:

Remnants! REMNANTS IN DRESS GOODS, REMNANTS IN CASHMERES, REMNANTS IN MERINOES, REMNANTS IN SILKS & SATINS REMNANTS IN VELVETEENS, Remnants!

CARD OF THANKS

Ratepayers of No. One Ward:

I beg to thank all those who voted for me on Election Day. Although defeated at the polls, I do not consider myself a beaten man, I had the Water Works and Weights and Measures people against me, and other powerful companies, and I think I took a very large vote (176) under the circumstances. In 1882 I came in second with 173, and it is pleasing to know that all my old friends, but two, voted for me, and that I was only beaten by six votes. During the five years I was your Councillor I did not do anything that I am now ashamed of, or that I would not do again.

Your faithful servant,
JOHN McNAUGHTON.

3-1t.

On Next Saturday, 10th Inst.
